General Practitioners

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioner practices there are in each district health authority area. [8497]

Mr. Malone: The available information will be placed in the Library.

NHS Trusts (Wartime Huts)

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS trusts are using wartime huts for patient accommodation. [8501]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available centrally.

Speech Therapists

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many speech therapists per 100,000 population are currently provided for children in (a) Southwark, (b) Birmingham, (c) Manchester, (d) Kingston, (e) Lewisham and (f) England. [8473]

Mr. Burns: The information is not available centrally in the form requested.

The number of speech therapists employed by the national health service hospital and community health services by health authority areas is available from the Department of Health's statistical tables, "NHS Hospital and Community Health Services staff by health authority areas, England 1995"—the latest year available—which are available in the Library. Information on the estimated 1995 population in health authorities is available from the Library in "Office for National Statistic Monitor for Population and Health: Mid-1995 population estimates for re-organised local and health authority areas in England and Wales".

The number of speech therapists per head of population within health authorities should be interpreted with caution because in some cases the population served by the organisations in each authority may be greater than the population of the health authority itself.

Nurses

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the shortfall of hospital nursing staff by NHS executive regional office in each year since 1990. [8474]

Mr. Malone: The national pay review body has considered all the evidence each year since 1990 and has concluded that there have been no general shortfalls of hospital nursing staff.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses (a) entered the profession and (b) ceased to practise in each year since 1990. [8475]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available centrally.

Departmental Staff (Travel Costs)

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on staff travel costs between Richmond house, Whitehall and Quarry house, Leeds in each year since 1992. [8481]

Mr. Horam: The information is not available in the form requested.

Estimated costs of payments for travel between Leeds and London derived from special exercises for the first two periods are:

December 1993–November 1994	860,000
October 1994–September 1995	560,000
April 1995–March 1996	680,000
April 1996–November 1996	280,000

We cannot differentiate costs between Richmond house, Quarry house and other Department of Health buildings in London and Leeds.

National Blood Authority

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much was spent by the National Blood Authority in each of the last three years on (a) conference registration fees, (b) lease cars for senior management, (c) air travel, (d) hospitality and (e) business travel within the United Kingdom; [8483]

(2) how much was spent by the bio products laboratory in each of the last three years on (a) conference registration fees, (b) lease cars for senior management, (c) air travel, (d) hospitality and (e) business travel within the United kingdom. [8484]

Mr. Horam: These are matters for the National Blood Authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact Sir Colin Walker OBE, chairman of the National Blood Authority.

Neo-natal Cots

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many neo-natal cots there were in each hospital trust in each of the last five years. [8489]

Mr. Horam: Information on the average daily number of available beds by broad ward classification for each national health service trust is published annually in "Bed Availability for England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Consultants

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many consultants who practise in the NHS also undertake private work; and what proportion of their time is spent in that private work. [8493]

(2) how many consultant sessions used for treating NHS patients are currently funded by academic institutions. [8480]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is not available centrally.

Water Leakages

27. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated current loss of water in the water supply system in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [7342]

Mr. Moss: Total losses of water in the water supply system in Northern Ireland are currently estimated to be 10.95 cu m per kilometre of main per day.

Terrorism

29. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the capability of the Provisional IRA to mount a terrorist campaign. [7344]

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the current level of IRA terrorist risk. [7329]

Sir John Wheeler: Our assessment is that the Provisional IRA is capable of mounting a sustained terrorist campaign both in Northern Ireland and elsewhere and that there is currently a high risk of attack from PIRA. The security forces remain vigilant to prevent such attacks, and have achieved a number of important recent successes.

Sectarian Killings

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on sectarian killings which have taken place in the last 12 months. [7339]

Sir John Wheeler: There have been 17 murders in Northern Ireland between 10 December 1995 and 10 December 1996 arising from the security situation, of which two are believed to have had a purely sectarian motive. These, like all murders, are cruel crimes without any justification, and the Government condemn them unreservedly.

Every effort will be made to bring those responsible for these and all other crimes to justice. To date, one person has been charged in connection with one of the sectarian murders.

Traffic (Comber)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the last traffic census was conducted on roads leading to Comber, County Down; and what is the volume of traffic on each road at Comber. [8336]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Roads Service under its chief executive, Mr. W. J. McCoubrey. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from G. P. Fraser to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 11 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked the Chief Executive of Roads Service to reply to your question about volumes of traffic on roads leading to Comber. In the Chief Executive's absence I am responding on his behalf.

Roads Service has automatic traffic counters which constantly record traffic volumes on three roads leading to Comber. Traffic information from these counters for 1995 was as follows:–

Location	Average daily traffic flow
A21 Newtownards Road	14,550
A22 Killyleagh Road	6,640
A22 Comber Road, Dundonald	8,840

I hope you find this information helpful.

Manse Road, Castlereagh

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the arrangements for salting Manse road, Castlereagh; what account is taken of whether the road is used by school buses in making such arrangements; what was the cost of salting Manse road (a) in 1995–96 and (b) in 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [8337]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Roads Service under its chief executive, Mr. W. J. McCoubrey. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from G. P. Fraser to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 11 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked the Chief Executive of Roads Service to reply to your question about arrangements for salting Manse Road, Castlereagh. In the Chief Executive's absence I am responding on his behalf.

There are 2 Manse Roads in Castlereagh—the C369 which runs from the Four Winds roundabout to the Ballygowan Road, and the U193 which runs from the Clontonacally Road to the Saintfield Road. During periods of ice and snow the C369 is salted along its entire length together with the section of the U193 from Cadger Road to Saintfield Road. The recent review of the gritted network had no effect on either of these roads.

While school bus routes are not automatically salted Roads Service applies a weighting factor for buses when assessing the traffic flow on each route. By way of illustration, a 40 seater bus is considered equivalent to 20 cars.

The estimated cost of salting these roads was as follows:

Financial year	C369 £	U193 £
1995–96	1,000	680
1996–97 (to date)	380	260

I hope you find this information helpful.

Motor Cyclists

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on changes to driver licensing for motor cyclists in Northern Ireland. [8686]

Mr. Moss: Revised licensing arrangements for motor cyclists are being introduced under the second EC directive on the driving licence. The directive, which applies in Northern Ireland on the same basis as in the rest of the United Kingdom, except where required by existing differences in the two licensing systems, requires member states to have two motor cycle driving licence categories and associated tests. These will come into effect on 1 January 1997 by virtue of regulations made by the Department on 21 November 1996.

The category A test will require a rider to take the driving test on a motor cycle over 120cc but not more than 125cc and capable of a speed of 100 km per hour. On passing the test, a rider will be restricted for two years to motor cycles with a power output of up to 25kW or a power to weight ratio not exceeding 0.16 kW-kg. Thereafter the rider will have access to any size of machine. The existing category A test, which allows a person to take a test on a motor cycle up to 250cc, will continue until 30 June 1997. A rider passing his test on such a machine in this period will have immediate access to any size of machine.

The sub-category A1 test will permit a driving test to be taken on a motorcycle of at least 75cc but not more than 120cc and passing this test will confer entitlement to drive a motorcycle of up to 125cc with a power output not exceeding 11kW.

A motor cyclist who passes the driving test on an automatic or semi-automatic machine will be restricted to similar machines. The minimum age for driving motorcycles will remain 17.

Waiting Lists (Royal Victoria Hospital)

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many patients are on the waiting lists for elective surgery at the Royal Victoria hospital in Belfast. [7322]

Mr. Moss: At 30 September 1996, which is the latest date for which information is available, 7,036 patients were waiting for elective surgery at the Royal Victoria hospital. Of this number, only 226 or 3.2 per cent. had been waiting more than 18 months.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Publicity

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much his Department has spent on promotional or public information campaigns in each of the last five years; and how much he estimates will be spent on these campaigns during the (i) current and (ii) next financial year. [7533]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table

Year	Total spent £
1991–92	17,546,566
1992–93	19,510,968
1993–94	18,333,603
1994–95	20,054,914
1995–96	20,085,672
1996–97	20,209,043

[1] Estimate.

Child Support Agency

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the cost to public funds of his Department's nationwide radio advertisement about the Child Support Agency. [7645]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The only nationwide radio advertisements about the Child Support Agency took place around the time of the agency's launch in April 1993. The cost was £107,746 in 1992–93 and £197,268 in 1993–94.

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many representations he has received on the subject of the reduced earnings allowance; how many of these were in support of the allowance; and if he will make a statement. [7904]

Mr. Roger Evans: As at 30 November, the Department had received 263 letters from 155 hon. Members and approximately 300 from individual members of the public and organisations.

The letters generally have expressed concern or sought clarification.

National Insurance

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the yield of an additional (a) 0.5 per cent. and (b) 1 per cent. on the top rates of national insurance contributions paid by (i) employees, (ii) employers and (iii) the self-employed, at 1995–96 prices and contribution rates, in the years (1) 2000–01, (2) 2010–11, (3) 2020–21 and (4) 2030–31. [8250]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table:

Great Britain accruals £ billions in 1995–96 prices

Government Actuary's Department.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of additional national insurance contribution revenue from employees and employers by 1995–96 if both the lower and upper earnings limits for contribution had been increased annually in relation to earnings since 1979–80. [7897]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Great Britain (accruals)

£ billions

	Loss in revenue
1990–91	–0.85
1991–92	–1.15
1992–93	–1.45
1993–94	–1.55
1994–95	–1.90
1995–96	–2.35

Notes:

1. Assumes that contracted-out rebates in respect of occupational pension schemes apply between the revised lower and upper earnings limits.

2. Assumes that the three brackets for employers contributions increase in line with the rise in the revised lower earnings limits.

3. The overall effect would have been a loss of revenue.

Disability Discrimination Act

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans his Department has to monitor the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 in relation to indirect discrimination in the provision of goods and services. [7891]

Mr. Burt: The Disability Discrimination Act addresses indirect discrimination in two ways. First, the Act states that discrimination occurs when a service provider, for a reason which relates to a disabled person's disability, treats him less favourably than he treats or would treat others to whom that reason does not or would not apply, and that treatment cannot justified.

Secondly, the Act requires service providers to make reasonable adjustments to make their services more accessible to disabled customers.

The Government will monitor the Disability Discrimination Act in order to assess its effectiveness in combating discrimination. The National Disability Council will also advise the Government on matters relevant to the elimination of discrimination and the operation of the Act.

War Widows

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will make a statement on his future plans for rent allowances for war widows; [8660]

(2) how many war widows currently receive rent allowances. [8661]

Mr. Heald: The abolition of war widow's rent allowance for future claims has been proposed in a package of simplification measures. On 26 November 1996 a letter giving full details of the proposals was sent to all members of the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions who have until 17 January 1997 to respond. No decision will be taken on this proposal, or any other, until the views of the committee have been fully considered. Existing recipients of rent allowance will be unaffected by the proposal. At the end of September 1996, 1,060 war widows were receiving the allowance.

War Pensioners

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many war pensioners have been affected by the changes in war pension entitlement to pensioners with less than 20 per cent. hearing impairment since 1993. [8664]

Mr. Heald: From April 1993, the date from which figures are first available, to the end of September 1996, a total of 57,176 claims have been received in which the assessment of disablement due to noise induced sensorineural hearing loss was assessed at less than 20 per cent.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of reports from the War Pensions Agency on the success rate of the Royal British Legion in its dealings with war pensioners; and what action he has taken on the basis of his assessment. [8731]

Mr Heald: The War Pensions Agency does not maintain records on the success rate of the Royal British Legion in its dealings with war pensioners.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will now publish in full the revised medical opinion that determined the Government's proposals to alter in future the rules governing hearing loss deterioration in respect of war pension entitlement. [8732]

Mr. Heald: A copy of the texts of the medical advisor's address to the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions and the medical references on which the change in medical opinion is based have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the changes he announced on 5 December to war disability pensions will be implemented. [8848]

Mr. Heald: There are two entirely separate and unconnected war pensions changes. The first is a package of measures to simplify the administration of war pensions which, subject to consultation with the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions, will be introduced from 1 April 1997. The second is a change in medical opinion on the effect that noise induced sensorineural hearing loss has on a subsequent hearing loss due to other causes such as aging.

Assessments made from 16 December 1996 will be based on the new medical opinion. Awards made prior to that date on the basis of the old medical advice will continue. The Secretary of State and my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary have decided to use the powers in the dispensing instruments to make awards on the old basis, where claims had been made before 1 March 1996, the date by which the departmental medical adviser considers medical opinion had conclusively changed.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what medical peer review procedures were applied to proposed changes to the rules for war disablement claims for deafness. [8729]

Mr. Heald: The previous war pensions approach to noise induced sensorineural hearing loss was exceptional in recognising the possibility of an increase in service-related hearing loss after removal from the service noise. To confirm or refute that approach, the scientific and medical basis of noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss was investigated first by studying the scientific literature and then by consultation and discussion with some of the UK's leading clinicians and audiological scientists.

Experts included departmental regional consultants appointed by the Department's chief medical adviser on the basis of their authority, and senior academics of the Medical Research Council Institutes of Hearing at Nottingham and Glasgow, and audiological scientists at the Institute of Sound and Vibration Research, Southampton.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy not to introduce the new rules for war disablement claims until the peer review of the new medical opinion for deafness has been published. [8730]

Mr. Heald: Where medical matters need to be determined on a claim for, or application for review of, an award of a war disablement pension, the law requires that part of the claim to be determined by a medical officer appointed by the Secretary of State. The medical officer certifies whether the disablement is due to or aggravated by service in the armed forces, and the degree of disablement due to service. The Secretary of State is required to make payments of war disablement pension in accordance with the certified level of disablement.

It was previously thought that a service-related noise-induced hearing loss could increase the effect of a subsequent hearing loss due to other causes such as aging. Authoritative medical opinion is now that such interaction does not occur and that the maximum effect of service-related hearing loss is at release from service. Medical officers must apply current medical opinion. For them to do otherwise would be unlawful.

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will place in the Library a copy of the medical evidence on which he has based his decision no longer to grant higher rates of the disability pension in respect of deafness to those already in receipt of war benefit. [8875]

Mr. Heald: A copy of the texts of the medical advisor's address to the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions and the medical references on which the change in medical opinion is based have been placed in the Library.

Housebuilding

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the impact on employment levels in the housebuilding sector of changes in the national insurance status of operatives; and if he will withdraw the booklet, "Are Your Workers Employed or Self-Employed?" [8325]

Mr. Heald: A wide range of representatives bodies from the construction industry, including from the housebuilding industry, were involved in joint consultations with officials from the Department and the Inland Revenue prior to publication of the booklet, which was at the request of the industry. We have continued to consult across the industry and, in response to the issues they raised, published on 19 November a joint Inland Revenue and Contributions Agency press release, copies of which are available in the Library. This detailed the further steps that were being taken to help the construction industry to review the employment status of their workers in line with the same general rules that apply to other industries. We have no plans to withdraw the booklet.

Mr. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when next he intends to meet housebuilders to discuss the implications of the change in the status from self-employed to employed for national insurance purposes of operatives in the housebuilding industry; and what assessment he has made of the costs which this change will impose on the sector. [8324]

Mr. Heald: My hon. Friends the Members for Fylde (Mr. Jack) and for Hertfordshire, West (Mr. Jones) and I met representatives of the construction industry on 21 November. The housebuilders were invited to be present or to ensure that their views were represented. The further steps the Inland Revenue and the Contributions Agency are taking to help the construction industry review the employment status of their workers were discussed and welcomed. Departmental officials will continue to liaise with the industry and keep me advised.

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the average pensioner's income for each year since 1979 by decile group. [8802]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table.

Notes:

1. The estimates refer to all pensioner units. A pensioner unit is defined to be either a single person over state pension age, or a couple where the head, assumed to be the man, is aged over state pension age.
2. The deciles used are the 10 deciles of the before housing costs equivalised net income distribution for all pensioner units. The estimates of average income for each decile are estimates of the median before housing costs unequivalised net income of that decile. This methodology is that used to create table 5 of the Pensioners' Incomes Series publication. This methodology may create an anomaly as some pensioner units will be in a different equivalised decile from their unequivalised decile, thus making it possible, although unlikely, for a higher equivalised decile to have a lower median unequivalised income.
3. Due to the use of estimates of unequivalised income, variations in the median income of deciles may reflect changes in the relative numbers of single pensioners and pensioner couples in that decile. As an example, the median income level of a decile may rise due to an increase in the relative numbers of pensioner couples in the decile rather than a general rise in income levels.
4. Estimates for 1979, 1981, 1987, 1988, 1989, 1990, 1992 and 1993 refer to that particular calendar year. The estimate for 1990–91 is an estimate based on data from both 1990 and 1991, as part of the 1991 data had to be omitted due to an error arising from the delayed issue of community charge bills. The estimate for 1994–95 refers to the financial year.
5. Estimates from the pensioners' incomes series are subject to wide margins of error. In particular comparisons of estimates from different years may not give reliable results. It is therefore recommended that estimates are used to indicate trends over time and that year on year comparisons should be avoided.

1. The estimates refer to all pensioner units. A pensioner unit is defined to be either a single person over state pension age, or a couple where the head, assumed to be the man, is aged over state pension age.
2. The deciles used are the 10 deciles of the before housing costs equivalised net income distribution for all pensioner units. The growth rates for each decile are based on estimates in July 1994 prices for the calendar year 1979 and the financial year 1994–95 of the median before housing costs unequivalised net income of that decile. This methodology is that used to create table 5 of the Pensioners' Incomes Series 1994–95 publication. This methodology may create an anomaly as some pensioner units will be in a different equivalised decile from their unequivalised decile, thus making it possible, although unlikely, for a higher equivalised decile to have a lower median unequivalised income.
3. Due to the use of estimates of unequivalised income, variations in the median income of deciles may reflect changes in the relative numbers of single pensioners and pensioner couples in that decile. As an example, the median income level of a decile may rise due to an increase in the relative numbers of pensioner couples in the decile rather than a general rise in income levels.

Benefits Agency (Doctors)

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to change the criteria currently used for the recruitment of doctors employed by the Benefits Agency. [9137]

Mr. Burt: I have today approved proposals for the Benefits Agency to trial new arrangements for the recruitment of full-time medical advisers involved in dealing with claims for incapacity benefit. Operational experience so far has indicated that experience in particular areas of medicine is as important as more general clinical experience of the assessment of capacity for work. The initiative will provide the agency with the opportunity to test out the possibilities of operating some flexibility to ensure a continuing capability to recruit appropriate medical support.

The trial will take place in Newcastle and in the Manchester and Merseyside area, and involve the recruitment of up to 20 doctors. Applicants will be required to have three years post-registration experience, including at least one year in general practice and at least six months experience of psychiatry or rehabilitation-occupational health medicine rather than the current five years general practice experience currently required. All doctors recruited under the trials will undergo the current rigorous training and approval process and receive additional monitoring as part of the evaluation of the trials.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Maize

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what actions he is taking to ensure that genetically modified maize is not marketed in the United Kingdom without the express authority of the Committee on Novel Foods and Processes. [8879]

Mrs. Browning: Decisions on marketing of genetically modified organisms are taken on an EU-wide basis. The advice of the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes was taken into account in formulating the United Kingdom position on genetically modified maize and has been passed on to the EU Scientific Committee for Food which is currently advising the Commission on this matter.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures the Government are taking to ensure that genetically modified maize is not mixed with normal maize gluten feed; and if he will make a statement. [8880]

Mrs. Browning: Importers and distributors of maize and maize products have been informed that it is currently illegal to market unprocessed genetically modified maize in the United Kingdom.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Employment Schemes

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people after leaving (1) national training awards, (2) new workers scheme, (3) North Norfolk Action, (4) other education initiative, (5) old job training scheme, (6) open learning credit, (7) other occupational training, (8) open tech learning, (9) one-to-one, (10) placing, assessment and counselling teams, (11) placing and advisory service, (12) Professional and Executive Recruitment, (13) promotion of tourism scheme, (14) Prince's Youth Business trust, (15) Remploy, (16) Skill Choice, (17) sheltered-supported employment, (18) Small Firms Advisory Service, (19) small firms employment subsidy, (20) small firms information service, (21) small firms loan guarantee scheme, (22) small firms service, (23) single regeneration budget, (24) special schemes for disabled, (25) Skills Training agency, (26) special temporary employment programme, (27) short-time working compensation scheme and (28) training access points, (a) went into employment and (b) went on to further schemes, including those who left before completion of the scheme, in each year of each scheme's operation; and what type and level of qualification each leaver obtained for each year of the scheme's operation up to the latest available year for which data are available. [8741]

Mr. Paice: The information requested can be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Voluntary-aided Schools

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she will announce allocations of credit approvals to local education authorities and capital grant to the governors of voluntary-aided schools. [9401]

Mrs. Gillan: Details will be placed in the Library on Monday 16 December.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Westminster Hall (Official Functions)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee how many official functions were held in Westminster Hall during the past year; at what cost; and if he will make a statement on their purpose. [8845]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: Two official events have been held in Westminster Hall this year. The President of the Republic of South Africa addressed Members of both Houses of Parliament on Thursday 11 July and the Lord Chancellor's annual breakfast, following the judges' service in Westminster Abbey, was held on Tuesday 1 October. The cost to the House of Commons works services vote of the event on 11 July was £48,000.

TRANSPORT

Road Signs

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to commence the upgrading of the primary route road signs within the M25; and what projections he has made as to the cost of the programme. [8419]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 13 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your question on what estimate he has made of the percentage of road signs which need replacement or repair on the United Kingdom primary route network.

The Highways Agency is responsible for the trunk road network in England. We do not have an estimate at any one time of the number of signs needing repair or replacement for the reasons explained below.

Under the requirements of our Code of Practice for Routine Maintenance our maintenance agents (currently over 80 in number) carry out regular inspections of the highway infrastructure including signing and record defects. These defects will be assessed and a prioritised programme of treatments developed. The agents will attempt to coordinate the programme of treatments for small items such as road signs with other works to secure economies of scale and reduce disruption on the network.

From these investigations our agents will produce a rolling programme of works contracts in the form of both maintenance and improvements to effect any necessary restoration of sign quality. On a network of some 6,500 miles these programmes will be updated very regularly. I can say that our budget over the last 5 years for all road sign and road marking maintenance, but not improvement, has varied between about £10m and £16m per year.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a statement on the condition of road signs in the United Kingdom for which his Department has responsibility; [8417]

(2) what representations he has received in the last year on poor and inadequate road signing in the United Kingdom for which his Department has responsibility. [8421]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mrs Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 13 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your questions on the condition of road signs on trunk roads in England and representations received in the last year on poor and inadequate road signing.

Signs on the Trunk Road network in England are provided to high standards set out in our Design Manual for Roads and Bridges and proactively maintained to similarly high levels defined in our Code of Practice for Routine Maintenance. In general the condition of our signs is good, they play a full part in the delivery of a safe and efficient network. Safety is always the Agency's foremost consideration and even though funds are limited our maintenance and improvement programmes afford safety measures the highest priority.

Representations about the condition or adequacy of signs may be made to the Agency or directly to our maintenance agents. These are varied and cover both general and local issues. The total number of representations to the Agency this year on all signing matters is approaching some 200, but the number cannot be confirmed precisely at short notice. All of them are investigated promptly and acted upon as necessary. Issues shown to relate to safety are given immediate attention, other longer term measures are prioritised according to wider programme and funding considerations.

Public Transport

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what notification he receives on the progress of co-ordination provided for in section 88 of the Transport Act 1985. [8803]

Mr. Watts: None. The exercise by local authorities of their duties under section 88 of the Transport Act 1985 is not subject to a requirement to report to my Department.

Local Roads and Transport (Capital Allocation)

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will announce the allocation of capital resources for expenditure on local roads and transport in England for 1997–98. [9469]

Sir George Young: A total of £746 million will be allocated to local highway authorities and passenger transport authorities for capital expenditure on their transport infrastructure in 1997–98. This is in addition to the sums provided for transport schemes that are successful in the capital challenge competition.

Full details of the allocations will be placed in the Library of the House on Monday 16 December.

Vehicle Inspectorate

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library copies of the report produced as part of the prior options review of the Vehicle Inspectorate, evaluating its performance since its establishment as an executive agency, and copies of the revised framework document. [9431]

Mr. Bowis: I have arranged for copies of these documents to be placed in the Library.

ENVIRONMENT

Oil Pollution

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library copies of the documents submitted to, and discussed by, the Paris Commission on oil pollution discharges from drilling production and storage offshore oil platforms since its establishment; and if he will make a statement on United Kingdom compliance with its agreements on oil pollution. [8355]

Mr. Clappison: The Paris Commission has been in existence for 18 years and in that period has considered a very large volume of papers on the subject of the offshore oil and gas industry. It would cost an unreasonable amount to identify and copy them all. I am placing in the Library a copy of the section on "Oil" of the "Paris Commission Procedures and Decisions Handbook," as amended up to 1994, together with copies of subsequent relevant decisions: this describes the work of the commission in this area.

As far as I am aware, the United Kingdom is in compliance with its international obligations on oil pollution.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he received a copy of the 1994 United Kingdom radioactive waste inventory from Nirex; and what assessment his Department has made of the environmental matters contained in the inventory. [8687]

Mr. Clappison: The Department of the Environment commissions the United Kingdom radioactive waste inventory, jointly with Nirex, to support the development of radioactive waste management policies.

Hillingdon Unitary Development Plan

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has received from Hillingdon borough council to his objections to the council's proposed changes to the Hillingdon borough draft unitary development plan. [8898]

Sir Paul Beresford: I understand from Hillingdon council that it will not pursue its proposals for the Sidmouth drive recreation ground, Ruislip, but that it is still considering the other representations that it has received. Hillingdon is arranging a local inquiry to hear objections to the new issues raised by the proposed modifications, including objections to the housing proposals.

Housing Registration

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the model registration scheme referred to in section 65 of the Housing Act 1996. [9194]

Mr. Clappison: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the member for Scarborough (Mr. Sykes) on 26 November, Official Report, column 147.

Challenge Funding

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce the winners of the pilot scheme for challenge funding of local authority capital expenditure. [9585]

Mr. Gummer: Of 326 bids submitted earlier this year, 189 bids involving 217 authorities have been selected for support. The challenge fund of £600 million will bring in £1,200 million from other sources, including almost £700 million from the private sector, to spend on local authorities' highest priority capital projects.

Details of individual successful bids will be placed in the Library of the House on Monday 16 December and my right hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration will also be writing to all hon. Members in England.

Mr. Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made with the single regeneration budget challenge fund; when the outcome of round 3 will be announced; and if he will make a statement. [9586]

Mr. Gummer: The single regeneration budget challenge fund has been a great success and is a tribute to the enthusiasm and commitment of the local partnerships which have put forward bids and are running schemes. For the third round, there has been an even higher standard of bids than previously in both the quality of the proposals submitted and how they are presented. This is reflected in a success rate of nearly 60 per cent. for those submitting final bids. In particular, about a quarter of recommended bids have come from previously unsuccessful partnerships.

Taken together, schemes supported by the three rounds of the challenge fund will transform hundreds of localities for the better, and substantially improve the quality of life for local communities. Projected results for the lifetime of the 550 schemes supported by rounds 1 to 3 include more than 650,000 jobs created or safeguarded, more than 500,000 people trained and obtaining qualifications, more than 90,000 business starts, more than 250,000 dwellings built or improved and more than 40,000 voluntary groups supported.

The challenge fund has continued to encourage local partnerships. I am particularly pleased that the voluntary sector and local communities are increasingly involved in challenge fund schemes. This is partly a result of efforts by Government offices for the regions, strengthening the national bidding guidance and the dissemination of information through organisations such as the Community Development Foundation, the National Council for Voluntary Organisations and the Commission for Racial Equality.

The challenge fund aims to make public and private resources work together more effectively to support local strategies for regeneration. Regeneration needs to address local needs and opportunities across the board. I have therefore been impressed by the way in which bidders have linked their bids to other regeneration activity, notably that supported by training and enterprise councils, European structural funds, the national lottery and regeneration programmes such as English Partnerships and urban development corporations. Bidders have also taken account of the Government's competitiveness and sustainability agendas and local strategies, including those relating to housing and health.

It is important that challenge fund schemes deliver the results and benefits which they have promised to local people. For that reason, we shall continue to place a strong emphasis on the effective management and monitoring of schemes, introducing improvements where necessary.

There will be a fourth round of the SRB challenge fund in 1997–98 along the same lines as earlier rounds, with guidance to bidders issued in the new year.

For the third round, there were marginally fewer final bids compared with round 2—310 as against 329—but marginally more successful bids—182 as against 172.

The cost to the SRB of the 182 recommended bids is currently estimated at £44.8 million in year 1, 1997–98, and over the lifetime of bids, that is up to seven years, would amount to £897 million overall. These figures are provisional and are subject to detailed confirmation following further discussions between GORs and successful bidders.

There is a good spread of successful bids across the SRB objectives, with most bids having multiple objectives. It is noteworthy that over 90 per cent. of the bids are focused on employment and education objectives, over 70 per cent. of the bids have economic development as an objective, 53 per cent. of bids include elements focused specifically on ethnic minority communities, nearly 50 per cent. of bids have housing as an objective and 65 per cent. of bids have crime prevention and community safety as an objective.

The attraction of private investment is an important objective of most SRB challenge fund schemes. As with earlier rounds, successful round 3 bids stand to attract about £2.50 in private investment for every £1 in challenge fund support.

Effective involvement of a range of key partners is at the heart of the challenge fund approach. There is private sector involvement in 83 per cent. of recommended bids, with local authority and training and enterprise council involvement at 91 per cent. and 81 per cent. respectively. Voluntary sector involvement in bids has continued to increase: it now stands at 59 per cent. There has also been a very large increase in the number of bids that include promotion of initiatives of benefit to ethnic minorities as an explicit objective, up to 53 per cent. from 37 per cent. in the second round. In addition, given the location of bids, ethnic minorities will benefit from a much higher proportion of bids even though they are not specifically intended as the beneficiaries.

Most bids are concentrated on small areas, with 59 per cent. covering areas with a population under 25,000. This is slightly up on the first two rounds of the challenge fund, and chimes with the advice given in the bidding guidance to concentrate resources in order to make a significant impact. About 5 per cent. of bids are region-wide.

Details of the 182 individual bids which have been successful in round 3 will be placed in the Library of the House on Monday 16 December and my right hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration will also be writing to all hon. Members in England.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Women

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he is taking to measure and evaluate the effects of his Department's policies on women. [5476]

Mr. Bates: In July of this year, the model guidance on policy appraisal for equal treatment was revised and circulated at Cabinet level for Departments to adapt to their own circumstances. The guidance has been circulated to all senior officials in my Department with a view to incorporating it in the policy development process.

DEFENCE

Overseas Training Deployments

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for Royal Air Force deployments to Yuma Marine Corps air station, Arizona. [8596]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 12 March 1996, Official Report, column 509.

Air Training Corps

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria in respect of (i) numbers of actively attending (ii) personnel and (iii) other factors must be met by (a) the Air Training Corps and (b) the Army Cadet Force in order to qualify for capital grants to maintain and improve facilities. [8086]

Mr. Soames: In order to qualify for capital grants to maintain and improve facilities, cadet force units must be viable, or in the case of new detachments or in certain other cases, be expected to become viable. A viable unit would normally have between 25 and 30 cadets attending, but in rural communities where no other youth activity exists a figure of approximately 12 is acceptable. Each unit must have at least one qualified adult instructor, and must have an adult female on the staff if female cadets are enrolled. The expenditure would be approved only if it would result in the accommodation occupied being suitable for training—with all the necessary facilities, such as classrooms, toilets and secure storage—accessible to cadets, and complaint with the requirements of both health and safety and fire prevention regulations.

Danish Tour Guide (killing)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what compensation has been paid by Her Majesty's Government to the family of the murdered Danish tour guide in Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [8716]

Mr. Soames: Issues of individual privacy arise in this tragic case, but people have the same compensation rights against the Ministry of Defence as they have against any other employer or organisation.

Boarding School Allowance

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the total number of (a) officer ranked personnel and (b) other ranked personnel currently serving in Her Majesty's armed forces whose children benefit from the service children's boarding school allowance. [8946]

Mr. Soames: The total average number of officers whose children benefited from boarding school allowance in the academic year 1995–96 was 4,340; the number of other ranks for the same period was 2,525. Detailed statistics for the current term can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Income Support

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the additional administrative cost if all retirement pensioners eligible for income support in 1995–96 had successfully claimed it. [8249]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information requested is not available. The additional administrative cost of processing and maintaining income support claims, had all pensioners chosen to take up their entitlement in 1994–95, is estimated to lie between £29 million and £39 million.

War Disablement Pensions

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the respects in which the new medical information advanced as the basis for the change in the rules governing war disablement pension in respect of deafness differs from that set out in the sensorineural hearing loss medical appendix, paragraph 12.2, issued by the Department of Social Security; and when that appendix was first issued. [8948]

Mr. Heald: Medical appendices summarise the consensus of current medical opinion on the particular topic. They emphasise the aetiology of the condition. That on sensorineural hearing loss, issued in 1993, to which the question refers, describes the various causes of that condition, including noise. Paragraph 12.2 refers to the process by which noise damages hearing. It states that once exposure to excessive loss has ceased, the hearing loss resulting from that noise exposure does not of itself worsen.

The appendix does not, however, deal with the effect of a noise-induced hearing loss on any subsequent hearing loss, which is the subject of the recent development in understanding. It was previously thought that an existing service-related noise-induced hearing loss could intensify the effect of a subsequent hearing loss due to other causes, such as aging. Authoritative medical opinion is now that such interaction does not occur, and that the effect of a service-related noise-induced hearing loss is at its greatest at release from service.

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many war disablement pensioners have had their entitlement in respect of deafness (i) reduced and (ii) ended to date; and what estimate he has made of the number whose entitlement will be (a) reduced and (b) ended in (1) 1996–97 and (2) 1997–98 in consequence of the rate changes announced on 5 December. [9032]

Mr. Heald: No war pensioner has had, or will have, his pension reduced or ended as a result of the change in medical opinion announced on 5 December 1996.

Maladministration

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on arrangements which have been made to allow the consideration of financial redress where maladministration has occurred. [9584]

Mr Roger Evans: The Department of Social Security is committed to making its services more responsive to the needs of its customers, operating to set standards and offering redress where appropriate. Since 1977 the Department has operated arrangements whereby financial redress can be made to a customer who has experienced a pecuniary loss through maladministration. These arrangements have been periodically updated to reflect the changes to both the structure of the benefit administration and the expectations of the public. A major revision of the arrangements has recently been completed which has embraced the principles contained in Office of Public Service guidance to Departments and agencies and which responds to concerns raised by the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration.

The revised arrangements provide the basis for a consistent approach to complaints across agencies. The guidance adopts a more sympathetic attitude to cases where official error has occurred but no financial loss has been experienced and ensures more equitable treatment in the consideration of compensation payments when moneys properly due have been delayed. The arrangements continue to strive to make allowances for the differing circumstances of each case.

The arrangements will take effect from 1 January 1997. A copy of "Financial Redress for Maladministration," which provides detailed guidance, has been placed in the Library.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current level of arrears in maintenance payments remaining to be collected by the Child Support Agency; and if he will make a statement. [7909]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Elfyn Llwyd, dated 12 December 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency arrears.

The amount of Full Maintenance Assessment arrears remaining to be collected by the Child Support Agency at 30 November 1996 was 433,774,491. Of this amount, approximately £262 million is the subject of agreed arrangements for repayment by instalments, which are closely monitored. The Agency is making every effort through the full range of powers available to it to secure payment of the balance.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the accuracy rate of the assessments made by the Child Support Agency in 1994; and what is the latest available figure. [7908]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Elfyn Llwyd, dated 12 December 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency accuracy rates.

The accuracy of assessments has been the subject of a Secretary of State target since 1995/96 only; exact information for 1994 is not therefore available. Estimates suggest however, that the Agency's accuracy rate at that time was around 50%.

For the current year, the target is to achieve a continuing improvement so that in at least 85% of cases checked in March 1997, the assessment value will be for the correct amount to the last penny. In October 1996 the accuracy rate was 77%, and the Agency remains on course to meet the target.

I hope this is helpful.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Compensation Awards

Mr. Morley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the average time currently taken by courts to collect and pay compensation awards to those victims who have been awarded them; and what proposals he has to review current procedures. [8881]

Mr. Streeter: Information concerning compensation awards is not collected separately. The average time taken by magistrates courts to collect all money due to the court, including fines, fees, costs, compensation awards and contributions to legal aid, at the end of 1995 was 236 days.

My Department chairs an inter-agency working group which was set up May 1995 to identify urgently ways of improving the enforcement of financial penalties including fines, compensation orders and confiscation orders. The group issued good practice guidance on enforcement procedures to the courts in July this year. The group is continuing its work and further guidance will be issued where appropriate.

(3) what medical conditions were to be met by the injections given to Gulf war service men and classified as secret. [8451]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 10 December 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the memorandum that I placed in the Library of the House on Tuesday 10 December, which gives details of the Government's vaccination policy during the Gulf conflict.

Correspondence

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to answer the letter from the hon. Member for Walsall, South of 9 September regarding Mr. M. M. Doyle. [8699]

Mr. Soames: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State will write to the hon. Member about his constituent's case.

Land Access Booklet

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning his Department's booklet on access to Ministry of Defence land; how many copies of this booklet were produced; what was the total cost of production; for what reasons it was withdrawn; and if he will make a statement on his future plans for the booklet. [8790]

Mr. Soames: A booklet which encourages public access to the defence estate and highlights several walks was issued by my Department earlier this year; 250,000 copies were produced at a total cost of £66,000. It has since been discovered that the third map in the Longmoor section of the booklet incorrectly indicates that two footpaths are available to the public at all times. This is not the case, and in view of the potential implications for public safety the booklet has been withdrawn temporarily. Arrangements are in hand to amend all remaining stocks and to advise members of the public of this, providing amended copies of the booklet where appropriate. Action has also been taken to place additional warning signs at the site to advise members of the public of the correct position.

Radiation Experiments

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment his Department has recently made of experiments in respect of the effects on human health of exposure to (a) strontium 85, (b) isotopes of radioactive iodine, (c) palladium 103, (d) chromium 51, (e) niobium 92M, (f) barium 133 and (g) plutonium, conducted by (i) his Department, (ii) the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority and (iii) the United States Government in conjunction with the United Kingdom Government, since 1956; and if he will make a statement on his Department's current evaluation of research on the effects of radiation exposure on human health; [8614]

(2) what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the radiotoxicity of (i) methyliodide, (ii) polonium and (iii) calcium 45 and their effects on human health; and if he will set out the conclusions of such experimental research conducted to assess the risks of these radioactive materials. [8611]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member.

Operation Purple Star

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many British merchant vessels were chartered by Her Majesty's Government for Operation Purple Star; and if he will make a statement. [4333]

Mr. Soames [pursuant to his reply, 26 November 1996, c. 194]: I regret that due to a typographical error the word "No" was omitted from the start of my answer. Despite the rest of the answer it was not absolutely clear, therefore, that no British registered merchant vessels were chartered by my Department to take part in Operation Purple Star.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Peace Process

10. Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met the Irish Government to discuss the peace process in Northern Ireland. [7325]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I accompanied my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister for part of his meeting with Mr. Bruton and Mr. Spring on 9 December.

12. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on recent progress in the all-party talks. [7327]

16. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the latest position in the peace process. [7331]

28. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the latest situation relating to the peace process. [7343]

Mr. Ancram: Having agreed the rules of procedure and agenda for the opening plenary the talks are now addressing the issue of decommissioning. We recognise the sensitivities of the issue for participants, but believe early agreement on this and the start of substantive discussions, are now urgent.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the use of referendums in the peace process. [7336]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: The Government have given an undertaking to put the final outcome of the current negotiations to the people of Northern Ireland for approval in a referendum. The Northern Ireland (Entry to Negotiations, etc.) Act 1996 includes provision for such a referendum.

Farming Job Losses

11. Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the number of jobs lost in the farming industry in Northern Ireland as a consequence of the bovine spongiform encephalopathy crisis. [7326]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: The industry provides the equivalent of 15,900 full-time jobs in beef cattle enterprises. There are a further 2,850 in beef and sheepmeat processing, and 2,000 to 3,000 in ancillary industries.

The export ban has had a greater effect on the Northern Ireland industry than anywhere else in the United Kingdom, because 55 per cent. by volume of Northern Ireland beef used to be exported outside the UK. It is not, however, as yet possible to estimate the jobs lost by this cause.

Beef Production

13. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the value of beef production in Northern Ireland in 1995–96; and what percentage of this total was sold outside the United Kingdom. [7328]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: In 1995, the last full year for which figures are currently available, the farm-gate value, including subsidies, of beef cattle sold in Northern Ireland was £414.4 million. It is estimated that 56 per cent. of this total was sold outside the United Kingdom.

Interrogation Procedures

15. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent discussions he has had with (a) the Royal Ulster Constabulary and (b) the Lord Chief Justice on reforming interrogation procedures at Castlereagh; and if he will make a statement. [7330]

Sir John Wheeler: Officials in the Northern Ireland Office have been working with the RUC on producing a draft code of practice in connection with the silent video recording of interviews held with terrorist suspects, and we expect to go out to public consultation shortly.

Beef Exports

17. Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken since 14 November to secure the removal of the ban on Northern Ireland beef exports. [7332]

Mr. Ancram: All Agriculture Departments have been working on the details of a certified herds scheme along with European Commission officials.

BSE-free Herds

18. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to introduce BSE-free certified herds in Northern Ireland. [7333]

Mr. Ancram: Certified herds are specifically referred to by the Florence agreement as a stage in the removal of the export ban. The Agriculture Departments are actively exploring possibilities for a UK-wide certified herds scheme with the Commission so that we can submit formal proposals shortly. We will be pressing for these to be discussed at the earliest opportunity.

Security Situation

19. Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the security situation. [7334]

26. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the current security situation in the Province. [7341]

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the hon. Member and my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Sheffield, Hallam (Sir I. Patnick) earlier today.

Fish (Lough Neagh)

20. Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the redd count of migrating fish in the Lough Neagh catchment area for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96. [7335]

Mr. Ancram: The redd count for salmon in the Lough Neagh catchment area in 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96 was 42, 73 and 55 respectively. It is not possible to provide migratory trout (dollaghan) redd counts as these are indistinguishable from resident brown trout redds.

Irish Language

22. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has for improving the educational materials for use in teaching the Irish language. [7337]

Mr. Ancram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 14 November 1996, Official Report, column 345.

Inward Investment

23. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about inward investment in Northern Ireland. [7338]

Mr. Ancram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 14 November, Official Report, columns 342-43. There has been no significant change in the position and I remain confident about increasing interest shown in Northern Ireland as an investment location.

Elective Surgery

25. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the current waiting times for elective surgery for patients in the Eastern health board area. [7340]

Mr. Moss: The following table records the number of those waiting for elective admission at 30 September 1996 in surgical specialties with trusts located in the Eastern health and social services board area together with the time spent on the waiting list at that date.

Time on waiting list for surgical specialties

Administration Costs

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a breakdown by civil Department of gross running costs, indicating (a) current expenditure on running costs and (b) running costs as a percentage of each Department's total expenditure. [8272]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 9 December 1996]: Running costs provision by departmental grouping for 1990–91 to 1998–99 is shown in table 3.7 of "Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 1996–97, Cm 3201. Table 2.2 details all expenditure within the control total for each departmental grouping. More detailed information can be found in individual departmental reports, Cm 3202–20.

"Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 1997–98" and 1997 departmental reports, due to be published in March 1997, will contain updated information.

Housebuilding

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the costs for (a) employers and (b) employees in terms of (i) taxes and (ii) administrative and payroll costs, in the housebuilding sector of the ending of the self-employed status of construction operativesfor Inland Revenue purposes. [8321]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 12 December 1996]: Self-employed status has not been ended for construction or building workers. As in all industries, whether someone is employed or self-employed depends on the terms and conditions of the engagement. Contractors will continue to be free to take on workers as self-employed where the terms and conditions of the engagement reflect genuine self-employment.

Mr. Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for how many years construction operatives in the house building sector have been considered to be self-employed for taxation purposes; when, by whom and for what reasons the decision was taken to change that status; and if he will make a statement. [8322]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 12 December 1996]: Whether someone is employed or self-employed depends on the terms and conditions of their engagement. This has always been a matter of general law and applies in the same way to the construction industry as it does to all other industries. The primary responsibility for deciding employment status rests with contractors who engage workers. Construction industry representatives expressed concern about the difficulties sometimes met in establishing the employment status of those working in that industry and the implications of this for tax and national insurance. They asked for help with employment status in the industry. In response, the Inland Revenue and Department of Social Security published leaflet IR48, 'Are Your Workers Employed or Self-employed?' This gives guidance to contractors to help them with the question of whether their workers are employed or self-employed.

Public Sector

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the figures upon which each line in chart 1 on page 100 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" is based. [7222]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 2 December 1996]:

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he intends to reply to the letters dated 9 August, 12 September and 24 October from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Dr. S. Ala-ut Dun. [7287]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 3 December 1996]: I sent a reply on 11 December 1996.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were local authority capital receipts in each year from 1979–80 to 1995–96 in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland both in (i) nominal terms and (ii) 1996–97 prices. [7823]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 6 December 1996]: The data requested are given in the table:

WALES

Children in Care

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the average annual cost of taking a child into local authority care. [8352]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The costs of taking a child into care will include a number of elements, not all of which are necessarily classified in the same way by different local authorities. The average costs for placements may be estimated by taking expenditure throughout the year reported by local authorities and dividing by the average number of children looked after in these placements at the start and end of the year. The latest available average costs calculated on this basis are £6,500 for foster placements and £19,800 for residential and other community placements.

Small Rural Schemes

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he plans to announce his decision on the arrangements for the transfer of funding for small rural schemes from the Welsh Development Agency to local authorities. [9464]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: My right hon. Friend announced in March as part of the Rural White Paper, "A Working Countryside for Wales," the Government's intention to transfer funding for small rural schemes from the Welsh Development Agency to local authorities. In September we issued a consultation paper on the proposed arrangements; we received 17 responses, most of which welcomed the proposal.

I have considered the various points made during consultation and decided that £5.4 million will be allocated to the eligible local authorities in 1997–98.

Those authorities are: Isle of Anglesey county council; Carmarthenshire county council; Conwy county borough council; Denbighshire county council; Gwynedd county council; and Pembrokeshire county council.

I have also decided that for 1997–98 the agency will retain £1.4 million of the £6.8 million being transferred in order to meet commitments to the Welsh national botanical gardens and to continue to support the Leader and Interreg II European programme groups. As the agency's commitments start to unwind from the end of 1997–98, an increasing amount will be available to local authorities.

In order to claim the funds, each local authority will need to develop an appropriate scheme which embodies the challenge principle, encourages the levering-in of private sector money and supports local partnerships in local communities.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Mineshafts

Mr. Barnes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he plans to respond to the Trade and Industry Committee's seventh report, Session 1995–96, on former mineshafts, HC 495; and if he will make a statement. [8942]

Mr. Page: The Committee published the Government's response as an appendix to its second special report on 30 October.

Clean Coal Technology

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for East Antrim (Mr. Beggs) of 4 December, Official Report, column 1035, if he will list the 43 companies referred to and the projects in which they have taken part. [8530]

Mr. Page: The following tables set out the 43 companies that have a significant involvement in the clean coal technology programme and the projects in which they have taken part.

Notes:

(a) For ease of reference the projects are grouped under sub-programme technical areas as follows:

0. Collaborative agreements

1. Coal Exploration and Extraction

2. Coal Preparation

3. Coal Handling and Supply

4. Coal Combustion in Conventional Utility Power Generation

5. Advanced Power Generation

6. Other Coal Conversion and Utilisation Processes

7. Technology Transfer and Commercialisation

(b) The list of projects does not include those undertaken directly with universities or where the Department is participating directly in collaborative agreements with overseas organisations. In the latter case UK industry is actively involved in the agreements advising on the work programmes and evaluation of results. These agreements include the International Energy Agency's IEA clean coal centre and coal combustion sciences agreements.

Inward Investment

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of inward investment in each year since 1985 was due to the acquisition, takeover or merger of a United Kingdom company by an overseas investor. [9078]

Mr. Greg Knight: The information is as follows. Source: United Kingdom Balance of payments, "the Pink Book" 1990, 1994, 1996.

Year	Per cent. acquisitions in inward investment
1986	23.2

Year	Per cent. acquisitions in inward investment
1987	31.7
1988	26.2
1989	31.7
1991	52.8
1993	51.6
1995	60.1

Although the percentage fluctuates from year to year, reflecting the economic cycle, the flow of total inward investment in 1995 is four and a half times that of 1985; the latest OECD figures show that in 1994 the UK had one third of all inward investment in the EU.

Crown Post Office, Dennistoun

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade for how long the Crown post office in Annfield place, Dennistoun, has operated. [8072]

Mr. Page: I understand from the Post Office that a post office has operated in Annfield place since 1 April 1936.

Mr. Martin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the turnover for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96 at the Crown post office in Annfield place, Dennistoun. [8070]

Mr. Page: Turnover figures for individual post offices are commercially confidential.

Mr. Martin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many customers used the Crown post office in Annfield place, Dennistoun in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96. [8071]

Mr. Page: I understand from the Post Office that the weekly average number of customers at Duke Street post office has been

1996: 7,018.

Mr. Martin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Crown post office at Annfield place, Dennistoun, is wholly owned by Post Office Counters Ltd. [8103]

Mr. Page: I understand from the post office that Duke Street post office at Annfield place is wholly owned and operated by Post Office Counters Ltd.

Dounreay

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received in the last year concerning environmental risks posed by the management and disposal of radioactive waste at Dounreay. [8676]

Mr. Page: In the last year my Department has received about 150 letters expressing concern about environmental issues at Dounreay.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what safety and environmental audits of radioactive waste management at the Dounreay nuclear plant have been carried out. [8675]

Mr. Page: The safety and environmental impact of radioactive waste management at Dounreay is subject to continuous review by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority. With respect to audits conducted by the independent regulators, the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate and Scottish Environmental Protection Agency, I refer to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 13 November, Official Report, column 229–30.

Oil Pollution

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many oil exploration and drilling installations and platforms operating under licence in each offshore block have deposited oil spill contingency plans with his Department; and if he will place a sample contingency plan in the Library. [8363]

Mr. Page [holding answer 10 December 1996]: My Department currently has 77 oil spill contingency plans from operators of offshore installations. Although this number may seem small when compared to the number of offshore installations operating on the United Kingdom continental shelf, some plans cover more than one installation. It is a requirement of the development approval that an acceptable oil spill contingency plan is in place before an installation can produce oil.

As each plan relates to the specific circumstances it is to address it is difficult to identify a representative "sample" plan. However, I will place in the Library of the House, a copy of the oil spill contingency plan from BP Operating Company Limited on the Foinaven field development with its consent.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the impact on the marine environment of oil spills and discharges from offshore oil platforms since the publication of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution's eighth report on oil pollution of the sea, Cmnd. 8358. [8360]

Mr. Page [holding answer 10 December 1996]: My Department has a research and development budget which it uses, in conjunction with other Government Department's and the oil and gas industry, for environmental projects. The most recently completed project was a study into the effects of drill cuttings piles, a copy of which I will place in the Library of the House.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many reports of oil discharges from licensed offshore platforms were made in each year since 1979 to Her Majesty's Government, by the appointed offshore installations manager. [8356]

Mr. Page: Figures relating to the number of oil discharges from offshore installations reported to my Department from a variety of sources, are published annually in the "Energy Report", copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

My Department maintains a record of the reports from installations which reported an oil spill, but this report need not be made by the appointed offshore installation manager. The records do not always record the status of the reporter.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many prosecutions for the discharge of environmentally hazardous toxic substances under health and safety at work legislation have been brought against operators of offshore installations on the United Kingdom continental shelf since 1990. [8361]

Mr. Page [holding answer 10 December 1996]: My Department is not responsible for the prosecution of offences under health and safety at work legislation.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many vessels are currently on standby to respond to oil spill incidents from our near offshore oil platforms in (a) the North sea, (b) the north Atlantic and (c) Cardigan bay; and what was the cost of maintaining these vessels in each of the last three years. [8362]

Mr. Page [holding answer 10 December 1996]: There are currently six dedicated oil recovery vessels which are employed to respond to oil spill incidents from or near offshore oil platforms on the UKCS. Four vessels are dedicated on field in sensitive areas—Cardigan bay and the Moray firth—and two are roving vessels which routinely patrol the UKCS. In addition, many of the installation standby vessels are equipped to respond to small spills.

Costs are attributable to industry and are therefore not readily available.

Nuclear Plants

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals he has received from British Energy relating to plans to construct new nuclear plants in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales after 2006. [8673]

Mr. Page: None. Any applications that come forward for new stations over 50 MW would require consent under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 and, as with other forms of generation, the applications for consent would be considered on their individual merits.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what his policy towards the future of the nuclear industry and the construction of new nuclear power stations in (a) Scotland, (b) England and (c) Wales.[8462]

Mr. Page [holding answer 11 December 1996]: Nuclear power has to compete with other forms of generation in the electricity market to meet the needs of its customers at commercial prices. Any proposals by British Energy for new nuclear power stations will therefore be a matter for the company and its shareholders. Such proposals, if over 50 MW in capacity, will also require consent under section 36 of the Electricity Act and, as with other forms of generation, the applications for consent will be considered on their individual merits. Applications in Scotland would be considered by the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Radiological Testing

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to establish an inquiry into the scope and consequences of Her Majesty's Government's programme of radiological testing conducted by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority since 1957. [6791]

Mr. Page: None. I am satisfied that the level of radiation received by the volunteers involved in the programme of radiological research conducted by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority was negligible in relation to the average exposure to natural background radiation.

HEALTH

Consultants

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much the NHS has spent on the services of Andersen Consulting in the last five years; and on what main tasks the consultants were employed; [6548]

(2) how much the NHS has spent on the services of KPMG in the last five years; and on what main tasks the consultants were employed. [6547]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not collected centrally.

NHS Executives

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the chairs of regional national health service executives whom he has appointed; and in each case (a) the past national health service appointments which they held, (b) the interests which they declared, (c) whether other candidates were considered before their appointment, (d) what independent panel reviewed their nominations, (e) what nomination he made to such panels and (f) what is their current term of office. [8513]

Mr Malone: Information about the previous appointments and declarations of interest of the regional chairmen has been placed in the Library. The following regional chairmen were previously chairmen of regional health authorities and were re-appointed as regional chairmen for two years from 1 April 1996 to March 1998:

Northern and Yorkshire Region: Mr. John Greetham CBE

Trent Region: Mr. Keith Ackroyd CBE

West Midlands Region: Mr. Bryan Baker

Anglia and Oxford Region: Sir Stuart Burgess CBE

South Thames Region: Mr. William Wells.

The remaining regional chairmen were not previously chairmen of regional health authorities and were appointed following an appointment process that included:

a trawl for candidates from serving chairmen and non-executive directors and from other bodies including the National Association of Health Authorities and Trusts, the Institute of Health Services Management, The Trust Federation and the Confederation of British Industry;

Interview of shortlisted candidates by a panel comprising Mr. Alan Langlands, chief executive of the NHS executive, Sir Graham Hart, permanent secretary, Department of Health and Mr. Hector McLean as the independent member; and recommendations by the panel to the Secretary of State.

The Secretary of State did not nominate any candidates. The successful candidates, who were all appointed to 31 March 1998, were:

South and West: Miss Janet Trotter (appointed from 1 April 1996)

North West: Professor Alasdair Breckenridge (appointed from 1 April 1996)

North Thames: Mr. Ian Mills (appointed from 8 July 1996).

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health authorities or their successor bodies met the target listed on page 27 of the ministerial group for energy efficiency annual report 1990–91 in respect of the reduction of their fuel bills; and if he will make a statement. [8697]

Mr. Horam: Figures are not available centrally from which to determine whether any individual health body met the target recommended in the ministerial group for energy efficiency's annual report 1990–91. Returns at the end of the five-year period for the national health service overall indicate that energy consumption has reduced by 11.3 per cent., despite a 17.6 per cent. increase in activity between 1990–91 and 1994–95.

Bypass Grafting (Guidelines)

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if guidelines for angiography, angioplasty and coronary artery bypass grafting are to be published in Britain along the same lines as those to be published in Northern Ireland. [8909]

Mr. Horam: The clinical resources efficiency support team, an independent group established under the auspices of the Department of Health and Social Services in Northern Ireland, is working on draft guidelines on angiography, angioplasty and coronary artery bypass grafting which they hope to have ready in early 1997. We have no firm plans as yet to issue similar guidelines in England.

E. coli Bacterium

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations his Department had with health authorities in Sunderland about the outbreak of E. coli bacterium in 1995; what advice was offered; and if he will make a statement. [8949]

Mr. Horam: None. This was a local outbreak managed by the local outbreak control team. Under the Food Safety Act 1990 code of practice No. 16, if it is decided that a complaint or problem is likely to be an isolated incident, action should remain with the local food authority. It is established practice for local authorities to inform the Public Health Laboratory Service of incidents of foodborne illness. The Public Health Laboratory Service was involved in this outbreak and gave advice on the epidemiological investigations.

Mental Health

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients admitted to psychiatric hospitals remained there for (a) one week or less, (b) under one month, (c) under three months, (d) under six months, (e) under one year and (f) under five years for the period 1985 to 1995. [8258]

Mr. Burns: The duration of stay of psychiatric patients in national health service hospitals at the point when they were either discharged or died is shown for available years in the table.

Estimated discharges and deaths from NHS hospitals by length of stay[1]

[1]Figures may not add due to rounding. Figures for 1985 and 1986 relate to calendar years. Data collection systems changed from April 1987 to a financial year basis: reliable data are not available for 1987–88 and 1988–89. Due to changes in data collection methods and NHS re-organisation information for 1989–90 and subsequent years may not be directly comparable with data for 1986. Similarly, data for 1991–92 and subsequent years may not be directly comparable with data for 1989–90 and 1990–91.

SCOTLAND

Lottery Tickets (Sales to Children)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many retailers have been prosecuted for selling *(a)*lottery tickets and (b) scratch cards to children in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [8203]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not separately identifiable in the Scottish Office Home Department's classification of crimes and offences. My noble and learned friend the Lord Advocate is not aware of any such prosecutions having been brought in Scotland.

Sea Lice

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what applications for the use of synthetic pyrethroids for the control of sea lice are currently being considered by his Department. [8179]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: None.

Mr. Brendon Callaghan

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to review the case of Mr. Brendon Callaghan; and if he will make a statement. [8678]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Representations received by the Scottish Office to date which claim that there has been a miscarriage of justice in Mr. Callaghan's case are currently being considered. I cannot, however, give an indication of when the review will be completed as documents are still being lodged on Mr. Callaghan's behalf.

"National Standards on Throughcare"

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will now publish "National Standards on Throughcare" which was issued in draft form on 7 February 1996. [8899]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The revised "National Standards on Throughcare" will be issued in early January.

Enterprise Companies

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the prior options study of Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise, which he announced on 7 February, will be completed; and if he will make a statement. [9465]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The prior options study, undertaken as the first stage of the five-yearly policy and financial management review of Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise, has now been completed.

I have accepted the overall conclusions of the study. Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise will continue as the two national agencies responsible for safeguarding employment, enhancing skills, promoting Scotland's industrial efficiency and competitiveness, and furthering improvement of the environment. A particular strength of the current arrangements is the ability to take an integrated approach, combining economic development, training and environmental powers in pursuit of economic growth.

The review looked at the scope to privatise, contract out or transfer some or all of the functions of the two bodies. A key feature of the present arrangements is that Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise contract out the delivery of more than 80 per cent. of their programmes to the network of local enterprise companies. These are private companies led by local business people.

The review found that these arrangements have been successful in giving employers ownership of the system of training and enterprise creation, by decentralising decisions and resources to local level through a system of strong, employer-led bodies, leading to better and more focused decision taking. These arrangements will continue, and the review recommends that SE and HIE should continue to look for further opportunities to contract out more of their activities.

The review looked at the scope for rationalisation of the two bodies, but concluded that there would be nothing to be gained by a merger of Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise. I expect that the two bodies will continue to co-operate fully, as at present, to reduce unnecessary overlap and avoid duplication of effort.

I am grateful to all those organisations and individuals who responded to the invitation to comment which I issued at the start of this review. The second stage of the review, which will examine systems of financial management and control within the two bodies, will now get under way. Many of the comments submitted in the course of the prior options study will be relevant to the second stage.

Copies of the report of the prior options study will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses and may be obtained from the Scottish Office Education and Industry Department, Room 3-F53, Victoria quay, Edinburgh, EH6 6QQ.

Water and Sewerage Authority Finance

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will announce the external financing limits which will apply to the Scottish water and sewerage authorities in 1997–98, and the following two years. [9466]

Mr. Kynoch: Indicative external financing limits for the three water authorities, after reductions to take account of commutation of debt, were set last year at £163 million for 1997–98 and £157 million for 1998–99. In the light of the recently completed expenditure round the EFL for 1997–98 will remain at £163 million, the indicative EFL for 1998–99 will increase to £187 million and that for 1999–00 will be £223 million.

The allocation of EFLs to each authority in 1997–88 will be: East authority £52 million, North authority £49 million, and West authority £62 million. Indicative allocations for the later years will be given to the authorities later.

Student Grants

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of changes in the student support and tuition fee arrangement for Scottish domiciled students in session 1997–98. [9467]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: I am publishing today the main rates of maintenance allowance payable under the students' allowance scheme and the postgraduate students' allowance scheme, including the rates for those course which do not attract student loans, together with the rates for the various supplementary allowances payable to both undergraduate and vocational postgraduate award holders.

The support available to undergraduate students in 1997–98 through the main rates of maintenance grant and loan, taken together, will be 2.5 per cent. higher than in 1996–97, thus maintaining its value in real terms. Postgraduate maintenance grants and supplementary allowances will be increased by a similar amount.

Tuition fees will continue to be reimbursed to institutions through the student support system on behalf of eligible students. The undergraduate rates will be the same as in 1996–97.

These changes are consistent with those for England and Wales announced by my right. hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment. Details have been placed in the Library.

Hunterston B and Torness Power Stations

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from British Energy concerning the extension of the operating life of the Hunterston B and Torness nuclear power stations; and if he will make a statement. [8460]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 11 December 1996]: None. The continued operation of any United Kingdom civil nuclear installations is a matter for the operator subject to the stringent safety requirements of the nuclear industry's independent regulator, the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Hong Kong and Singapore

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will list the projects currently receiving overseas aid assistance in (a) Hong Kong and (b) Singapore; [8718]

(2) how much (a) bilateral and (b) multilateral aid has been allocated to (a) Hong and Kong and (b) Singapore in each of the last three years. [8717]

Dr. Liam Fox: British bilateral aid to Hong Kong and Singapore, as reported in "British Aid Statistics", consists of colonial pension payments, scholarships under the Commonwealth scholarship and fellow plan and, in the case of Hong Kong up to 1994–95, assistance via the British Red Cross and Save the Children Fund for Vietnamese boat people.

Such aid in the last three years totalled:

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Hong Kong	423	372	130
Singapore	233	225	238

Total multilateral aid, from the European Community and United Nations, in the last three years for which figures are available was as follows:

£000

	1992	1993	1994
Hong Kong	13,300	12,100	11,100
Singapore	700	900	1,200

Of this, the estimated share attributable to the United Kingdom was:

£000

	1992	1993	1994
Hong Kong	1,300	300	600
Singapore	—	100	100

HOME DEPARTMENT

New Constituencies (Boundary Maps)

Sir Terence Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons no official maps of the boundaries of the new West Worthing and East Worthing and Shoreham constituencies are available; and when he estimates his Department will produce them. [8908]

Mr. Sackville: The composition of the new constituencies is set out in the Parliamentary Constituencies (England) Order 1995 and the new boundaries will come into effect at the next general election.

The fourth periodical report of the Boundary Commission for England, published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office—now The Stationery Office—on 6 June 1995, illustrates the commission's recommended boundaries for all constituencies in England. Those recommendations were given effect, without modification, by the Parliamentary Constituencies (England) Order 1995. Maps of the constituencies of West Worthing and East Worthing and Shoreham are found at volume 4 of the commission's report, which is available from the Stationery Office and its accredited agents.

We have no plans for the Department to produce further maps of the new constituencies.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the procedures for interviewing, at Home Office immigration offices, applicants for asylum who are (a) accompanied by a solicitor or adviser and (b) unaccompanied; and if he will make a statement. [8839]

Mr. Kirkhope: The procedures followed for asylum interviews are the same whether or not the applicant is accompanied by a representative.

At the initial screening interview, all applicants are asked standard questions to establish their identity and method of entry to the United Kingdom. During the substantive asylum interview, the purpose of the interview is explained to the applicant, who will then be asked to confirm personal details and to give the interviewing officer as much information as possible about the basis of their claim for asylum. At the end of the interview, the applicant and interviewer will sign the interview notes as an accurate record of the interview and the applicant will be given a copy of the interview notes.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what written information his Department provides to people seeking refugee status concerning the documentation that they need to provide; and if he will make a statement. [8847]

Mr. Kirkhope: Asylum seekers who apply by post are sent a letter inviting them to attend a screening interview and advising them of the documentation they will be required to produce at that interview. Those asylum seekers who apply in person and who do not have the necessary documentation with them are given a copy of the standard invitation letter containing details of the documentation they will have to produce on a subsequent occasion. A new information leaflet on asylum procedures will be introduced shortly.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training is given to staff working at Home Office immigration offices who deal with people seeking refugee status. [8837]

Miss Widdecombe: All new asylum caseworkers attend a two-week induction course which provides specialist training in asylum issues and procedures. After three months in post, staff receive training in the skills necessary to enable them to carry out interviews of asylum applicants. Refresher training, and training in new developments such as legislation, is provided from time to time as necessary.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what checks are made by staff at Home Office immigration offices of the documentation handed in by applicants for asylum to enable mistakes to be rectified. [8836]

Mr. Kirkhope: It is the responsibility of the applicant to supply the correct documentation. Home Office staff are not normally in a position to identify mistakes within documents, other than checking that the document refers to the applicant and not to some other person. If a self-completion questionnaire contains obvious mistakes or discrepancies, these may be pursued with the applicant during the asylum interview.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers have had their applications considered under the short procedure from 30 June to date; and how many of these applications were (a) granted and (b) refused, indicating which countries they were from. [7784]

Mr. Kirkhope: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 6 November, Official Report, column 507, how many asylum seekers have been detained at the point of entry since 1 January; and how many were subsequently held for longer than one month. [7801]

Mr. Kirkhope: It is estimated that 1,530 persons who had sought asylum on arrival in the United kingdom between 1 January 1996 and 5 November 1996 were placed into detention for one night, or longer, during that period.

Further analysis of the information given in the reply of 6 November has led to a downwards revision of the figure of 642 port asylum seekers placed in detention between 1 July and 30 September 1996. It is now estimated that 520 such persons were placed into detention for one night or longer during this period.

The breakdown of those detained during a specific time period, by length of detention, is not available.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff at Lunar house speak foreign languages; and if he will list members of staff who are able to communicate with applicants in languages other than English. [8838]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information requested is not readily available in the form requested and could be collected only at disproportionate cost. However, 42 staff in Lunar house are registered as qualified in at least one foreign language which they may be called upon to use in the course of their official duties. These staff receive a foreign language allowance.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the procedures when an application is made to a Home Office immigration office seeking asylum, with particular reference to the procedures followed once documents have been handed in; and how the applicant is informed of the procedures. [8846]

Mr. Kirkhope: Asylum applicants who submit their applications to the Home Office are required to attend a screening interview in order to establish their identity and method of entry to the United Kingdom. Their fingerprints will also be taken in accordance with the provisions of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993. Once identity has been satisfactorily established, the applicant will be issued with a standard acknowledgement letter confirming their identity as an asylum seeker. If it is not possible to conduct a substantive interview with the applicant about his claim at that time, he will be asked to complete a questionnaire. When the questionnaire has been returned, it will be considered by the caseworker together with any other documentation submitted in support of the claim.

Applicants are informed of the procedures by letter at each stage of their application. A new information leaflet on asylum procedures will be introduced shortly.

Television Licences

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of those committed to prison for television licence fine default in the first seven months of 1996 were women; and how many of these were mothers of children under 16 years of age. [7776]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Audrey Wise, dated 13 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking, how many of those committed to prison for television licence fine default in the first seven months of 1996 were women; and how many of these were mothers of children under 16 years of age.

Provisional information shows that for the period January to July 1996, 65 women were received into prison for defaulting on a fine after conviction for using a television without a licence. No information is available centrally on the number who were mothers of children aged under 16 years.

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were committed to prison for television licence fine default during 1995; what was the average time served in prison; and what was the cost to the Prison Service. [7780]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Audrey Wise, dated 13 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking, how many people were committed to prison for television licence fine default during 1995; what was the average time served in prison; and what was the cost to the Prison Service.

For 1995, 728 persons (493 males and 235 females) were received into prison for defaulting on a fine after conviction for using a television without a licence. The average time served by fine defaulters is one week. Information on the number of fine defaulters received into Prison Service establishments in England and Wales, by offence group, is published in "Prison Statistics, England and Wales" (table 7.2 of the 1995 edition, Cm 3355), a copy of which is available in the Library.

Information on the cost of prisoners according to their type of offence is not collected centrally. The average weekly net operating cost of a prison place in 1995–96 was £465.

Prisons

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison places were available at 1 November; and if he will make a statement. [7906]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Elfyn Llwyd, dated 13 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General, to reply to your recent Question about the number of prison places available at 1 November.

On 31 October 1996, the closest date to the 1 November for which figures are available, the total In-Use Certified Normal Accommodation (CNA) was 53,500, and the total Baseline CNA was 56,835. The Operational Capacity at 31 October 1996 was 58,977, and the Population was 57,587.

In-Use CNA represents the total number of uncrowded places estimated to be available in the estate. Baseline CNA is the total number of uncrowded places, including those which are out of use due to refurbishment. Operational Capacity is the number of prisoners the estate can hold without serious risk to good order, security and the proper running of regimes, and which allows for overcrowding.

Police Custody (Deaths)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training measures have been introduced by the police in England and Wales to prevent deaths in police custody. [8683]

Mr. Maclean: The custody officer training package, which is available to forces in England and Wales, covers all statutory duties and procedures contained within the Police and Criminal Evidence Act, and its associated codes of practice, for dealing with people taken into custody. They stipulate that a police surgeon must be called to any person who appears to be suffering from physical illness or mental disorder; is injured; fails to respond normally to questions; or otherwise appears to be in need of medical attention. In urgent cases, the person must be sent to hospital or the nearest available medical practitioner called.

Persons in detention have to be visited every hour, and those who are drunk at least every half hour. The custody officer may remove any articles of clothing or personal effects if he considers the suspect may use them to cause harm to himself or others.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have been (a) disciplined, (b) suspended and (c) charged with offences relating to the death of a black person in custody since 1990. [8682]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many coroners' inquests into

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Embassies and Consulates (Opening Hours)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are currently the average hours of opening of embassies and consulates in (a) Europe and (b) other countries. [9034]

Dr. Liam Fox: The opening hours for British embassies and consulates in Europe and in other countries are based on local practice.

Normally this would mean at least seven hours on a full working day. Consular offices are normally open to the public for at least five hours on full working days but shorter hours may be implemented where the overall consular workload makes this appropriate.

Consular staff are on call world wide 24 hours a day to help British nationals in distress.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what hours the British consulate in Berlin is (a) open and (b) open to receive calls from British businesses. [9035]

Dr. Fox: The opening hours of the British embassy office in Berlin are 8.30 to 17.00 local with a lunch break between 12.30 and 13.30. The embassy office switchboard is manned continually during open hours.

The consular section of the British embassy office in Berlin is open to the public from 9.00 to 12.00 and 14.00 to 16.00. Consular staff are on call 24 hours a day to help British nationals in distress.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs during which hours of the day United Kingdom overseas embassies and consulates are open for telephone inquiries from United Kingdom businesses. [8950]

Dr. Fox: British embassies and consulates are usually open for telephone inquiries seven hours a day. Details for individual posts can be obtained from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 0171 270 1500.

Consular staff are on call world wide 24 hours a day to help British nationals in distress.

Germany (Departmental Costs)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the annual cost of his Department's presence in Germany in each of the last three years. [9033]

Mr. Hanley: The annual cash operating cost of the missions in Germany was as follows:

Financial year	£
1993–94	19,480,357
1994–95	20,637,195
1995–96	21,722,071

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the annual cost to his Department of the running of the consulate in Berlin. [8951]

Mr. Hanley: The cash operating cost of the British embassy office in Berlin for 1995–96 was £3,780,937.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the present staff establishment of the British consulate in Berlin. [8952]

Mr. Hanley: UK-based staff figures are staff numbers from the authorised establishment but locally engaged staff are calculated in man years.

There are currently 21 UK-based staff working at the British embassy office in Berlin. These are supported by 41.20 man years of locally engaged staff—this figure includes locally engaged staff at the ambassador's residence.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the cost to his Department of all United Kingdom consulates in Germany. [8953]

Mr. Hanley: The cash operating cost of our missions in Germany for 1995–96 was as follows:

British Embassy, Bonn	8,744,134
Embassy Office, Berlin	3,780,937
Consulate-General, Dusseldorf	4,073,785
Consulate-General, Frankfurt	1,656,779
Consulate-General, Hamburg	1,390,261
British Trade Office, Leipzig	38,327
Consulate-General, Munich	1,586,127
Consulate-General, Stuttgart	451,721
Total	21,722,071

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Museum Inventories

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what steps are being taken to check the stock in the collections held by (a) the British museum, (b) the Victoria and Albert museum and (c) the national museums in Scotland and Wales against their inventories; and when these checks were last made. [8200]

Mr. Sproat: The national museums and galleries are accountable for the security of their collections. Under the financial memoranda, the British museum has to keep detailed inventory and stock records. It carries out regular stock-takes of the items in its collections and, as part of this, it is common practice for museum staff to make daily checks of exhibits. Similar arrangements apply to the national museums and galleries of Scotland and the national museums and galleries of Wales.

Crystal Palace National Sports Centre

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the future of Crystal Palace national sports centre. [8332]

Mr. Sproat: The future of the facilities at Crystal Palace national sports centre are, in the first instance, a matter for Bromley borough council and the Sports Council. In taking forward the initiatives in "Sport:

Raising the Game", it will be necessary, however, to consider the future of the national sports centres currently operated by the Sports Council to see how the objectives of the sports policy statement can best be achieved within the resources and opportunities available.

Christmas Expenditure

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much her Department plans to spend on celebrating Christmas and the new year. [7573]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 6 December 1996]: My Department estimates that it will spend approximately £1,850 on celebrating Christmas and the new year. This includes the cost of Christmas cards, the provision of a Christmas tree and a contribution for official guests at the Department's party.

Public Appointments

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many of the individuals appointed by his Department to public positions in the last year were first identified by the public appointments unit. [8541]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 10 December 1996]: Guidance issued by the Office of the Commissioner for Public Appointments requires that candidates for public appointment are selected from a wide field identified through advertising, executive search, consultation with interested bodies and through the public appointments unit as appropriate.

Over the past year the Department of National Heritage has used all these methods and in addition has set up a central appointments unit to maintain a departmental register of those interested in public office.

The Department of National Heritage does not retain records to enable us to identify which of the appointments made over the past year were candidates first identified by the PAU. However, of the 144 people appointed to this Department's sponsored bodies over the past year, 22 were registered with the PAU.

Football Trust Grants

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the safeguards that will be put in place to ensure that local association football clubs will continue to receive grants from the Football Trust; and what alternative funds will be provided from the national lottery. [8312]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 11 December 1996]: The Football trust receives revenue from the spot the ball competition, the home nation football associations and the FA Premier league to help football clubs at all levels. The distribution of grants from these sources is a matter for the Football trust. This money is entirely separate from the pool betting duty concession afforded to the trust to find safety-related works in line with Lord Justice Taylor's report into the Hillsborough disaster for clubs in the FA Premier league, the Football league and the Scottish Football league.

The national lottery has become a major new source of assistance to football at the grass roots and community level—240 football-related projects have received funding of £22 million, making football one of the main beneficiaries of the lottery.

BBC Licence Fee

Mr. Renton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she expects to make an announcement regarding the increase in the BBC licence fee. [8318]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 11 December 1996]: My right hon. Friend hopes to announce later this month what the television licence fees will be from 1 April next year.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to her answer of 21 November, Official Report, column 647, what is the current total of future spending commitments arising under the private finance initiative as a percentage of the Department's discretionary expenditure. [8739]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 12 December 1996]: The Department of National Heritage has no future spending commitments arising from the private finance initiative. Indeed, deals signed to date have generated an annual net positive revenue stream of £0.645 million. The Department's discretionary expenditure is £850 million, so this represents an annual income of 0.08 per cent.

TREASURY

Taxation and Expenditure

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the change in general taxation necessary to fund current levels of public spending, with current borrowing, if the United Kingdom economy had grown since 1979 at the rate established between the end of 1973 and the second quarter of 1979. [7388]

Mr. Waldegrave: The United Kingdom's real gross domestic product grew at an average annual rate of 1.64 per cent. between the third quarter of 1973 and the second quarter of 1979. Since the third quarter of 1979 the annual rate of real GDP growth has averaged 1.9 per cent.

If real GDP had grown since the third quarter of 1979 at an annual rate of 1.64 per cent., other things being equal, the combined impact on tax receipts and spending would raise borrowing by approximately 3½ per cent. of GDP. Therefore, to keep borrowing unchanged, taxation would have to rise by up to 3½ per cent. of GDP. However, there is great uncertainty over estimates of this kind.

Income Tax

Sir Terence Higgins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those countries which do not have an income tax. [8027] terms for an extension, the contract with Group 4 Prison Services Ltd was extended on 31 October for a further 5 years from 6 April 1997.

The price agreed is equivalent to a 7.3% reduction in the current annual cost to the Prison Service and the contract also incorporates a number of new features.

As recommended by the Public Accounts Committee, a Performance Measurement System has been included in the contract. The system encourages an improvement in service levels throughout the next five years by providing more rigorous targets each year.

Group 4 will incur fixed penalties if prisoners escape whilst in their custody.

All risks relating to damage to buildings and plant at the prison (including malicious damage) will now be covered by commercial insurance taken out by Group 4 at their expense.

Some of the existing contractual conditions have been clarified and re-drafted in light of past experience, including improvements in standard conditions achieved during negotiations for DCMF (Design, Construct, Manage and Finance) prison contracts. For example, the default procedure has been improved by greater clarity over the period available for the rectification of unsatisfactory performance.

New and more flexible arrangements have been introduced to cope with population increases.

Targets for regime activities have been updated including 30 hours work per convicted prisoner per week (compared with the national Prison Service target this year of 26.5 hours), whilst the daily time out of cell has been reduced from a target of 14 hours per day to 12 hours (compared with the national Prison Service target this year of "at least 60% of prisoners to be held in establishments which unlock prisoners for at least 10 hours per weekday").

Additional costs are transferred to Group 4 and will no longer be funded from other Prison Service Budgets. These include the provision of probation services and the funding of prisoners remuneration and discharge grants.

A copy of the Contract has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Crime (Guns)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many criminals who took a gun to a crime have been given a life sentence since 1989; what is the average tariff set in such cases to date; how many have been released to date; and what is the average sentence served by those who have been released to date; [7517]

(2) how many criminals who took a gun to a crime have been given custodial sentences other than a life sentence since 1989; what is the average length of sentence given; how many have been released to date; and what is the average sentence served by those who have been released to date; [7518]

(3) how many criminals who took a gun to a crime were given a sentence other than a custodial sentence since 1989; and how many were given each of the non-custodial sentences which have been used for such offenders. [7519]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 5 December 1996]: Information readily available centrally is given in the following tables. It relates to the type of sentence passed on the principal offence, where at least one of the offences dealt with at the final court appearance was for a firearms offence. It will thus exclude those instances where a firearm was involved and either no separate proceedings were undertaken or they were terminated early.

It is an offence under the Firearms Acts, subject to a maximum sentence of life imprisonment, to be in possession of a firearm with intent to commit an indictable offence. In the six years from 1990 to 1995, 717 people were convicted of this offence in England and Wales; 420 of them were imprisoned, with an average length of sentence of 36 months. None were sentenced to life imprisonment.

The time served by prisoners who have been sentenced since October 1992 is determined by the sentencing structure specified by the Criminal Justice Act 1991. For those sentenced before October 1992, there were different arrangements for remission, release and parole.

Table A: Immediate custodial sentences and average sentence lengths for indictable offences where there is an associated firearms offence[1] by type of court, 1989 to 1995

	Magistrates courts		Crown court

[1] The information tabulated is for the principal offence, where at least one of the offences dealt with at the final court appearance was for a firearms offence.

[2] Comparisons with other sources suggest that the figures for life sentences are particularly subject to under recording. For example, 123 persons were given a life sentence for homicide offences initially recorded in the years 1989 to 1995, where the method of killing was shooting.

Roisin McAliskey

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) in how many prisons in England and Northern Ireland Roisin McAliskey has been held on remand; and for how long in each prison; [8583]

(2) how many (a) doctors and (b) consultants have examined Roisin McAliskey and in which (i) prisons and (ii) hospitals the examinations took place; [8563]

(3) what medical facilities were available for pregnant women at each of the prisons where Roisin McAliskey was held. [8584]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 10 December 1996]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 13 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about Ms Roisin McAliskey.

Ms McAliskey has been held in two prisons while on remand. She was committed initially to Holloway prison on 27 November and then transferred to Belmarsh prison on 30 November before being returned to Holloway prison.

Ms McAliskey has been seen 11 times by doctors while in Holloway and Belmarsh. On 4 December Ms McAliskey complained of stomach pains. An appointment was made for her to see a consultant obstetrician at Greenwich District hospital. She had a scan and a full examination. The obstetrician confirmed that Ms McAliskey was in good general health, that her 16 week pregnancy was progressing normally and that there was no cause for concern. As a further precaution Ms McAliskey was returned to Holloway Prison where specialist ante-natal care is more readily available, should it become necessary. Since her return to Holloway she was been visited twice by the prison gynaecologist.

Holloway prison has a dedicated wing with specialist expertise and interest in caring for pregnant women. Admission is on a voluntary basis. Belmarsh prison has full inmate care facilities, but no facilities specifically for pregnant women. All prisons have the back up of the National Health Service, for both in-patient and out patient facilities. In addition, consultants are contracted by the Prison Service to carry out clinics in the prisons themselves.

Belmarsh Prison Visit

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what facilities were offered to Eamon O'Cuiv TD during his visit to Her Majesty's prison, Belmarsh on 5 December; and if he will make a statement. [8558]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 10 December 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 13 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the facilities offered to Mr O''Cuiv TD for his visit to Belmarsh Prison.

Mr. O'Cuiv visited Belmarsh on 5 December where he met a group of prisoners in the Special Secure Unit, in open conditions. The visit was conducted in sight but out of hearing of prison officers.

Mr. O'Cuiv was unable to see all the prisoners he wished to see because of his afternoon commitments In addition, one prisoner was required to attend an outside hospital appointment at short notice.

Football (Police)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the payments made to the Metropolitan police by each of London's Premier and Football League clubs in seasons 1995–96 and 1996–97 to date. [8787]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 12 December 1996]: I understand from the Commission of Police of the Metropolis that the payments made are as follows:

Club	1995–96 season £	1996–97 season (to 30 November 1996) £
Arsenal	269,518.59	61,545.93

ENVIRONMENT

Battersea Power Station

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when Battersea power station was closed as an electricity generating station. [8715]

Sir Paul Beresford: I understand that operations ceased in 1982.

Transport Schemes

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations his Department has had concerning the regulations making utilities liable for 18 per cent. of the costs of diversionary works for major transport schemes. [9295]

Mr. Clappison: Discussions have taken place at official and ministerial level with the Department of Transport which has the main responsibility for the legislation in question and these are still continuing Consultations have also taken place with the national joint utilities group.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contribution he estimates the private finance initiative will make to the capital programme of local authorities. [7789]

Mr. Curry: We have announced support for up to £50 million of PFI investment in 1996–97, and £200 million in 1997–98. The public private partnerships programme has recently announced a series of PFI pathfinder projects which are expected to be signed during the next 18 months.

Personal Social Services Funding

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the 1996–97 and 1997–98 standard spending assessment control totals for personal social services—PSS—by sub-block, putting the 1996–97 figures on the same basis as those for 1997–98, adjusted for changes in function and with the community care special transitional grant—STG—added to PSS control totals for 1996–97; what was the percentage change in each total so calculated; and if he will relate the above figures to the totals for funding for personal social services. [9046]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information on standard spending assessments is set out in the table. Funding for local authorities comes from specific and special grants and from the general revenues of the local authority. Specific and special grants for personal social services are proposed to be £453.9 million in 1997–98. Other forms of revenue funding are not hypothecated so it is not possible to determine their contribution to funding personal social services.

Standard spending assessments for personal social services

	Adjusted 1996–97 (£ million)	Provisional 1997–98 (£ million)	Change (Percentage)
Children's social services	1,754.7	1,754.7	0.0
Elderly residential social services	2,557.5	2,558.3	0.0
Elderly domiciliary social services	1,599.9	1,599.9	0.0
Other social services	1,479.2	1,479.2	0.0

Waste Management (Costs)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the on-cost to business of the implementation of the European initiated waste management strategy; and if he will make a statement. [8961]

Mr. Clappison: The European initiated waste strategy does not have any legal force and as such it has no direct cost implications for business. It is simply a review, largely summarising existing EU policies, which will provide a framework for future work.

Any specific proposals which may arise as a result will of course require a compliance cost assessment to be undertaken before passing into United Kingdom law. We would also expect the Commission to produce a fiche d'impact. In negotiations for any future proposals, the UK will always take into consideration the important balance between the need to improve environmental standards and practices against the costs to industry.

Care (Accommodation)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what discussions he has had regarding accommodation for young people with welfare agencies; [9205]

(2) if he will estimate the number of care leavers who are at present seeking accommodation; [9209]

(3) what proposals he has to assist care leavers to find accommodation; [9207]

(4) if he will list the figures for care leavers in (a) Coventry and (b) the west midlands seeking accommodation; [9210]

(5) what discussions he has had with charities with special reference to Barnardos and the Children's Society regarding accommodation for care leavers. [9208]

Mr. Clappison: Ministers and officials in the Department have contact with many organisations to discuss and seek views on a range of housing issues, including the housing needs of young people such as care leavers. For example, the views of Barnardos and the Children's Society were obtained to inform the drafting of the code of guidance on parts VI and VII of the Housing Act 1996. On 20 January 1997, section 179 of that Act will come into force, requiring local housing authorities to ensure that advice and information about homelessness and the prevention of homelessness is available to anyone in their area, including care leavers.

On 1 April 1997, provisions in the 1996 Act will come into force requiring local housing authorities to give reasonable preference in the allocation of social housing to people with a particular need for settled accommodation on welfare grounds, which can include care leavers and other young people at risk. These new measures complement social services authorities' duties and powers under the Children Act 1989 to assist care leavers, and housing authorities' duties under the homelessness legislation to ensure that vulnerable young people who become homeless unintentionally have access to suitable accommodation. My Department does not collect data on the numbers of care leavers seeking accommodation.

Uniform Business Rate

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research has been conducted (a) by and (b) on behalf of his Department, on the impact of the uniform business rate on small businesses in (i) urban and (ii) rural settings; and if he will publish the findings. [9211]

Sir Paul Beresford: Research into the impact of non-domestic rates costs on different types of business, conducted by IFF Research Ltd. on behalf of my Department, was published in February 1995.

Housing Registers

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to publish the new code of practice for housing registers. [9206]

Mr. Clappison: The new code of guidance on the allocation of local authority housing and homelessness, issued under parts VI and VII of the Housing Act 1996, was published on 31 October. Copies have been sent to all local housing authorities in England.

Telecommunications Antennae

Sir Michael Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to announce the results of his Department's consultation on amending the planning controls regarding the installation of telecommunications antennae. [9153]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Government expect to make an announcement shortly.

Housing Resources

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to make an announcement about the distribution of housing resources for 1997–98. [9602]

Mr. Curry: I am today announcing decisions about the distribution of resources for housing in 1997–98.

Councils will receive housing investment programme allocations totalling nearly £900 million for 1997—98. Under the competitive HIP process, we have again been able to direct funding to those councils which are best able to make use of them.

Within the HIP programme, £628 million is for general purpose allocations, or housing "annual capital guidelines". For the first time this year, these have been allocated on a fully competitive basis in line with the Government's move towards increased challenge and competitive funding as a means of improving the allocation of capital funding and the value for money obtained.

In addition to these annual capital guidelines, £193 million has been allocated for private sector renewal and £56 million for disabled facilities grant. These have also been allocated on a fully competitive basis.

As part of the assessment of its performance, each local authority is required to submit a housing strategy statement, setting out a comprehensive framework for housing programmes for at least the next three years, covering not only the plans of the local authority, but the contribution to be made by the private housing sector. The strategy is prepared in consultation with all those interested in the local housing scene, including the Housing Corporation, housing associations, tenants' groups and the private sector. Once again, there is a continuing improvement in the performance of the great majority of local authorities.

I am depositing tables in the Library of the House listing each authority's annual capital guideline and allocations for private sector renewal and disabled facilities grants for 1997—98. Together these comprise the HIP allocation. In addition, I am depositing a list of the authorities whose performance is assessed as being well above the average for their region.

Last month, the Government announced a new package of measures aimed at encouraging local authorities to transfer more of their stock to registered social landlords. Within the package of new measures, the estates renewal challenge fund will receive an additional £70 million over the next three years bringing spending to almost £500 million. Authorities will be granted a three year 'holiday' from the large-scale voluntary transfers receipts levy and the rules governing the use of LSVT receipts will come into line with those for right-to-buy transfers, making 25 per cent. of any receipt available to authorities to spend on housing. The limits on the size of a transfer to any one landlord will be increased from 5,000 to 12,000.

We also propose to use the housing investment programme to encourage such stock transfers and we will be consulting on changes to the 1997 HIP round in the new year.

Building Research Establishment

Mr. Garel-Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will announce the shortlist of prospective purchasers of the Building Research Establishment. [9555]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Following our consideration of a number of indicative offers for the Building Research Establishment, we have decided to short list two bids, the Built Environment Research Foundation, formed by University College London, and the BRE management bid team. They have been invited to submit final bids by 20 January 1997, following which a preferred bidder will be chosen.

TRANSPORT

London Transport Staff

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people are employed by London Transport in (a) managerial and (b) administrative posts; and, for each category, what is the annual cost. [9155]

Mr. Bowis: The total number of staff employed by London Transport at October 1996 was 19,424. The total staff cost for London Transport for the year ending 31 March 1997 is forecast to be £548.3 million. My Department does not have a detailed breakdown between managerial and administrative posts. This is an operational matter for London Transport.

Jubilee Line

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the Jubilee line extension to be completed; and what was the target date for completion. [9154]

Mr. Bowis: London Transport assure me that it is me still aiming for the original target opening date of 28 March 1998.

Trans-European Transport

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what will be the United Kingdom's share of funds available in 1996 for priority projects and other schemes under the European Community's financing programme for trans-European transport networks. [9638]

Sir George Young: Priority projects in the United Kingdom will receive some £27.6 million, which is over 16 per cent. of the total funds available for priority projects in 1996 and more than any other member state will receive from the EC fund, apart from Germany. A total of £20 million will go towards the Channel tunnel rail link, with £5.75 million for the west coast main line and £1.85 million for schemes along the Ireland-UK-Benelux road link. The UK will also receive almost £2 million for other schemes, of which £1.34 million is for four traffic management projects and £0.65 million for a development study of the great western line between Bristol and Penzance.

Traffic Projections

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is the traffic capacity of the M65; and what is the current traffic volume; [8196]

(2) what is the traffic capacity of the A59 between Clitheroe and Skipton; and what is the current traffic volume; [8195]

(3) what projections his Department has made of trans-Pennine traffic growth on the M62 over the next 20 years. [8194]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 16 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent questions about the M62 and M65 motorways and the A59 trunk road.

M62 Motorway

You asked what projections the Department has made of Trans-Pennine traffic growth on the M62 over the next 20 years. Based on National Traffic Growth Forecasts which were last updated in 1989, the forecast annual traffic growth on the M62 over the next 20 years ranges between 31% and 44% for cars and from 45% to 72% for heavy goods vehicles.

M65 Motorway

You asked about the traffic capacity of the M65 and the current traffic volume. A measure of capacity is the Congestion Reference Flow (CRF), which is derived from a number of factors including carriageway width, vertical and horizontal alignment, and the proportion of HGVs. Regional maps with explanatory notes have been deposited in the House of Commons library (Vol 282, Columns 1100–1101) which describe the relationship between CRFs, congestion and capacity.

The CRF of the M65 ranges from 80,000 on the two lane section between Junctions 9 and 10, to 125,000 vehicles per day on the section between Junctions 7 and 8.

The existing traffic flows on the M65 range from 35,000 to 45,000 vehicles per day.

A59 Between Clitheroe and Skipton

You asked about the traffic capacity of the A59 between Clitheroe and Skipton and the current traffic volume. The Congestion Reference Flow (CRF) of the A59 between Clitheroe and Skipton is within the range 18,000 to 22,000 vehicles per day subject to the varying standard of the route.

Existing traffic flows on the A59 are 10,000 vehicles per day at Clitheroe dropping to 6,000 between Gisburn and the Lancashire/North Yorkshire county boundary, and rising to 14,300 between the A56 and Skipton.

Road Projects

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which road projects (a) completed since 1991–92 and (b) not yet completed included private sector involvements. [6743]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Andrew Hunter, dated 16 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question asking which road projects (a) completed since 1991/92 and (b) not yet completed, included private sector involvement.

As part of the Department of Transport's response to the private finance initiative, a number of schemes in the roads programme are being developed as Design, Build, Finance and Operate (DBFO) projects. This is an innovative way to introduce private sector finance and expertise into scheme development and management of the network.

Contracts awarded so far, including the major construction projects involved, are as follows:-

Financial Year 1995/96

A69 Carlisle to Newcastle (Haltwhistle Bypass)

A1(M) Alconbury to Peterborough

A419/A417 Swindon to Gloucester (A419/A417 Cirencester & Stratton Bypass, A417 North of Stratton to Nettleton Improvement and A419 Latton Bypass)

M1–A1 Yorkshire Link (Lofthouse to Bramham Improvement)

A50 Stoke–Derby Link (A564 Doveridge Bypass)

A30/A35 Exeter to Bere Regis (A35 Honiton to Exeter Improvement and A35 Tolpuddle to Puddletown Bypass)

M40 Junctions 1–15 (Junctions 1A–3 Widening)

A19 Dishforth to Tyne Tunnel (Norton–Parkway Interchange Improvement).

Clearly, it is too early for any of the major projects involved to have been completed yet.

Added to these DBFO projects, the Secretary of State announced after the Budget statement that we are going ahead with seven more DBFO projects involving 33 separate major construction schemes. These are as follows:-

M6 Extension Carlisle–Scottish Border

incorporating:

M6 Carlisle–Guardsmill Extension.

This forms part of M6 DBFO project being taken forward by the Secretary of State for Scotland. The DBFO contract is in the final stages of negotiation and subject to bids being value for money, a contract could be awarded in the early part of next year.

Cumbria to Bradford DBFO Project

incorporating:

A590 High and Low Newton Bypass

A65 Hellifield and Long Preston Bypass

A65 Gargrave Bypass

A629 Skipton to Kildwick Improvement

A650 Bingley Relief Road

A650 Hard Ings Road Improvement.

Weald and Downland DBFO Project

incorporating:

A21 Tonbridge Bypass to Pembury Bypass Dualling

A21 Lamberhurst Bypass

A27 Polegate Bypass

A259 Pevensey to Bexhill Improvement

A259 Bexhill and Hastings Western Bypass

A259 Hastings Eastern Bypass.

South Midlands Network DBFO Project

incorporating:

A6 Great Glen Bypass

A6 Rothwell and Desborough Bypass

A6 Rushden and Higham Ferrers Bypass

A6 Clapham Bypass

A43 Silverstone Bypass

A43 Whitfield Turn to Brackley Hatch Dualling

A43 M40 to B4031 Improvement

A428 Norse Road Link.

Wessex Link DBFO Project

incorporating:

A36 Salisbury Bypass

A303 Wylye to Stockton Wood Improvement

A303 Sparkford to Ilchester Improvement

A303 Ilminster Bypass Improvement

A36 Codford to Heytesbury Improvement

A303 Chicklade Bottom to Mere Improvement.

A13 Thames Gateway DBFO Project

incorporating:

A13 Ironbridge to Canning Town Improvement

A13/A117 Woolwich Manor Way Junction Improvement

A13 Movers Lane Junction Improvement

A13/A112 Prince Regent Lane Junction Improvement.

West London Approach DBFO Project

incorporating:

A40 Gypsy Corner Improvement

A40 Western Circus Improvement.

Development of these new projects is going well and we would expect to award contract for the first three before the end of the next financial year. Contracts for the A13 and West London projects should be awarded Spring/Summer of 1998. The Wessex Link will be taken forward as soon as the post public inquiry assessments for Salisbury Bypass have been concluded.

Outside the DBFO initiative, three major projects involve private finance. These are:

Dartford Thurrock Crossing (completed in October 1991)

Second Severn Crossing (completed earlier this year)

Birmingham Northern Relief Road (still going through statutory processes).

There are also many smaller schemes, including simple junction improvements, which are privately funded either wholly, or in part, under Section 278 of the Highways Act 1980. This provision allows developers or private companies to finance improvements to trunk roads necessitated by development. Over the five year period from 1991/92 to 1995/96, agreements were reached to promote schemes totalling over £37m. Most of these schemes have been constructed, but a few have been delayed because they are linked to developments. Figures for 1996/97 are, of course, not yet available.

Trunk Road Construction

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the schemes within the 1996 trunk road programme which are expected to commence construction between (a) 1 January 1997 and 31 March 1997, (b) 1 April 1997 and 30 June 1997, (c) 1 July 1997 and 30 September 1997, (d) 1 October 1997 and 31 December 1997 and 31 December 1997 and (e) 1 January 1996 and 31 March 1998. [8445]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Chris Davies, dated 16 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question asking if he will list the schemes within the 1996 Trunk Road Programme which are expected to commence construction between (a) 1 January and 31 March 1997, (b) 1 April and 30 June 1997, (c) 1 July and 30 September 1997, (d) 1 October and 31 December 1997 and (e) 1 January and 31 March 1998.

Contracts for two schemes on the A12 (Hackney Wick–M11 Contracts 1 and 3) were let on 14 November 1996. It is likely that they will commence construction during one of the periods listed but I am not able to give a more precise date at the present time.

Contracts have also been signed for eight Private Finance Initiative (PFI) Design, Build, Finance and Operate (DBFO) projects during 1996. Construction has already started on nine of the eleven schemes included in these DBFO contracts, and the A19 Norton-Parkway Interchange Improvement and M40 Junctions 1A–3 Widening are both expected to start early next year.

For all schemes included in a DBFO project, it is for the DBFO company to determine the construction programme. However, the shadow toll regime is structured to include strong incentives for early construction.

Official Ministerial Visits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each of the Ministers in his Department how many official ministerial visits they have undertaken since 1 January; and how many of these have been abroad. [9381]

Sir George Young: Since 1 January, Transport Ministers have undertaken the following official ministerial visits:

Secretary of State for Transport

39 visits in the UK

4 visits abroad (including one to the EC Transport Council).

Minister for Railways, Roads and Local Transport

55 visits in the UK

2 visits abroad (both to the EC Transport Council).

Minister for Transport in London and Road Safety

28 visits in UK

2 visits abroad.

Minister for Aviation and Shipping

14 visits in UK

6 visits abroad (including two to the EC Transport Council).

Management Objectives

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the annual management objectives for each of his Department's divisions. [8327]

Sir George Young [pursuant to his reply, 10 December 1996 Official Report column 103]: I have now agreed the following revised aims for my Department:

Statement of Purpose

To promote safe, efficient and environmentally sustainable transport for people and goods, responding to the individual's need for mobility and supporting economic growth.

Aims

The Department will seek to:

Reduce transport-related deaths and injuries by promoting safety and security, providing rescue services and investigating accidents;

Reduce the damaging effects of transport on the environment by promoting sustainable growth and greater use of public transport, and by preventing, reducing and dealing effectively with pollution;

Improve choice, quality, value and accessibility for transport users by promoting competition wherever practicable and creating opportunities for transport providers, by investing in and making better use of existing infrastructure, and by encouraging transport providers to make their services accessible to all.

In pursuing these aims and broader Government aims the Department will:

Carry out tax-collecting, licensing, standard-setting, regulatory, enforcement, grant-payment, contingency planning and other functions efficiently and fairly, maintaining a high standard of service;

Keep Parliament and the public informed about transport policies and developments, and monitor their impact;

Promote effectively UK interests in the European Union and other international bodies and in bilateral relations;

Work effectively with local authorities, law enforcement agencies, other Government Departments and other organisations in both the public and private sector;

Create opportunities for all its staff and ensure they are equipped with the skills they need;

Manage its resources efficiently and effectively.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Jobseeker's Allowance (Charities)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the impact of the jobseeker's allowance on charities which previously relied on unemployed people working voluntarily. [8075]

Mr. Forth: We do not expect the replacement of unemployment benefit and income support with the jobseeker's allowance to have any adverse impact on charities which previously relied on unemployed people working voluntarily.

As with unemployment benefit and income support for unemployed people, there is no limit on the hours a person may undertake voluntary work while in receipt of jobseeker's allowance, so long as they are actively seeking work and available for work at 48 hours' notice—rather than the normal requirement to be immediately available.

Professorial Pay

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average level of professorial pay in the university sector currently; and what it was in 1980. [8941]

Mr. Forth: According to the new earnings survey, the average level of gross weekly earnings of full-time male "university and polytechnic teaching professionals" in April 1996 was £577. The average level of gross weekly pay for the closest comparator group—full-time male university academics—in 1980 was £250. This is the equivalent of £474 at 1996 prices.

Truancy

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the total number of truancies in days per year for each of the last three years for (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Sheffield; and if she will make a statement. [8919]

Mr. Forth: Regular school attendance is important for pupils' progress, but the data collected for the performance tables now published each autumn show that significant amounts of valuable learning time are lost due to unauthorised absence. Rates of unauthorised absence at maintained schools in Sheffield for the last three years were about twice the national average, as follows:

Unauthorised absence in maintained primary schools

	percentage of half days missed		average number of half days missed per absent pupil
School year	Sheffield LEA	England average	Sheffield LEA	England average
1993–94	1.0	0.5	13	11

Schools (Wiltshire)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when schools inspectors last visited (a) Fovant school; (b) Dinton school and (c) Barford St. Martin school in Wiltshire. [8900]

Mr. Robin Squire: Fovant church of England first school was inspected under the statutory four-year cycle by Ofsted-registered inspectors between 3 and 5 October 1994, and Barford St. Martin's church of England first school between 19 and 21 September 1994. Dinton first church of England school is due to be inspected by Ofsted in February 1997.

Members of Her Majesty's inspectorate visited Fovant school in April 1996 and Dinton school in connection with Wiltshire local education authority's proposals for Fovant and Dinton schools in October 1996.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools in Wiltshire have been given grant-maintained status during 1996. [8901]

Mr. Forth: Four schools in the Wiltshire local education authority area have become grant maintained since 1 January 1996.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if Wiltshire local education authority has expressed itself (a) in favour of closure of the Fovant school and (b) against grant-maintained status for the school. [8902]

Mr. Squire: Wiltshire local education authority published proposals to cease to maintain Fovant school on 16 May. The authority has made a statutory objection to the proposals for grant-maintained status published by the governing body of the school.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have made representations to her or to her Department (a) in favour and (b) against grant-maintained status for Fovant school in Wiltshire. [8903]

Mr. Squire: My right hon. Friend has received two statutory objections to the proposals for grant-maintained status for Fovant school, and one non-statutory objection.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have made representations to her or to her Department (a) in favour and (b) against closure of Fovant school in Wiltshire. [8904]

Mr. Squire: My right hon. Friend has received 11 statutory objections to the proposals to close Fovant school, including one from the governing body of the school.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the original application for grant-maintained status from the governors of Fovant school in Wiltshire was dated; when it was recorded as received by her Department; and when she expects to reach a decision. [8905]

Mr. Squire: Proposals for the acquisition of grant-maintained status for Fovant schools were published on 29 February 1996, and a copy received in the Department on the same date. My right hon. Friend will reach a decision as soon as is compatible with full consideration of all the relevant issues, including the separate local education authority proposals to choose the school.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the target time scale for a decision on an application by a school for grant-maintained status. [8906]

Mr. Squire: We aim, so far as possible, to reach a decision on proposals for grant-maintained status where there are conflicting proposals by the local education authority, within five months; of publication of the authority's proposals.

Training for Work

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the proportion of training for work leavers who six months after leaving were (a) in a full-time job with their work-experience employer, (b) in a full-time job with another employer, (c) employed in their own business, (d) in a part-time job, (e) in voluntary work, (f) on another Government training programme, (g) on a full-time education or training course, (h) unemployed and claiming benefit, (i) unemployed and not claiming benefit and (j) doing something else in the most recent period for which figures are available; and what was the proportion of training for work leavers who completed the training agreed in their initial action plan. [3928]

Mr. Plaice [holding answer 20 November 1996]: The information requested is given in the following table.

Table 1: Training for Work

Christmas Expenditure

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much her Department plans to spend on celebrating Christmas and the new year. [7574]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 6 December 1996]: It is not possible to disaggregate this information except at disproportionate cost, although such costs are included in the running cost expenditure for this Department which is published in the annual report.

Hospital Education Units

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many education units for school age in-patients there were in NHS trusts in England in each of the last five years. [8478]

Mrs. Gillan: This information is not held centrally. However, the following table shows the number of hospital schools in England in each of the last five years:

1993: 40
1994: 38
1995: 31
1996: 27.

PRIME MINISTER

Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his speech at the Lisbon summit of 2 December, if he will make a statement on the role of the parliamentary assembly of the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe and in respect of the expansion of the activities of the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe. [8647]

The Prime Minister: I represented the United Kingdom at the summit meeting of the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe in Lisbon on 2 and 3 December, accompanied by my right hon. and learned Friend, the Foreign Secretary. The meeting adopted the Lisbon summit declaration and the Lisbon declaration on a common and comprehensive security model for Europe for the 21st century. Copies of these documents will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

The summit welcomed a separate decision on the mandate for negotiation next year on modernising the treaty on conventional forces in Europe.

In the margins of the summit, I had discussions with several Heads of State and Government, including the Presidents of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia, Chancellor Kohl of Germany, Prime Minister Chernomyrdin of Russia and Prime Minister Netanyahu of Israel.

Prospects for strengthening European security in the next century were the theme of many speeches to the summit and of my bilateral meetings. I explained to Prime Minister Chernomyrdin not only that enlargement of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation and the European Union would be evolutionary transparent processes, but our strong conviction that European security for the future should be built in partnership with Russia.

The declaration on the security model includes a decision to consider developing a charter on European security which can serve the needs of our peoples in the new century. The United Kingdom will contribute actively to this work. We shall emphasise the need for security organisations which adhere to OSCE commitments to work together, as in Bosnia, to defuse tension, prevent conflict, and build prosperous, democratic civil society throughout Europe.

The Lisbon declaration draws attention to the OSCE's expanding role in conflict prevention, management and resolution, including particularly the high commissioner on national minorities and long-term missions in countries such as Moldavia and Georgia. The parliamentary assembly contributes to this effort particularly through its election monitoring programme. The Lisbon declaration confirmed moreover, that the OSCE would continue to play an important role in the consolidation of peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina in 1997.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Straw: To ask the Attorney-General how many (a) lawyers, (b) administrative staff and (c) others have been employed by the Crown Prosecution Service in each year since its establishment. [8677]

The Attorney-General: In each year since its establishment, the Crown Prosecution Service has employed staff in the following numbers.

	Lawyers	Administrative staff	Legal trainees	Casual staff	Total
1 August 1986	939.0	1,031.0	0	n/a	1,970.0

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Public Appointments

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many of the individuals appointed by his Department to public positions in the last year were first identified by the public appointments unit. [8533]

The Deputy Prime Minister [holding answer 10 December 1996]: For these purposes, my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Paymaster General

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many of the individuals appointed by his Department to public positions in the last year were first identified by the public appointments unit. [8550]

Mr. Bates [holding answer 10 December 1996]: The Civil Service Appeals Board has made three new appointments and 10 reappointments during 1996. Of these, two of the new appointees and three of the reappointees were first identified by the public appointments unit.

The deregulation task force has made two new appointments and the Security Commission has made two reappointments during 1996: none was identified by PAU.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Salmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what role his Department has in respect of applications for new nuclear power stations; and if he will make a statement. [8463]

Mr. Page [holding answer 11 December 1996]: Proposals for new power stations in England and Wales over 50 MWs in capacity require my Department's consent under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989. All such applications are considered on their individual merits against the background of a policy that, as a general rule, matters such as the need for a generating station, its capacity, choice of fuel used and type of plant are commercial matters for the applicant.

Coal Industry

Mr. Rogers (Rhondda): To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many claims have been settled under the coal industry pneumoconiosis compensation scheme in each year since its inception. [8351]

Mr. Page: This is a matter for the British Coal Corporation. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Radiation Experiments

Mr. Rendel: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what radiation experiments on humans involving British volunteers the Atomic Energy Authority has conducted or is conducting. [8866]

Mr. Page: Details are contained in AEA Technology's radiological protection research annual reports, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what involvement his Department currently has in radiation experiments on humans. [8865]

Mr. Page: None.

Electrical Goods (Home Repairs)

Mr. Allen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals he has to introduce legislation to provide consumer protection for repairs on electrical goods carried out in homes. [8843]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Under the Sale and Supply of Goods Act 1982, traders who repair electrical goods, whether on their business premises or at consumers' homes, are required to do so with reasonable care and skill and within a reasonable time. Failure to do so amounts to a breach of contract for which the consumer may seek redress. We have no plans to introduce further legislation.

Hawk Aircraft (Indonesia)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if Hawk training aircraft destined for Indonesia are being converted into ground-attack aircraft in the United Kingdom. [5914]

Mr. Lang: As announced to the House on 21 November, an export licence has been issued for the supply of a further 16 Hawk aircraft to Indonesia. These aircraft, which are to be supplied for external defence, have a range of capabilities, including ground attack. This was taken into account when the export licence application was considered.

Neither this case, nor in respect of the first consignment, has there been modification of trainer aircraft destined for Indonesia into ground attack aircraft in the United Kingdom.

Crown Agents

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Crown Agents and its subsidiary companies require export licences when exporting or trans-shipping military, security, police or paramilitary equipment or services. [8656]

Mr. Nelson: The Crown Agents and its subsidiary companies are subject to the same licensing requirements as UK-registered companies.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Crown Agents and its subsidiary companies required export licences prior to privatisation when exporting or trans-shipping military, security, police or paramilitary equipment or services. [8657]

Mr. Nelson: The Crown Agents and its subsidiary companies are subject to the same licensing requirements as UK-registered companies. Privatisation will not affect this position.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if a British-based company is required to apply for an export licence for military, security, police or paramilitary goods or equipment when the goods or equipment are to be exported or shipped by the Crown Agents. [8658]

Mr. Nelson: Where placing a contract and also arranging shipping, the Crown Agents would normally apply for any licence required. Where the Crown Agents act purely as a freight forwarder, the supplier of the goods concerned would have to apply for any necessary licence.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if a British-based company was required to apply for an export licence for military, security, police or paramilitary goods or equipment when the goods or equipment were exported or shipped by the Crown Agents prior to the privatisation of the Crown Agents. [8659]

Mr. Nelson: Where placing a contract and also arranging shipping, the Crown Agents would normally apply for any licence required. Where the Crown Agents act purely as a freight forwarder, the supplier of the goods concerned would have to apply for any necessary licence. Privatisation will not affect the licensing requirements.

Personal Business Advisers

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what monitoring procedures are in place to ensure that there are adequate safeguards against personal business advisers recommending services solely to generate income for themselves. [8940]

Mr. Page: In order to become accredited, a business link must demonstrate to an independent assessor that the advice given by a personal business adviser and other advisers is both impartial and independent. To do this it must follow the guidelines on the independence of advice to customers set out in D47—D49 of the "Business Link Service Guide".

This includes, among others:

Outside their counselling and diagnostic role, PBAs and other advisers should have no personal interest in the supplier recommended or chosen.

PBA targets should not include any that link a PBA's pay to performance measured by the volume of services taken up by customers, or to earning money for the business link or its partners. The same should also apply to others wholly or substantially involved in advising customers under the business link brand.

Business Breakfasts

Mr. Hoon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the cost of the first two business breakfasts held on 11 November at Luton and Lincoln. [4294]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 15 November 1996]: The cost of catering, presentational materials and hire of venues for the two events including VAT, has now been confirmed as £8,780.

Office of Science and Technology

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the cost of commissioning the Coopers and Lybrand review of the dual support transfer for the Office of Science and Technology. [8889]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Excluding VAT, the Office of Science and Technology—OST—paid Coopers and Lybrand in total £81,862.16, comprising £76,650.00 consultant fees, £4,022.16 for expenses and £1,190 for 700 copies of the final report. VAT amounted to £14,325.88. The associated administrative costs to OST is making and managing this contract were covered routinely within the office's running costs budget.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the role of Mr. A, Mr. B, and Mr. C, whose names have been supplied to him, in the application for a regional selective assistance grant by Synex Ltd. [6234]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 27 November 1996]: In the application by Synex Ltd, Mr. A. provided independent accountancy advice under the terms of his contract with the Government Office for the South West. Further details are contained in my reply of 10 December 1996, Official Report, column 87-88.

Mr. B. and Mr. C. were, at the time of the Synex application, both members of the South West industrial development board—SWIDB—which provides independent advice on applications for regional selective assistance. The board comprises senior business people with wide experience of commerce and industry who, like Mr. B. and Mr. C., voluntarily give their time freely in support of the important work that the SWIDB performs. Details of the attendance of Mr. B and Mr. C at board meetings which considered the Synex case are contained in my replies of 10 December 1996, Official Report, column 88.

I understand that it is also the case that Mr. B and Mr. C had some private discussions with Synex Ltd. They were responsible for declaring any interests which may have arisen from these discussion and my replies of 10 December 1996, Official Report, column 88 reflect the outcome of this.

The decision on the Synex case was taken by my Department on 19 May 1995. The company appealed against the decision on 31 May 1995 and Mr. C provided advice to the Government Office for the South West on 29 June 1995 as part of a further technical assessment. Although Mr. C had previously declared an interest in the case and had not participated in board discussions leading up to the decision, the Government office believed that he could properly make a contribution at this stage on the technical aspects alone. The Department's decision to reject the case was confirmed on 31 July 1995.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what regulations prevent members of an industrial development board from advising the DTI on the merits of an RSA application while giving paid advice to the same applicant. [6230]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 27 November 1996]: Appointments to the industrial development boards are made in accordance with the Cabinet Office's guide to public appointments procedures and the Treasury code of best practice for board members of public bodies. These cover avoidance of potential conflicts of interest and, among other things, prevent board members from offering advice on the merits of an RSA application on which they had received payment for advising the applicant. Members are required to provide the Government Offices with a list of current interest such as directorships and the deaths of a black person in police custody or prison custody there were in each of the last five years; and what were the causes of death. [8680]

Mr. Sackville: The information regarding deaths in police custody is not held centrally. I understand that the verdicts of inquests regarding relevant deaths in prison arising since details have been collected are as follows:

Three natural causes, one suicide, one inquest outstanding;

1995

Two natural causes, four suicides, one misadventure, one open, three inquests outstanding;

1996 (to 11 December)

Two natural causes, two inquests outstanding.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many police stations a black person has died while in custody during the last five years; [8681]

(2) how many deaths in police custody in England and Wales of (a) black, (b) Asian and (c) Irish people there were in each of the last five years. [8679]

Mr. Maclean: These figures are not held centrally. In previous years, police forces have not been required to report the ethnic background of people who die in police custody. That information has been required since April 1996 and will be included in future annual published statistics.

Police (Suicide Awareness)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training in suicide awareness police officers receive in England and Wales. [8684]

Mr. Maclean: It is for individual chief officers to determine the extent to which their officers are trained to carry out their duties. The foundation course for probationer constables seeks to establish a general awareness and understanding of the mental and physical condition of people they encounter. The possibility of people in custody committing suicide is dealt with in greater depth in the custody officer training package which is available to all forces.

Prison Health Service

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to integrate the prison health service into the national health service. [8685]

Miss Widdecombe: There are no current plans to integrate the health care service for prisoners with the national health service.

We are, however, committed to improving health care for prisoners and believe that there is considerable potential for achieving better health services and better value for money by contracting with the NHS and other providers.

CS Gas

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to authorise the use of CS gas by members of the Prison Service. [8286]

Miss Widdecombe: There are no current proposals to authorise the Use of CS spray by members of the Prison Service.

Prison Staff (Injuries)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison staff have been injured due to physical assault from inmates in England and Wales; how many of these cases were pursued in the courts; and how many were dealt with under prison rule 47 in each year since 1990. [8051]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. John Battle, dated 13 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about how many prison staff have been injured due to physical assault from inmates in England and Wales; how many of these cases were pursued in the courts; and how many were dealt with under Prison Rule 47 in each year since 1990.

The Prison Service expanded its Incident Reporting System to include the monitoring of injuries resulting from physical assaults by inmates from September 1995. Information prior to this date was not centrally recorded, and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. The number of reported injuries sustained by prison staff for each month since September 1995 is given in the attached table.

Information concerning cases of assaults by inmates which were pursued through the courts is not collected centrally and could also only be provided at disproportionate cost.

It is not possible to differentiate between inmates who have been dealt with under Prison Rule 47 in cases of assault on prison staff that have resulted in physical injury separately from those where no physical injury was sustained. The number of assaults on prison staff and others proven at adjudication in each year since 1990 are provided in the attached table.

Prisons

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the criteria for placing a convicted inmate in (a) an open prison and (b) a closed prison, with particular reference to the length of sentence; and if he will make a statement. [8517]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 13 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the criteria by which convicted prisoners are placed in closed or open prisons.

The criteria used are set out in guidance contained in the enclosed Circular Instructions 7/1988 and 2/1991 issued by the Prison Service. Copies of these are available in the Library.

Child Prostitution

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will establish a task force to make recommendations to address the problem of child prostitution. [8427]

Mr. Maclean: We have no plans to do so. We believe that the present law is adequate to deal with those who exploit child prostitutes.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to increase the penalties for those convicted of (a) enticing children into prostitution and (b) living off the earnings of child prostitutes; [8428]

(2) what plans he has to increase the penalties for those convicted of living on immoral earnings. [8426]

Mr. Maclean: The maximum penalty for an offence of living on the earnings of prostitution, whether adult or child, is seven years' imprisonment. Two years' imprisonment is the maximum penalty for causing or encouraging prostitution of a girl under 16. There is no evidence that these maximum penalties are insufficient for the most serious cases of these offences.

Seat Belts

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many drivers have been prosecuted for allowing a child under 14 years to travel in a vehicle without wearing a seat belt or legal restraint in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [8231]

(2) how many drivers have been prosecuted for allowing a child under 14 years to travel in a vehicle without wearing a seat belt or legal restraint in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [8232]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 12 December 1996]: It is not possible, in the statistics held centrally, to distinguish between passengers or drivers prosecuted for not wearing seat belts, nor whether children under 14 were involved.

The following table gives the available information. As the vast majority of seat belt offences are dealt with by the issue of a fixed penalty notice, the table includes figures for these also.

Wolds Prison

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the contract for the management of Wolds prison, indicating the original terms of the renewal of the contract for the management of the prison and the terms and completion details of any agreed renewal of the contract. [7505]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 9 December 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 13 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the renewal of the contract for the management of Wolds prison.

The contract came into operation in April 1992 and, subject to satisfactory performance, is capable of renewal up to a maximum term of 14 years from that date. The initial five year term expires on 5 April 1997. In view of the Prison Service's satisfaction with the level of service provided and the result of negotiations about

Letter from Tina Holt to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 16 December 1996:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on how many new claims for unemployment-related benefits have been made by claimants living in the York travel-to-work area, and how many claimants have made at least one new claim for unemployment-related benefits since April 1992.

The database used to complete this analysis does not contain ward level data and therefore information can not be provided for true travel-to-work areas. However, information can be provided by jobcentre best-fit travel-to-work areas.

Since 1 April 1992, an estimated 50,040 new claims for unemployment-related benefits have been made by claimants registering at York Clifford Street Employment Service Jobcentre or York Stonebow Employment Service Jobcentre.

The estimated number of claimants who have experienced at least one new spell of claimant unemployment at both of these jobcentres, since 1 April 1992, is 28,580.

Typical Family (Definition)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the definition of a typical family used by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [8247]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 11 December 1996]: The information requested falls within the responsibiiity of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 16 December 1996:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the definition of a typical family.

The Office for National Statistics does not define a "typical family". In the General Household Survey (GHS), the source of most statistics on families, a family is defined as:

(a) a married or opposite sex cohabiting couple on their own or

(b) a married or opposite sex cohabiting couple/lone parent and their never-married children, provided these children have no children of their own.

Persons who cannot be allocated to a family as defined above are said to be persons not in a family although they could be related to one or more family members.

The type of family which is relatively most numerous depends on the classification of families which is used, but from the 1994 GHS, of all the families defined above (and where the family head was resident in Great Britain and aged under 60):

21% were married couples with no children

6% were opposite sex cohabiting couples with no children

50% were married couples with children

4% were opposite sex cohabiting couples with children

18% were lone parents families with children

(Due to rounding the percentages do not total to 100)

An analysis of the trends, numbers and characteristics of families was recently published in an article entitled Population Review: (6) Families and households in Great Britain which appeared in Population Trends 85, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library.

"Financial Statement and Budget Report"

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 6 December, Official Report, columns 835–36, for what reason the Department of Natinal Heritage is excluded from the table. [8740]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 12 December 1996]: The Department of Natinal Heritage was excluded in error and an incorrect figure was inadvertently given for Legal Departments. The complete table should have read as follows:

£ million	1996–97
Defence	40
FCO/ODA	0
Agriculture	0
DfEE	0
Transport	550
Environment	80
Home Office	120

National Heritage	[1]—
Health	70
Social Security	130
Scotland and Forestry Commission	30
Wales	20
Northern Ireland	10
Chancellor's departments	30
Local authorities	50
TOTAL	1,130

[1] Less than £10 million.

Inland Revenue

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the review of the Inland Revenue executive officers' framework documents is complete; and if he will make a statement. [9702]

Mr. Jack: Following completion of the next steps evaluation review of its executive office structure earlier this year, the Inland Revenue has now revised its executive offices' framework documents in line with the findings of that review.

The department's internal services have been reorganised following the transfer of information technology functions to its strategic partner—Electronic Data Systems—and the department's senior management review. This has resulted in a decrease in the number of service executive offices. From 1 January 1997 the department will have 20 operational and four service executive offices.

Copies of each of the executive offices' framework documents—which set out the statutory, policy and resources frameworks within which the offices operate—will be placed in the Libraries of the House shortly.

Ecstasy

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths that involved (a) ecstasy as the sole drug concerned and (b) alcohol poisoning, occurred after the victims consumed the substances (i) in clubs, (ii) in public houses, (iii) at raves and (iv) elsewhere, in each of the last five years. [6627]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 2 December 1996]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 16 December 1996:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on how many deaths resulted from ecstasy, or poisoning from alcohol after the victims consumed the substances in (i) clubs (ii) public houses (iii) raves and (iv) elsewhere, in each of the last five years.

ONS do not hold this level of detail as to where the substance which caused the death was consumed. The information is not recorded on the death certificate nor by the coroner, and would be very difficult to record with any degree of accuracy. Alcohol, for example, may have been consumed in a number of different places.

The following table shows, (a) the numbers of deaths where Ecstasy was the sole drug mentioned and (b) the numbers of deaths from alcohol poisoning, in England and Wales in the last five years.

Year	Deaths from ecstasy[1]	Deaths from alcohol poisoning[2]
1991	6	152
1992	5	126
1993	12	138
1995	15	130

[1] Deaths in which ecstasy was the only drug mentioned on the death certificate. None of these deaths included mention of alcohol.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fisheries Offences (Prosecutions)

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the successful prosecutions for fisheries offences undertaken by his Department since 1 January which have resulted in fines of £5,000 or more, including details of the fishing vessels involved, country of registration and the offences committed. [9432]

Mr. Baldry: A list of the successful prosecutions and the details requested are set out in the following table. Where appropriate, the fines relate to the total fines against both the master and owner of the vessel. There are other prosecution cases, but these are the subject of an appeal and are not therefore included in the table.

Cattle Cull

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 6 November, Official Report, column 580, if he will list methods of disposal that are (a) permitted and (b) currently in operation for (i) condensate and (ii) wash water from the rendering of cattle slaughtered under the 30-month scheme. [8799]

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 12 December 1996]: Most wash water and condensate from rendering plants is discharged to sewer. Such discharges are regulated by sewerage undertakers, who are empowered by the Water Industry Act 1991 to impose a wide range of conditions on the discharge consent issued to an individual plant.

A small number of rendering plants discharge wash water and condensate, after treatment, to controlled waters or to land. Discharges of this kind are subject to regulation by the Environment Agency, under the Water Resources Act 1991 or the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

The methods of disposal specified in consents and licences will vary according to the circumstances and full weight is always given in determining such consents and licences to the need to protect public health and the environment. Dischargers who fail to comply with relevant discharge consents or licence conditions are liable to prosecution and other regulatory action.

All rendering plants involved in the scheme are approved under the Animal By-Products Order 1992, as amended, which implements EU rendering standards, and the Specified Bovine Material (No. 3) Order 1996.

Beef Producers

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what additional assistance he has produced to beef producers during the last six months. [9040]

Mr. Baldry: United Kingdom farmers have received additional direct financial assistance totalling nearly £110 million. In addition, the advance payments under the suckler cow and beef special premium schemes have been paid at a rate of 80 per cent. rather than the normal 60 per cent. Market support measures, such as the expanded intervention coverage for beef and the calf processing scheme, have also served to enhance producers' income.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to amend the system of subsidies in respect of farmers who buy rather than breed beef animals. [8956]

Mr. Baldry: Producers who buy male cattle to fatten for slaughter are currently able to claim under the beef special premium scheme, subject to observance of scheme rules. Those who marketed adult cattle, including heifers, for slaughter for human consumption between 20 March and 30 June were able to claim additional subsidies worth £66.76 per head of cattle marketed. A second round of marketing payments is now available in respect of cattle marketed between 1 July and 30 September. Claims must be made before 8 January. The payment rate under this second phase in likely to be around £55 per head. I have no plans to alter this position or to seek any amendments to existing subsidy schemes for this category of producer.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the profit made on animals by beef producers during the last six months. [8957]

Mr. Baldry: Beef profitability varies widely and depends on the farm type and production system. Various estimates of annual profitability are published each March in "Farm Incomes in the United Kingdom".

Fishing Regulations

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, (1) pursuant to his answer of 3 December, Official Report, column 625, on buying and selling fishing quotas and licences, when his Department first authorised the sale of fish quotas; [8954]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 3 December, Official Report, column 625, on buying and selling fishing quotas and licences, what rights of ownership over a fish quota are transferred when that quota is exchanged between fishermen's groups. [8955]

Mr. Baldry: The Ministry has not authorised the sale of fish quotas. Fishermen's groups are free to swap or transfer between themselves quota allocated to them annually subject to the approval of the Fisheries Departments. No one has ownership rights over United Kingdom quotas.

Quota Hopping

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he plans to take to sustain the present level of fishing effort in the period before the determination of the quota-hopping issue. [8958]

Mr. Baldry: Discussions are still taking place in the Fisheries Council on the need for reductions in fishing effort following the expiry of the current multi-annual guidance programme at the end of this year. We are also continuing to press for treaty changes in the intergovernmental conference to deal with the problem of quota hoppers. I have, however, made it clear that I am not prepared to contemplate any further compulsory capacity or effort controls on UK fishermen while these issues remain unresolved.

Genetically Engineered Food

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the percentage of imported foodstuffs which will contain genetically engineered ingredients in (a) January 1997 and (b) January 1998; and if he will make a statement. [8960]

Mr. Browning: Of the 1996 USA soya bean harvest, about 2 per cent. has come from genetically modified plants, this is anticipated to rise to 10 per cent. in 1997. Of the 1996 USA maize harvest, approximately 0.6 per cent. comprised genetically modified plants and it is expected that in 1997 this will rise to 5 per cent.

Other countries are planting genetically modified crops next year. The level of imports into the UK cannot be predicted with any accuracy at this time.

Cattle Insemination

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what powers his Ministry has to require minimum standards of training, and permanent contract conditions, for inseminators for cattle AI programmes; and if he will make a statement. [9179]

Mrs. Browning: Provisions relating to the training and business status of inseminators for cattle AI are included in regulation 24(b) of the Artificial Insemination of Cattle (Animal Health) (England and Wales) Regulations 1985. Any breach of these regulations constitutes an offence under section 10(6) of the Animal Health and Welfare Act 1984.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery

8. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress has been made to ensure that lottery funds can be used for expenditure on items other than capital items. [7607]

Mr. Sproat: The National Lotteries Charities Board and the Millennium Commission have always been able to make revenue awards. In April, I announced changes to the policy directions to allow the Arts and Sports Councils to make revenue awards. The first arts and sports revenue programmes were announced in November. The National Heritage Bill will allow the heritage lottery fund the same flexibility.

14. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to increase the percentage of national lottery funds directed to good causes. [7608]

Mr. Sproat: None. The Director General of the National Lottery appointed Camelot as the operator of the national lottery because over the course of the licence it offered the best return to good causes. The National Audit Office reviewed the evaluation process and supported the director general's decision. The percentage of funds going to the good causes could be increased only through a change to the licence, with Camelot's agreement.

15. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will ensure that greater priority is given to projects benefiting children and young people in the distribution of lottery proceeds. [7609]

Mrs Virginia Bottomley: Young people and children are already benefiting greatly from the lottery. At least 1,500 awards, worth more than £175 million have already been made.

I directed the distributing bodies specifically to take the needs of young people into account when I issued a new policy directions to them in April this year.

The schemes launched last month by the Arts and Sports Councils under these directions will allow children and young people to benefit even further from the lottery.

19. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the total sum contributed by the national lottery to organisations, groups and charities in the borough of Southend-on-Sea. [7613]

Mrs. Bottomley: Twelve national lottery awards have been made in the borough of Southend-on-Sea with a total value of £2.3 million.

20. Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the role of the national lottery in preserving the nation's historic churches. [7614]

Mr. Sproat: The national lottery provides a tremendous opportunity for the preservation of historic churches and cathedrals in this country. To date, the heritage lottery fund has made 121 grants totalling £14.8 million to preserve our ecclesiastical heritage.

The heritage lottery fund and English Heritage have also worked together to produce a single procedure whereby churches and other places of worship can apply for funding from both sources through a single route; £20 million a year could be available through this joint scheme which will make it easier for congregations to apply for funding.

24. Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many grants the national lottery funding bodies have made to protect and conserve the nation's heritage since the inception of the lottery. [7619]

Mrs. Bottomley: The heritage lottery fund, which has responsibility for allocating lottery proceeds specifically to projects concerned with the protection and conservation of the nation's heritage, has made 604 grants totalling £368 million.

27. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations she has received about the effect on smaller charities of the national lottery; and if she will make a statement. [7622]

Mrs. Bottomley: The introduction of the national lottery has given charities and voluntary organisations of all sizes unparalleled opportunities to secure significant new funding for projects and initiatives across a wide range of activities. While I have received many representations about the effect of the national lottery on small charities, it is too early to say or to identify what other effects, if any, the national lottery is having on charities' incomes, and my Department is engaged in research into the matter. What is certain is that the lottery has led, and will lead, to hundreds of millions of pounds of additional money reaching charitable and voluntary organisations every year.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on national lottery awards to disadvantaged groups. [7612]

Mr. Sproat: The National Lottery Charities Board has made 5,160 awards, with a total value of £352 million to charitable, benevolent and philanthropic groups.

Millennium Bids

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage in respect of which national lottery millennium bids decisions have been deferred until March 1997; and if she will give the reason for the delayed announcements. [7170]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall write to the hon. Member in my capacity as chairman of the commission and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

16. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many projects supported by Millennium Commission awards are currently being taken forward. [7610]

Mrs. Bottomley: The Millennium Commission is taking forward into contract, construction and implementation 93 projects: 87 capital projects on 2,038 sites and six millennium award schemes. In addition, 58 first and second-round projects are under detailed consideration and 1,011 projects are at initial appraisal stage.

Cross-channel Transport

17. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will commission a study of the different cross-channel transport modes as means of promoting tourism to the United Kingdom. [7611]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The British Tourist Authority continues to research opportunities in Europe and to work closely with the airlines, ferry companies and channel tunnel operators to promote Britain as a tourist destination.

The growth in tourism from western Europe has been spectacular: it increased by 15 per cent. in 1995, and by 17 per cent. in the year to September 1996.

English Poetry

21. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to fund further public readings of English poetry. [7615]

Mr. Sproat: The Arts Council of England and the regional arts boards will spend nearly £3 million on literary activity this year, including supporting organisations which give public poetry readings. In addition, my right hon. Friend has announced the establishment of the national reading initiative to encourage more children to read more books, and the advisory panel will be advising on ways to take the scheme forward. This may include public readings of literature, inlcuding poetry.

Historic Buildings (London)

25. Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the safety of the oldest buildings of national importance in the cities of London and Westminster. [7620]

Mr. Sproat: Responsibility for the safety of old buildings of national importance lies principally with their owners. Where the buildings are in public use, or where the public has access, the local authority has responsibility for ensuring that the buildings meet current health and safety standards. Government Departments are individually responsible for the safety of those historic buildings which they occupy.

Historic Churches (Basildon)

26. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what recent representation she has received concerning grants to historic churches in Basildon. [7621]

Mr. Sproat: I have received no such representations.

Tourism

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the British tourism industry. [7617]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Last year, we reversed a 10-year trend by increasing our world market share of tourism, and we set a record for export earnings. We are set to break the record again in this year.

Tourism is forecast to create up to 1 million new jobs during the next 10 years. I am championing the importance of this key growth sector both within Government and more widely. I will launch the next phase of our tourism strategy in January.

Buckinghamshire County Museum and Art Gallery

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to pay an official visit to the Buckinghamshire county museum and art gallery to discuss developments at the museum. [7618]

Mr. Sproat: I have no such plans currently.

Volunteering

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to take forward the work of the "Make a Difference" initiative and for the promotion of volunteering. [9682]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral answer that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Clywd, North-West (Mr. Richards) earlier today.

WRVS

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the proposed move of the head office of the Women's Royal Voluntary Service. [9683]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Women's Royal Voluntary Service is to move its head office from its present location in Stockwell road, Brixton, to the site of its new training centre, Milton Hill house in Oxfordshire. The cost of the new head office and the move are to be met by the WRVS trust. The surrender of the lease on the existing head office is to be financed by the use of £2 million accrued from the sale of other properties held in trust for the Crown by the Women's Royal Voluntary Service.

Parliamentary approval to this use of proceeds from the sale of other properties will be sought in supplementary estimates.

Television Violence

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proposals she has for increasing the powers of (a) Broadcasting Standards Council and (b) the Independent Television Commission in relation to violence on television. [8928]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [13 December 1996]: The BSC and the ITC will be revising their codes relating to violence and other programming issues in 1997. Their existing statutory powers are sufficient to ensure that those revised codes are complied with.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what evidence her Department has recently evaluated on the amount of violence on television. [8930]

Mrs. Bottomley [holding answer 13 December 1996]: The BBC, ITC and BSC recently provided me with wide-ranging reports on violence on television and action taken to protect vulnerable viewers. The main source of evidence provided on the amount of violence on television was a study by Sheffield university, funded by the ITC, the BSC, the BBC and other broadcasters, which suggests that the amount of violence on terrestrial television has fallen in recent years. We shortly expect further results from that study, taking in a wider range of channels.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proposals she has for introducing legislation to reduce the amount of violence on television. [8929]

Mrs. Bottomley [holding answer 13 December 1996]: Existing legislation, recently extended to new digital services by the Broadcasting Act 1996, sets a framework within which broadcasters and their regulators are responsible for the content and scheduling of programmes. There is no need to amend that legislation framework. I have recently agreed with the chairmen of the BBC, ITC and BSC a co-ordinated programme of action to meet public concern about levels of violence of television.

Charity Collections

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what recent consultation her Department has had with local authorities and charities concerning public charitable collections; and if she will make a statement; [8733]

(2) what plans she has to amend the Charities Act 1992 to introduce protection against fraudulent public charitable collections; and if she will make a statement; [8734]

(3) what estimate she has made of the total money donated to fraudulent public charitable collections in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [8735]

(4) when the regulations provided under part III of the Charities Act 1992 concerning public charity collections and referred to in the report, "Public Charitable Collections: Response to Consultation" will come into force; and if she will make a statement; [8887]

(5) what plans she has to institute London-wide regulations on decisions to prosecute for offences related to conducting charity collections in the street without a licence; and if she will make a statement. [8883]

Mr. Sproat: Good progress has been made in implementing the Charities Acts 1992 and 1993, most recently with the commencement on 1 March this year of the statutory framework for charity accounts and reports. Against that programme it has been necessary to delay bringing into force the provisions in part III of the Charities Act 1992, dealing with public charitable collections. This sought to rationalise existing law which provides separately for the licensing of street collections under the Police, Factories Etc. (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1916 and house to house collections under the House to House Collections Act 1939. Since this legislation is already in force, implementation of part III has been given lower priority than other parts of the 1992 and 1993 legislation, which introduced more substantial reforms.

A meeting on public charitable collections was held with practitioners from charities, local authorities and others on 28 February and my officials met with Westminster city council on 23 May. As indicated in the publication "Public Charitable Collections: Response to the Consultation", referred to by the hon. Member, the practical issues involved are complex and it is essential that these are fully considered in designing the regulations, guidance and accompanying practical arrangements before bringing part III into force.

Estimates of the total amount of money donated to fraudulent collections in each of the last five years are not available. In general, however, the public should be vigilant in responding to appeals, as to the charitable status of the organisation to which they are making a donation and as to the bona fides of the collector. The Charity Commission has recently issued a press release to warn people to give carefully to charities, especially at Christmas.

Part III of the Charities Act 1992 was amended by the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 to remove the maximum advance period for applications, in response to a recommendation of the deregulation task force on charities and voluntary organisations. There are no further plans to amend part III. It is already an offence to conduct an unlicensed street collection for charity in London, as it is in other areas for which local regulations have been made under the 1916 Act; in addition, criminal offences—for instance, obtaining property by deception—may be committed where collections take place falsely purporting to be for charity.

Portable Antiquities

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what action the Government intend to take in response to the discussion document on portable antiquities which her Department published in March. [9681]

Mr. Sproat: In the discussion document on portable antiquities published in February 1996, we sought views on proposals for a scheme for the recording of all archaeological finds, of which perhaps as many as 400,000 a year are currently being discovered, in the belief that there was an urgent need to improve the current arrangements. We received a total of 173 responses and I would like to pay tribute to the care which many of the respondents took with their replies. There is a great deal of invaluable advice in the responses which will guide us as we take the initiative forward. I would like in particular to single out the detailed statements from the standing conference on portable antiquities and the National Council for Metal Detecting. Copies of the responses have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Everyone who responded agreed on the importance of recording archaeological finds and on the need to improve the current arrangements, while the balance of opinion was strongly in favour of a voluntary rather than a compulsory system. This means that, for the first time, we have a broad consensus for the way in which this should be taken forward.

In the light of these responses and following further consultation by my Department, I can now announce that we intend to establish a two-year programme of pilot schemes to commence on 1 September 1997 and that we are making £50,000 available for the eight-month period that falls within the year 1997–98. The scheme will be co-ordinated directly by this Department and the funding will be channelled through the Museums and Galleries Commission. The aim of the pilot schemes will be to enable an accurate estimate to be made of the resources that would be needed to extend the scheme across the whole of England. The funding will be directed towards employing additional staff in three or four areas to record finds. Our first step will be to invite any suitable body—museums, but also perhaps county planning departments or other archaeological bodies—to express an interest in bidding for funding and we intend to do this early in the new year.

WALES

Hospital Waiting Times

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the current median waiting periods for patients needing (a) cataract treatment and (b) hip replacement treatment at each hospital where this operation is provided for patients whose operations are purchased by Welsh health authorities, and for Wales as a whole and the equivalent waiting times in each of the last two years; and if he will make a statement. [7467]

Mr. Hague: Information on the median waiting time for those patients who had the relevant treatment in each of the last three years is given in the following table. For each category only those hospitals where there is full information on waiting periods and more than 10 operations were performed have been included. The figures are for operations purchased by health authorities and GP fundholders in Wales.

Housing

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the change in the budget of Tai Cymru between 1996–97 and 1997–98 (a) in real terms and (b) expressed as a percentage. [7762]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The reduction in net capital expenditure between the 1996–97 and 1997–98 financial years is (a) £27.2 million; and (b) 29.9 per cent.

Sea Empress

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the study by Dr. Peter Dyrynda into the effects of the Sea Empress disaster; and if he will make a statement. [8043]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: My right hon. Friend, established the Sea Empress environmental evaluation committee—SEEEC—to assess the environmental effects of the Sea Empress oil spill. Dr. Dyrynda's report, along with a number of others, is being considered by SEEEC whose final report is expected next year.

Ambulance Paramedics

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of whether the objective that ambulance trusts in Wales will provide one qualified paramedic on each emergency medical service ambulance by 1 January 1997 will be achieved. [9343]

Mr. Hague: This is assessed annually at the end of March. The latest position is set out in the Welsh Affairs Committee, Session 1995–96, third report on the training of ambulance paramedics printed on 24 July 1996 and in the Government's response printed on 30 October 1996. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects the final outturn figures for NHS expenditure in 1995–96 to be published. [9341]

Mr. Hague: Outturn figures for NHS expenditure in 1995–96 are in the appropriation account for Wales; and the summarised accounts of district health authorities, family health service authorities, the Welsh Health Common Services Authority, the Health Promotion Authority for Wales and NHS trusts in Wales. It is the responsibility of the Comptroller and Auditor General to lay copies of these accounts before both Houses of Parliament.

Care in the Community

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the Welsh local government associations concerning the transfer arrangements for funding care in the community from 1 April 1997; how much additional money will be provided to each local authority; and if he will make a statement. [9344]

Mr. Hague: I have had the usual consultation with the Welsh Local Government Association on the local government revenue settlement and on the future distribution of mental handicap and mental illness strategy resources. I announced on 12 December the provisional standard spending assessments for local authorities in Wales. The following table shows each authority's provisional SSA and the amount included in the SSA in respect of community care and the mental handicap and mental illness strategies. In addition, each authority will receive direct grant under the mental handicap strategy in 1997–98. These grants will be announced shortly.

Treatment Centres

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairmen of the Welsh health authorities concerning the future of the treatment centres at Rhydlafar, Cardiff and Bridgend. [9342]

Mr. Hague: None. Health authorities, NHS trusts, GPs, community health councils and the centres themselves, were recently consulted by my Department on the future of the treatment centre initiative. The initiative will now continue in 1997–98 as originally planned.

Welsh Language

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects his Department to have its Welsh language scheme approved by the Welsh Language Board and in place. [9703]

Mr. Hague: The Welsh Office's Welsh language scheme was approved by the Welsh Language Board on the 29 November 1996 and will be operational from 13 January 1997. The scheme specifies the measures my Department has taken and will be taking to give effect to the principle established by the Welsh Language Act 1993 that, in the conduct of public business and the administration of justice in Wales, the English and Welsh languages should be treated on a basis of equality. Printed copies of the scheme will be placed in the libraries in due course.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Court Proceedings (Juveniles)

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the implementation of the Pigot report and other matters relating to the treatment of juveniles in court proceedings. [7625]

Mr. Maclean: The advisory group on video evidence, chaired by Judge Thomas Pigot QC, made a number of recommendations in its 1989 report on the treatment of child witnesses—and other witnesses—in criminal trials. The majority of these recommendations have been implemented.

The Criminal Justice Act 1991 provided, in respect of sexual offences and offences involving violence or cruelty, for pre-trial video recordings to be used as a child's evidence-in-chief at court; for a prohibition on the defendant cross-examining a child witness in person; and for trials involving child witnesses to be transferred direct to the Crown Court without the need for a magistrates court to consider the case. The Act also provided that a child's evidence in criminal proceedings should be given unsworn; abolished the presumption that children were not competent as witnesses; and raised the age limit governing a young person's eligibility to be cross-examined via a television link from under 14 to under 17. The Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 removed the requirement, in sexual offence cases, that the judge warn the jury about convicting on the uncorroborated evidence of the victim.

In addition to the legislative changes, the Government have issued, or contributed towards the production of, a variety of documents and guidance notes to promote ways of assisting those children who become involved in the criminal justice system as witnesses. This includes guidance to magistrates courts on the use of screens, as recommended by the Pigot report, and a memorandum of good practice on video recorded interviews with child witnesses in criminal proceedings. In addition, in January, a video, funded by the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children and the Home Office, will be launched offering good practice advice of judges and barristers for handling cases including child witnesses. All these measures are consistent with the Government's policy of giving a high priority to the needs of victims of crime.

The measures that we have implemented are subject to review and research to test their effectiveness. The Government will continue to make further changes where we consider that they will bring improvements to the operation of the justice system.

State Opening of Parliament

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he received from the Metropolitan police concerning the question of 20 November, Official Report, column 621, from the hon. Member for Newport, West on the cost of the state opening of Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [8021]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 6 December 1996]: The Metropolitan police provided a rough estimate of £286,200 for the cost of policing the state opening of Parliament. This figure was, however, not a proper costing. It did not take into account the cost of the normal duties which the officers would otherwise have undertaken; it did not include pre-event planning or post-event debriefs and it was worked out on the basis of a complete eight hour tour of duty for all staff using average manpower cost figures and a ready reckoner. It also excluded the cost of permanent Palace of Westminster staff. It was not, therefore, an accurate reflection of the additional costs to the Metropolitan police nor of the total costs which had been incurred. The extent to which Metropolitan police officers are deployed to police a public order event is an operational decision for the commissioner.

Economic Key Points

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) who is responsible for the security of United Kingdom economic key points; [9042]

(2) what measures he has taken to ensure that the security of economic key points is maintained and improved; and if he will make a statement; [9044]

(3) if he will list the locations of economic key points within the United Kingdom; [9041]

(4) who is responsible for financing the security of economic key points; and what is the total cost; [9043]

(5) who is responsible for financing the security of (i) the national grid site in Wokingham and (ii) the chief reception sites for North sea gas; what measures are in place to ensure that the security of these sites is maintained and improved; and if he will make a statement. [9045]

Mr. Howard: Responsibility for the security of sites designated as economic key points—EKPs—including the cost of protection, rests with their owners. The Government, through the relevant Departments, promote and monitor protective measures and provide advice, guidance and support on security matters. It is not Government policy to disclose the location of EKPs or to detail their security arrangements.

Roisin McAliskey

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what reports he has received from the Director General of the Prison Service on the medical condition of Roisin McAliskey; and if he will make a statement. [8560]

(2) what representations he has received concerning the conditions under which Ms Roisin McAliskey is held; and if he will make a statement. [8559]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 10 December 1996]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 16 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about Ms Roisin McAliskey.

Throughout her time in custody Ms McAliskey has received regular medical attention. There are no specific medical concerns at present; but, as a precaution, following her complaint of stomach pains, Ms McAliskey was taken to Greenwich District hospital for a scan and a full examination by a consultant obstetrician.

The obstetrician confirmed that Ms McAliskey was in good general health, that her 16 week pregnancy was progressing normally and there was no cause for concern. As a further precaution Ms McAliskey was returned to Holloway Prison where specialist ante-natal care is more readily available, should it become necessary.

Representations have been received from some Members of Parliament, the organisation Catholic Justice and Peace and a person claiming to be a friend of the family.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the treatment of Roisin McAliskey; what visits she has been allowed from (a) her mother, (b) other relatives and friends, (c) legal advisers, (d) Irish Teachda D'ala and (e) British hon. Members; and if he will make a statement. [9174]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Max Madden, dated 16 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about Roisin McAliskey.

Representations have been received about the treatment of Ms McAliskey from some Members of Parliament, a local interest group and a person claiming to be a friend of the family. The Irish Embassy also enquired about a visit for her partner. This visit took place on 28 November.

Ms McAliskey was visited by her mother on 6 December. Her partner has visited her on three occasions and she has also had visits from her father, sister, and from legal representatives. One Member of Parliament has also visited Ms McAliskey.

Prisoners (Drug Dependency)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library copies of the most recent guidelines issued by him concerning the treatment of drug dependent prisoners in prison; and how many guidelines, or amendments to guidelines, have been issued since 1990. [9163]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Max Madden, dated 16 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about guidelines concerning the treatment of drug dependent prisoners.

There are three documents two of which are already in the Library: "Caring for drug users", issued in April 1991 and the current Prison Service Drugs Strategy, "Drug misuse in prison", issued in April last year. In the same month we also published Health Care Standard 8, "Clinical Services for Substance Misusers." I enclose a copy for your information, and I am arranging for a complete set of Health Care Standards to be placed in the Library.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the total number of drug dependent prisoners currently detained in prisons in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [9200]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Max Madden, dated 16 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about estimates of the number of drug dependent prisoners.

Drug misuse is a covert activity which makes data on prevalence difficult to obtain and interpret. We do not have definitive information about the scale of drug misuse in prisons; but it is a significant problem. The matter has been the subject of some independent research. For example, a recent study (Maden et al 1995) of 995 males, male youths and females remanded in custody in England and Wales showed that upon psychiatric examination 26% had a harmful or dependant misuse of substances (adult males 23 %, male youths 23% and women 33%). These figures do not include alcohol or cannabis.

When these subjects were questioned about their drug use prior to entering prison 32% had used cannabis, 14% had used opiates, 9% had used prescribed benzodiaezepines, 7% had used illicit benzodiazepines, 8% had used crack cocaine, 6% had used amphetamines and 2% had used cocaine.

A previous study by the same researchers of 1751 sentenced male prisoners in England and Wales (1991) showed that before entering prison 43% had used cannabis, 9% had used opiates, 9% had used amphetamines and 5% had used cocaine.

A major new source of information has also recently become available. Since April 1996 all English and Welsh prisons have introduced mandatory random drug testing. One important result from this development is that for the first time we are routinely assembling a database of the level and nature of drug use in our prisons. Eventually this will allow us to understand more, to follow trends, to manage and target our resources more effectively for tackling drug problems—and in time to be able to measure the impact of our policies.

Prisons (Standing Orders)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the current prison standing orders which apply to prisons in England and Wales; and which public officials are denied access to prisons for inspection purposes under those standing orders. [9166]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Max Madden, dated 16 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about whether a copy of prison standing orders will be placed in the library of the House, and which public officials are denied access to prisons for inspection purposes under those standing orders.

Copies of the current standing orders have already been placed in the library of the House. There is nothing in those orders which deny access to public officials who duties legitimately necessitate visiting a prison for the purposes of inspection.

Patrick Christopher Lynch

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when an application by Patrick Christopher Lynch detained at HMP Parkhurst to be repatriated to the Republic of Ireland was received; when the application was referred to the appropriate authorities in the Republic; what response has been received; when he expects a decision to be made; and if he will make a statement. [9175]

Miss Widdecombe: A request for repatriation to the Republic of Ireland, made by Christopher Lynch, was received at Prison Service headquarters on 17 April 1996. Requests are decided only after consideration of all relevant information by the two states concerned. An initial decision on whether to refer Mr. Lynch's repatriation request to the appropriate authorities in the Republic of Ireland will be made once all the relevant information requested has been received and considered.

Prisoners (Needle Sharing)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what reports he has received, in each of the last three years, and the current year to date, about the extent of needle sharing between HIV positive and other prisoners in prisons in England and Wales. [9167]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Max Madden, dated 16 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about reports received in each of the last three years and the current year to date, about the extent of needle sharing between HIV positive and other prisoners in prisons in England and Wales.

There have been no reports of incidents of needle sharing between HIV prisoners and other prisoners in prisons in England and Wales during the current year or the previous three years.

Prison Medical Service

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the expenditure on the prison medical service for the current year; what is the projected expenditure over each of the next three years; and what proportion of such expenditure is devoted to the costs of drug treatment. [9169]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Max Madden, dated 16 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what is the expenditure on the Prison Medical Service for the current year; what is the projected expenditure over each of the next three years; and what proportion of such expenditure is devoted to the costs of drug treatment.

The delivery of the health care to prisoners in accordance with set standards has been devolved to prison establishments. Governors must therefore allocated appropriate resources from within their establishment budgets. For this reason it is not possible centrally to differentiate health care staff cost from the overall Prison Service budget, nor forecast precise future expenditure.

The expenditure for specialist services and medical suppliers is however known, and for the last financial year is set out in the attached table.

Health care expenditure 1995–96

	£ million
Locums	4.15
Dentist	1.90
Opticians	0.47
Psychiatrists	1.44
Medical/pharmacy supplies	4.45
Total	12.42

For drug treatment and testing initiatives, the following money was secured from the 1995 Public Expenditure Survey.

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	1990–00
Testing	4,880	6,090	7,340	7,340
Treatment	5,440	5,571	5,710	5,710
Total	10,320	11,661	13,050	13,050

These monies are in addition to that already being spent by prisons on existing rehabilitation programmes.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons Dr. Rosemary Wool's appointment as chief medical officer of the prison medical service ended; when Dr. Wool left the service; and if he will make a statement. [9204]

Mr. Howard: Dr. Wool was due to retire on her 60th birthday, the normal retirement age for Home Office employees. As arrangements to find a successor had not been completed by then, Dr. Wool was granted an eight month extension of service and retired on 31 March 1996. A permanent successor has yet to be appointed and the post is currently filled on a temporary basis.

Prisoners (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the denial of (a) compassionate leave and (b) normal parole facilities to prisoners detained in Northern Ireland on temporary transfer. [9170]

Miss Widdecombe: Representations are received occasionally from various sources, including prisoners, legal representatives, hon. Members, Members of the European Parliament and the public, about applications from prisoners for compassionate temporary release and parole. Some of these concern prisoners temporarily transferred to prisons in Northern Ireland.

Bradford Riots (Inquiry Evidence)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the evidence submitted by an official in his Department to the Bradford commission inquiring into matters in the aftermath of the Bradford riots. [9178]

Mr. Kirkhope: Yes. A copy has now been placed in the Library.

Category A Women Prisoners

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many category A women are in: (a) Holloway and (b) Belmarsh prisons (i) on remand and (ii) after conviction; and how many ae pregnant. [9273]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Peter Bottomley, dated 16 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about Category A women in Holloway and Belmarsh prisons.

On 12 December 1996 there were three Category A women in Holloway prison and none in Belmarsh prison. Of those in Holloway prison two were convicted and one unconvicted. The unconvicted prisoner is known to be pregnant.

Category A Remandees

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many category A remandees have subsequently been granted bail before court hearings during the last five years. [9275]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Peter Bottomley, dated 16 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of category A prisoners who have subsequently been granted bail before court hearings during the last five years.

The information requested is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Telephone Tapping

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many office telephone taps have been authorised by chief constables in each of the constabularies in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement; [8858]

(2) what is his policy in respect of decisions by chief constables to tap the office telephones of senior employees of police authorities. [8857]

Mr. Howard: The interception of a communication in the course of its transmission by a public telecommunications system requires a warrant issued by the Secretary of State under the Interception of Communications Act 1985. A decision by a chief constable to monitor calls on a private telephone system operated by the police is not covered by the 1985 Act; such a decision is an operational matter for the chief constable concerned. There is no central record of such authorisations and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for The Home Department, what notification he received of the decision of the chief constable of Merseyside to tap the office telephone of Ms Alison Halford when employed by the Merseyside Police Authority; and if he will make a statement. [8856]

Mr. Howard: It is not the practice of the Government to confirm or deny allegations that interception has taken place in any particular case. Any decision by a chief constable to monitor calls on a private telecommunications system operated by the police is an operational matter which would not require notification to the Home Office.

Ms Alison Halford

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the Government Departments and public bodies involved in the proceedings relating to Ms Alison Halford before the European Commission and European Court of Human Rights, indicating the rank and names of the officials who will attend the court hearing in Strasbourg; and if he will make a statement. [8863]

Mr. Howard: The Departments involved are the Home Office and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. It has not yet been decided which officials will attend the hearing in Strasbourg.

Seat Belts

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) drivers and (b) passengers have been prosecuted for not wearing seat belts in the (i) front seats and (ii) back seats of vehicles in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [8206]

(2) how many (a) drivers and (b) passengers have been prosecuted for not wearing seat belts in the (i) front seats and (ii) back seats of vehicles in Wales in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [8207]

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 13 December, Official Report, column 404.

European Union

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the cost in the last 12 months of sending Ministers and officials to meetings in Brussels and elsewhere in Europe in connection with his Department's handling of EU business. [4947]

Mr. Howard: I have placed a note in the Library setting out the readily available information, which relates to the cost of attending such meetings over the period April to October 1996. Statistics for the last 12 months couldbeobtainedonlyatdisproportionatecost.

Television Licences

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, how many (a) men and (b) women registers of these interests are maintained and regularly updated. The registers are checked by officials before members are included in the consideration of any case.

Orimulsion

Mr. Rogers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the potential environmental impact of the burning of orimulsion in power stations; and if he will make a statement. [8527]

Mr. Page: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade is currently considering an application for consent to extend a power station in order to enable it to burn orimulsion. Environmental information has been submitted as part of that application and objections received to the proposal but no conclusions have yet been reached in relation to the application.

National Fibre Optic Network

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to ensure the United Kingdom has a national fibre optic network; and if he will make a statement. [7606]

Mr. Taylor: The provision of a stable regulatory environment has successfully encouraged the growth of competition in both telecommunications services and infrastructure. This has led to substantial investment in the sector, including rapid growth of optical fibre networks in the UK, to produce a network of seamlessly interconnecting networks. Prices have fallen by 40 per cent. in real terms, quality increased, and number of household covered risen to 93 per cent.

Within the cable sector alone, investment is running at more than £2.5 billion a year, and some 45 per cent. of homes in the country already have the possibility of connection to cable operators.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Azad Kashmir (Prisoners)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the introduction of new laws by the Government of Azad Kashmir enabling prisoners to apply for bail if detained for up to two years without trial; how many prisoners have been granted bail under these laws; and if he will make a statement. [9203]

Dr. Liam Fox: Since we have not received such reports, we have asked our high commission in Islamabad to obtain details. I shall arrange to pass these to the hon. Member.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement concerning the current circumstances of Ghazanfer Ali recently granted bail after being detained in Mirpur prison; and if he will make a statement. [9279]

Dr. Fox: We understand that Gazanfer Ali, who is a Pakistani national, was released from Mirpur prison on bail on 30 November and that he was due to appear in court on 7 December.

Sri Lanka Citizen (Medical Treatment)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will permit Sudarga de Silva, of Sri Lanka, to visit the United Kingdom to receive private medical treatment. [9134]

Dr. Liam Fox: It is policy on grounds of confidentiality for Ministers not to comment publicly on individual applications for entry clearance. I will therefore write separately to the hon. Member.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Treaties (Ponsonby Rule)

Sir Roger Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to be able to provide explanatory memoranda with treaties which are laid under the Ponsonby rule. [9430]

Dr. Liam Fox: We accept that explanatory memoranda can usefully supplement the established Ponsonby procedures by bringing to the attention of Parliament the main features of the treaties with which they are laid. In future therefore every international agreement laid under the Ponsonby rule will be accompanied by an explanatory memorandum. This new procedure will apply to all international agreements signed after 1 January 1997 which are laid under the Pensonby rule, namely those agreements which are concluded subject to ratification, accession, acceptance or approval, and which are laid for a period of 21 sitting days after signature and before ratification or its equivalent.

Arrangements will be made to lay copies of the note for Departments entitled "Guidelines on Explanatory Memoranda for Treaties" in the Libraries of both House.

We should like to thank Lord Lester of Herne Hill, whose initiative led directly to the introduction of the new arrangements.

Ghana

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the recent presidential and parliamentary elections in Ghana. [8912]

Dr. Liam Fox: Our assessment is that these elections were free, fair and transparent. The Commonwealth and EU observers have issued statements indicating that they share this assessment. I am placing these in the Library of the House. I understand that other international observers have reached similar conclusions. We congratulate the Ghanaian people on this reaffirmation on democratic values.

DEFENCE

Gulf War

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) soldiers, (b) sailors, (c) Air Force personnel and (d) medical personnel who were mobilised for Operation Granby in the Gulf war (1) served in (i) Saudi Arabia, (ii) Kuwait and (iii) Iraq and (2) were held in reserve at other locations. [9283]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member.

Expenditure

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of gross domestic product was spent on defence by (a) the United Kingdom, (b) France and (c) the United States of America in the last year for which figures are available. [9011]

Mr. Soames: The information requested, for calendar year 1995, is as follows:

(a) United Kingdom 3.1 per cent.

(b) France 3.1 per cent.

(c) United States 3.9 per cent.

Future Offensive Air System

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made on the future offensive air system for the Royal Air Force. [9704]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Ministry of Defence has decided to carry out a feasibility study into a future offensive air system. The Tornado GR1—now being upgraded to GR4 standard—provides a long-range power projection and air interdiction capability. The study will examine a range of options for maintaining this capability beyond the planned withdrawal date of the GR4 in the second decade of the new millennium.

Study contracts to the value of £35 million are expected to be placed in the new year. Options to be examined include variants of the Eurofighter and other new design and off-the-shelf combat aircraft; unmanned air vehicles; and stand-off air-to-ground missiles launched from transport aircraft. Collaborative options will be pursued.

Industrial Tribunals

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many industrial tribunals have considered cases brought against his Department in each of the last 10 years. [8791]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Information in the form requested is not held centrally, but at least 32 industrial tribunals in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland have considered cases brought by civilian or service personnel against the Ministry of Defence.

Premature Voluntary Release

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people have applied for premature voluntary release in each of the services in each of the last five years. [8792]

Mr. Soames: The number of service personnel who have applied for premature voluntary release in each of the last five years are as follows:

	RN		Army		RAF
	Officers	Ratings	Officers	ORs	Officers	ORs
1991–92	141	2,140	424	9,525	207	1,834

1995–96	161	2,639	384	5,591	223	2,149

British Aerospace Companies

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he intends to take to support the Society of British Aerospace Companies' foresight action initiative. [9309]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The foresight action initiative proposed by the Society of British Aerospace Companies—SBAC—contains a number of very interesting projects, the aims of which are firmly supported by the MOD. My officials are now awaiting detailed submissions from SBAC before evaluating the potential of these projects and the scope for incorporation into MOD plans.

Bowman Project

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Bowman project. [9316]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Bowman is a new combat radio system which will replace the Clansman family of radios. Work on the project definition stage of the programme is largely complete and equipment is being tested in field trials, which are due to end in May 1997. The MOD is currently examining the procurement options open to the Department for production, to determine the most cost-effective way forward. A decision on the way ahead will be taken as soon as possible.

TREASURY

Unemployment Benefits (York)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new claims for unemployment-related benefits have been made by people living in the York travel-to-work area since April 1992; and how many people living in the York travel-to-work area have made one or more new claims for unemployment-related benefits in the same period. [8532]

Mrs Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Dounreay

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what notification his Department received from the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority in respect of the fires in the D9833 wet silo at Dounreay; and what investigations have been conducted by the Scottish Environmental Protection agency. [8674]

Mr. Kynoch: Notification of incidents of this nature would be made by the authority to the nuclear installations inspectorate. Nevertheless, reports by HM industrial pollution inspectorate covering the period April 1988 to March 1996 refer to an incident in 1992 when a small fire occurred in a radioactive waste store as a result of the reaction of traces of sodium metal with moisture. The fire was quickly brought under control and extinguished. Monitoring undertaken in the vicinity at the time indicated no radioactive material had been released.

The Scottish Environment Protection Agency was established on 1 April 1996. It has received no notification of any fires in the wet storage facility. The agency will continue to monitor closely operations at the site.

Student Grants

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number and percentage of students in Scotland who received Scottish Education Department grants in 1990. [9082]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 13 December 1996]: In academic year 1990–91 70,742 students held awards from the Scottish Education Department. This represented 97.8 per cent. of the Scottish domiciled students undertaking full-time courses of higher education in Scotland.

Student Loans

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the cost to public funds of student loans in Scotland in each year since their introduction. [9081]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 13 December 1996]: Expenditure by the Scottish Office on student loans, in each year since their introduction in academic year 1990–91, is as follows:

Financial year	Net total £
1990–91	8,005,194
1991–92	16,486,843
1992–93	24,446,864
1993–94	36,904,818
1994–95	56,589,238
1995–96	78,321,353
1996–97[1]	111,714,000
	332,372,310

Fishery Protection Orders

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list each protection order currently in place under the Freshwater and Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act 1976; and if he will make a statement; [8968]

(2) if he will list each amendment made to the River Tay protection order in each year since 1986; and if he will make a statement. [9039]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The following protection orders have been made under the Freshwater and Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act 1976:-

The Rivers Tweed and Eye Protection Order 1980;
The Upper Spey and Associated Waters Protection Order 1982;
The River Lunan Catchment Area Protection Order 1983;
The River Tummel Catchment Area Protection Order 1983
The River Tay Catchment Area Protection Order 1986;
The West Strathclyde Protection Order 1988;
The River Earn Catchment Area Protection Order 1990;
The River Don Catchment Area (Part) Protection Order 1990;
The Loch Morar and River Morar Protection Order 1992;
The Loch Awe and Associated Waters Protection Order 1992;
The River Clyde Catchment Area (Part) Protection Order 1994;
The North West Sutherland Protection Order 1994;
The River Arkaig, Loch Arkaig and Associated Waters Protection Order 1995.

I have renewed the River Tay Protection Order in 1990 and 1993 to ensure its continuance. The order was varied earlier this year so that it now runs without limit of time. All other protection orders which previously required renewal have been varied in the same way.

Prisoners (Drug Dependency)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of drug dependent prisoners currently detained in prisons in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [9202]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. Max Madden, dated 16 December 1996:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of drug dependent prisoners currently detained in prisons in Scotland.

Drug misuse is an illegal activity which makes it difficult to obtain data on the number of prisoners dependent on drugs. Information is not collected centrally on the number of prisoners being treated by prison medical officers for drug dependence. A number of studies have produced data on the proportion of prisoners who misuse drugs, based on information provided anonymously by prisoners. In the 1994 Prison Survey 45% of prisoners claimed to have used drugs at least once in the previous six months in prison (cannabis 40%, temgesic 22%, heroin 9%, other drugs 15%—some had used more than one drug). The injecting of drugs, however, might be a more useful measure of drug dependence. In the 1994 Prison Survey, 5% (191) of prisoners who responded said they had injected drugs during the previous six months in prison (heroin 4%, temgesic 3%, other drugs 2%—some had used more than one drug). In 2 studies this year, prisoners were asked if they had injected drugs at some time prior to imprisonment. In HMP Low Moss 113 out of 293 prisoners who responded had done so, while in HMP Aberdeen 53 out of 157 prisoners who responded had done so.

Mandatory drug testing, which is being phased in across the Scottish Prison Service, will eventually provide accurate and objective information on the scale and trends of drug misuse. It complements the measures already in the SPS drugs strategy. That includes searching and surveillance to minimise the amount of drugs getting into prisons, closed circuit TV at visits, the use of sniffer dogs and a range of other measures. It also complements the constructive work that is being done in the context of reduction and detoxification. There are drug treatment programmes in 7 prisons, with more planned, and a new abstinence unit was opened at Low Moss prison earlier this year. Prisoners receive a comprehensive information and training programme on HIV, AIDS and drugs within 2 week of admission to prison. All prisons provide education and counselling. Extensive links have been established with community-based drug agencies to provide throughcare and continuing support for prisoners on release. Taken together all these measures represent a major commitment to reduce the drugs problem.

Feudal Superiors

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will bring forward proposals to widen the remit of the Lands Tribunal for Scotland to cover all claims of unreasonable and oppressive behaviour by feudal superiors under feudal law. [4822]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 27 November 1996]: The present remit of the Lands Tribunal already allows it to vary or discharge land obligations which have become unreasonable or inappropriate, those which are unduly burdensome compared with any benefit resulting or which would result from performance of the obligation and those which impede some reasonable use of the land. I do not therefore propose to consider amendments to its remit until the Scottish Law Commission's proposals on a new system of land tenure to replace the present feudal system are available.

Stone of Destiny

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what costs were incurred by his Department in respect of (a) transport, (b) security and (c) ceremonial functions in connection with the return of the Stone of Destiny. [7715]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 5 December 1996]: The costs incurred in relation to the return of the Stone of Destiny are still being collated.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the total costs of the events at (a) Coldstream and (b) Edinburgh of the ceremonies involved in the return of the Stone of Destiny to Scotland; and from what budgets the costs are being met. [7922]

Mr. Forsyth [holding answer 9 December 1996]: The costs incurred in relation to the return of the Stone of Destiny are still being collated.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

34. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the Law Society's proposals for the reform of legal aid with special reference to the control of the legal aid budget. [7632]

Mr. Streeter: All the proposals contained in the Law Society's paper, "Better Value Better Justice", have been carefully considered. Where possible, we are assessing and taking forward these proposals in consultation with the Law Society and other interested parties.

35. Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of recent representations to his Department about proposals for the reform of legal aid. [7633]

Mr. Streeter: I frequently receive representations on this matter from professional bodies and associations, pressure groups, advice services, individual lawyers, and members of the public. I have been encouraged by the response to date and look forward to further discussions and consultation as the reforms progress.

37. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what new proposals he has to reduce the costs of legal aid with particular reference to solicitor's fees. [7635]

Mr. Streeter: The Government's long-term plans for legal aid are set out in the White Paper, "Striking the Balance" (Cm 3305 HMSO). In the short term, I propose to introduce standard fees for advocates in all civil cases and for litigators conducting family and domestic violence cases. Standard fees will provide a better means of controlling expenditure than hourly based payment systems, whilst at the same time providing a quicker more certain remuneration system for lawyers.

Land Registry

36. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what investigations he is conducting into the operations of the Land Registry. [7634]

Mr. Streeter: None. However, the Lord Chancellor's Department's relationship with HM Land Registry is one of close and regular liaison. The Department regularly monitors the performance of the Land Registry against targets set by the Lord Chancellor.

Private Finance Initiative

39. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement about progress with the PFI for new magistrates courts buildings. [7637]

Mr. Streeter: The pathfinder PFI project to provide managed court accommodation to meet the requirements of the Hereford and Worcester magistrates courts committee is proceeding on programme. Expressions of interest from prospective providers are at present being evaluated. A letter has been sent to all local authorities and MCCs informing them of my decision to allow a further four projects to go forward during the coming financial year. These projects are Derbyshire, Humberside, Manchester and Merseyside—Liverpool, Sefton, St. Helens, Knowsley, and Wirral.

Census Returns (Public Access)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to secure continuing public access to the census returns following the closure of the Public Record Office, Chancery lane. [7636]

Mr. Streeter: Public access to the census returns at the Public Record Office, Chancery lane is expected to continue until 7 March 1997. From 10 March 1997, public access will be provided at the new family records centre at Myddelton place, Myddleton street, London, EC1.

Magistrates Courts (Wales)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many magistrates courts there were in Wales in 1978–79; and how many are currently operating. [7626]

Mr. Streeter: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 14 October 1996, Official Report, column 655.

That is, that there are at present 63 magistrates courts in Wales and that no accurate record exists for the number of courts in Wales in 1978.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Employment (Belfast, West)

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many new jobs have been created in the constituency of Belfast, West since 31 August 1994. [5124]

Mr. Ancram: Net employment growth figures are not available at constituency level for the period requested. Although not a direct indicator of job growth, unemployment fell from 8,531 in August 1994 to 6,072 in October 1996.

Publicity

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what promotional and public information campaigns his Department is (a) currently running and (b) planning to run during the next six months; and for each campaign (i) how much it will cost, (1) in total and (2) to his Department, (ii) what agencies or bodies are undertaking the work and (iii) what is its planned duration. [7409]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is provided in the table:

Christmas Expenditure

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much his Department plans to spend on celebrating Christmas and the new year. [7578]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 6 December 1996]: The Northern Ireland Departments plan to spend £31,267 for the Christmas and new year festivities.

Within the Northern Ireland Office, there are a number of functions being hosted by my right hon. and learned Friend, ministerial colleagues and the office. The estimated costs are about £9,200. The cost of Christmas cards, including postage, is estimated at £2,250.

Life Sentence Prisoners

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) loyalist and (b) republican life sentence prisoners are currently conforming with prison regulations and have received release dates. [8722]

Sir John Wheeler: There are currently 12 loyalist and four republican life sentence prisoners with provisional release dates. Provisional in this context means that a prisoner is required satisfactorily to complete a pre-release programme lasting normally around nine months before the Secretary of State will decide whether to release the individual on life licence. Life sentence prisoners are released within 15 days of the Secretary of State's having signed the life licence.

Prisoners are not categorised into various groupings. However, the definitions requested in the question are recorded for purely management purposes and reflect the prisoners' perceived affiliations.

None of the 16 prisoners with a provisional date for release have had the date varied or withdrawn because of a breach of prison regulations.

Action for Community Employment Scheme

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many (a) 18 to 25-year-olds and (b) 25 to 60-year-olds long-term unemployed people have participated in the ACE scheme (i) in the current year and (ii) in each of the previous five years; [8709]

(2) how many participants in the ACE scheme are working part-time; and what is the average number of hours per week they work; [8710]

(3) how many people are currently participating in (a) jobskills, (b) the ACE training scheme and (c) the community work programme; and how many places are available; [8711]

(4) what was the average wage of an ACE participant (a) in the present year and (b) in each of the previous five years; [8712]

(5) how many (a) people aged 40 years or above, (b) men, (c) women, (d) married men, (e) married women and (f) people aged 18 to 25 years have taken part in the ACE scheme in each of the last five years including the current year; and how many participants there were in total. [8714]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Ms Majorie Mowlam, dated 16 December 1996:

Parliamentary Questions Nos. 2027, 2028, 2029, 2030 and 2032

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency (T&EA), to reply to your questions about the Action for Community Employment (ACE) scheme, Jobskills and the Community Work Programme (CWP).

Parliamentary Question 2027 (Ref: 8709)

The ACE scheme is targeted at the long term unemployed in the 18–64 year old age group. I regret that I am unable to provide you with a detailed breakdown of the two age groupings requested. The information is not readily available and could not be provided other than at a wholly disproportionate cost.

Parliamentary Question 2028 (Ref: 8710)

On 27 September 1996, the latest date for which comprehensive information is available, there was 2510 part-time participants on the ACE scheme.

The information you requested regarding the average number of hours worked by part-time workers is not available. Part-time workers are employed by sponsoring organisations and the T&EA does not collect information on average hours worked from them. However, sponsoring organisations are required to employ part-time workers for a minimum of 16 hours and maximum of 30 hours per week.

The number of participants on the dates indicated is as follows:

A. Jobskills—at 8 November 1996: Training for 16,881 young people and adults is supported through the Jobskills programme, with a further 2,606 trainees similarly supported in the Agency's own Training Centres. All 16 and 17 year olds are guaranteed a training place but adult training numbers were capped when Jobskills reached full capacity in September 1996.

B. ACE—at 29 November 1996: 8040 places were available of which 7228 were filled;

C. CWEP—at 6 December 1996: 1190 places were available of which 1020 were filled.

Parliamentary Question 2030 (Ref: 8713)

The T&EA does not record information on the actual wage rates paid to ACE employees. Sponsoring organisations are paid £93 per week for each ACE worker employed. Of this up to £11 can be used to defray overhead expenses. The balance must be used as a contribution towards paying the local rate for the job being undertaken by the ACE employee. Any shortfall between Agency's funding and the local rate is met by the sponsors pay well in excess of the shortfall.

Parliamentary Question 2032 (Ref: 8714)

Much of the information you are seeking is not readily available and could only be provided immediately at a disproportionate cost. The following information is available:

Year	Male	Female	Total
1996	3,700	4,005	7,705
1995	5,117	5,027	10,144
1994	4,894	4,582	9,476
1993	n/a	n/a	9,690

Information in respect of 1992 and 1991 is not available.

I am sorry I am unable to be more helpful in reply to some of your questions but I hope you find the information I have supplied useful.

Cattle Cull

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements have been made in Northern Ireland for the payment of compensation for the slaughter of young bulls aged between 24 and 30 months. [9583]

Mr. Ancram: A scheme was introduced to allow the eligible animals to be slaughtered. Parliamentary approval for this new service will be sought in a spring supplementary estimate for the Northern Ireland agriculture, fisheries and forestry services and support vote, class 1 vote 2. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure totalling £3.25 million has been met by the way of a repayable advance from the contingency fund.

Trials (Delays)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what further progress has been made to reduce delays in coming to trial in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [9582]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Hon. Members will know that a system of administrative time limits has been operating since 1992, aimed at reducing the time defendants spend in custody awaiting trial on indictment.

On 7 December last year, in another place, my noble Friend Baroness Denton in reply to a question from Lord Hylton, Official Report House of Lords, column 87, set out the results of the scheme's first three years. She also announced that the scheme would continue until at least 30 June 1996 and that from 1 November 1995 the overall target for cases to move from first remand to arraignment would be reduced from 11 months to 10 months.

I can now report on the scheme's first four years up to 30 June 1996. Over this period, 80 per cent. of defendants in custody awaiting trial for scheduled offences were arraigned within the set target. Over the past year, the average time to process such defendants has been maintained at 37 weeks. Ninety-five per cent. of non-scheduled defendants in custody also met the target, the average time again being maintained at 29 weeks. The latter is a particularly commendable achievement in the light of a substantial increase over the past year in the proportion of non-scheduled cases.

Worthwhile improvements have also been recorded in the period between arraignment and start of trial. Comparing 1993 with performance over the past year, the average wait for scheduled defendants has fallen from 28 weeks to 11 weeks and for non-scheduled defendants from 11 weeks to nine weeks.

The criminal justice agencies' efforts remain effective, whilst they also continue to explore other means of streamlining and accelerating procedures. In highlighting their effective progress in the operation of the scheme, I have decided to extend it until at least the end of June 1997.

Travelling Community Sites

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are currently living at the travelling community site (a) on the Glen road and (b) at the Monagh bypass, in Belfast, West. [8891]

Mr. Moss: I am informed by Belfast city council, which has responsibility for the provision of sites for travellers, that the number of people currently living at the travellers' community sites (a) on the Glen road and (b) at the Monagh bypass, in Belfast, West are:

	Number of people
(a) Glen road	227
(b) Monagh bypass	74

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the planned completion date of the Monagh woods site for the travelling community, in Belfast, West. [8892]

Mr. Moss: The provision of accommodation sites for travellers in Belfast is a matter for Belfast city council. I understand that Belfast city council is carrying out an economic appraisal of the various options available to provide accommodation for the travellers currently on the Monagh bypass site.

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children (a) under 11 and (b) under 16 years, are currently living in the travelling community sites (i) on the Glen road and (ii) at the Monagh bypass. [8893]

Mr. Moss: I am informed by Belfast city council, which has responsibility for the provision of sites for travellers, that the number of children (a) under 11 and (b) under 16 years of age currently living at the travellers' community sites (i) on the Glen road and (ii) at the Monagh bypass are:

	(a) Under 11	(b) Under 16 (including under 11s
(a) Glen road	86	112
(b) Monagh by-pass	21	40

Race Relations Order

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he plans to lay the draft race relations order for Northern Ireland before Parliament. [8894]

Mr. Ancram: It is my intention to lay this draft order before Parliament at the earliest possible date.

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provisions relating to the availability of living space for members of the travelling community in the district council areas will be included in the proposed draft race relations order. [8895]

Mr. Ancram: There are no specific provisions in the draft legislation relating to this matter.

Public Expenditure Allocations

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list Northern Ireland Office expenditure for the years 1997–98 and 1998–99 broken down into the same categories as in his answer of 10 December, Official Report, column 130, to the hon. Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Waterson) showing, for each category, the corresponding figures and the percentage real terms change from the projections published in his answer of 11 December 1995, Official Report, columns 538–39, to the hon. Member for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans). [9015]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is as follows:

Melbourne Declaration on Injury

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if his Department has signed the Melbourne declaration on injury prevention and control, adopted on 22 February. [8643]

Mr. Moss [holding reply 6 December 1996]: The Melbourne declaration does not provide for formal endorsement by Government of its conclusions. Prevention of accidents and trauma is a key area in the Department of Health and Social Services' regional strategy for Northern Ireland. The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland, the Royal Ulster Constabulary, and the Department of Health and Social Services also published a strategy in July 1995 to reduce fatal and serious road traffic accident casualties.

SOCIAL SECURITY

National Insurance Contributions

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 19 November, Official Report, columns 591–21, on national insurance, how many employees paid (i) at and (ii) below the maximum national insurance contribution rates; and what was the total estimated employed population in each year from 1979–80 and 1995–96. [7933]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the tables.

Child Support Appeal Tribunals

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals which have been lodged with a child support appeal tribunal are currently pending; what is the average length of time between the lodging of an appeal to a child support appeal tribunal and its hearing; and in how many cases the child support officer's decision has been upheld. [8793]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: At the end of November 1996, there were 4,227 appeals pending with a child support appeal tribunal of which 524 had already been listed for a future session. The average length of time between lodgement and first hearing was 26 weeks. During November, 466 cases were determined: in 84 cases the child support officer's decision was upheld.

War Pensions

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many new claims were made in the last available year for war pensioner's mobility supplement; and how many of these were (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful. [9338]

Mr. Heald: In the 12 months ending September 1996, the last period for which figures are available, there were 3,351 claims made in respect of war pensioner's mobility supplement. During the same period 4,435 decisions on claims for the supplement were made, of which 2,619 resulted in awards. The decisions made in any one period may not necessarily relate to the claims made during the same period.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many individuals currently receive the war pensioner's mobility supplement; what is the average amount paid per recipient; and what is the total amount paid each year as a percentage of total social security expenditure. [9337]

Mr. Heald: As at 30 September 1996, the last date for which figures are available, 23,602 war pensioners were receiving mobility supplement. The current amount payable is a flat rate of £37.75 weekly. Expenditure on mobility supplement is estimated at £45 million in 1996–97. This amounts to 0.05 per cent. of total social security expenditure.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the expected savings from the proposed changes to war pensions (a) in total and (b) for each proposed change, indicating the percentage of total social security expenditure in each case. [9335]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recipients of war disablement pension failed to apply for a pension increase in the five most recent years for which figures are available; and how many increased awards were paid to recipients of war disablement pensions in each of those years. [9331]

Mr. Heald: A war disablement pension may be increased for a range of reasons; for example; as a result of uprating of age changes which are made automatically or because the pensioner's service-related disablement has increased. In the latter case, the war pensioner may ask the Secretary of State to review his assessment of the degree of disablement. Information on the number of war pensioners whose disablement has increased but who have not required such a review is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Information in the table shows the number of awards increased following request for a review.

1992–93: 13,196
1993–94: 14,204
1994–95: 18,576
1995–96: 14,514

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of war veterans who would cease to be entitled to the war pensioner's mobility supplement if the 20 per cent. disability threshold for entitlement were raised to 40 per cent. [9333]

Mr. Heald: It is estimated that, annually, 800 war pensioners with disablement assessments below 40 per cent. would no longer qualify.

No one already in receipt of mobility supplement at the point of the proposed change would be affected.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of war veterans who would cease to be entitled to the unemployability supplement if the 20 per cent. disability threshold were raised to 80 per cent. [9332]

Mr. Heald: It is estimated that about 400 new claims for unemployability supplement would not succeed if the threshold for disablement were raised to 80 per cent. No war pensioner currently receiving the allowance would be affected.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many new claims for war pensions were made in the last available year by (a) men and (b) women aged over 65 years. [9334]

Mr. Heald: In the period October 1995 to 30 September 1996, a total of 27,215 new claims for war disablement pension were made. The number of claims made by men and women aged over 65 is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many reminder notices for returning forms claiming pension increases were issued to war pensioners in each of the last five years. [9330]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if there will be a waiver of the seven-year rule for unconditional claiming of war pensions following discharge in the case of Gulf war veterans whose entitlements will not be determined until the conclusion of the studies he has commissioned into Gulf war illnesses; and if he will make a statement. [9173]

Mr. Heald: No. Such a waiver is unnecessary. Anyone who considers that disablement may be due to service in the Gulf may claim a war pension at any time. Where a claim is made within seven years of termination of service there is no onus on the claimant to show that disablement is due to service. Even where a claim is made more than seven years after termination of service, it is only necessary for there to be reliable evidence to create a reasonable doubt that disablement might be due to or aggravated by service. The benefit of that reasonable doubt is always given to the claimant.

The Secretary of State may review a decision to reject a claim at any time and on any ground. Where a claim made within seven years of termination of service is later reviewed the same conditions which applied at the time the claim was made apply to the review.

State Pensions

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will recalculate the figures in table 6, para 7.12 of "Options for Equality in State Pension Age" (a) on the basis of current prices and (b) on the assumption that an individual reverted to the full basic state pension at 70 years of age. [9162]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the tables:

Table 6, paragraph 7.12 of options for equality in state pension age: recalculated on the basis of 1996–97 benefit rates

Note:
In the second table, it has been assumed that where someone retired before the pivot age then their reduced pension will be increased to the full basic rate when they get to 70. For those that retire after the pivot age, and thus receive a higher initial pension, it has been assumed that this higher rate of pension will continue to be paid after age 70.

Disability Allowance

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received regarding recent changes in disability allowance; and if he will list the organisations concerned. [9307]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is not yet available in the format requested. However, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received a number of representations. The organisations which have written since the beginning of October are: Mencap, Mental Welfare Commission for Scotland, Disabled Drivers Association, the Society for the Mentally Handicapped, the Patients Council, the Society for Mentally Handicapped Children and Adults, the Robert Ferguson Unit and Escape.

I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible with the outstanding information.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have had their disability allowance (a) reduced and (b) discontinued since the introduction of the benefit. [9305]

Mr. Mitchell: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table. Information on attendance allowance, industrial injuries disablement benefit, the pneumoconiosis, byssinosis and miscellaneous diseases benefit scheme, the workmen's compensation supplementation scheme and war disablement pensions is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Hearing Loss

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent medical evidence has been evaluated by his Department in respect of the link between hearing loss and military service; and if he will publish the evidence. [9336]

Mr. Heald: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Davyhulme (Mr. Churchill) on 12 December 1996, Official Report, column 360.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in (a) hospitals and (b) community homes in the NHS have had their mobility allowance withdrawn or reduced since the introduction of the benefit. [9306]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Prior to the changes to legislation governing payment of the mobility component of disability living allowance to people in hospital, the mobility component was not affected by admittance to hospital or similar institutions.

Some 7,000 people were affected by the withdrawal of mobility component of disability living allowance when the changes were introduced on 31 July. It is not possible to identify separately those in hospital and similar institutions.

Information regarding the numbers subsequently affected by withdrawal of the mobility component is not yet available.

War Widows' Rent Allowance

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will list (a) the number of widows who currently receive the war widows' rent allowance, (b) the average amount paid per recipient and (c) the total amount paid in each of the last five years as a percentage of total social security expenditure; [9339]

(2) how many new claims were made in the last available year for the war widows' rent allowance, indicating the number of these that were (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful. [9340]

Mr. Heald: As at 30 September 1996, the last date for which figures are available, 1,060 widows were in receipt of rent allowance. The current maximum amount payable is £30 a week. The average amount paid per recipient is estimated at £23 per week. During the period January 1996 to September 1996, the only period for which figures are available, 491 new claims were received. During the same period, 447 decisions were made, of which 50 resulted in awards. The decisions made in any one period may not necessarily relate to the claims made during the same period.

The total amount paid by way of rent allowance over the last five years is not available. Expenditure for 1996–97 is estimated at about £1 million. This is 0.0014 per cent. of total social security expenditure.

Written Answers to Questions

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

"New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans"

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what costs quoted in the document, "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans", were prepared in his Department; what detailed assumptions and interpretations were provided to officials in his Department to enable preparation of each cost; and what was the total cost to public funds of preparing each estimate. [6343]

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer December 2 1996]: The Department for Education and Employment, in conjunction with the Treasury, prepared factual material relating to costings published in "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" numbered 32 to 53. The detailed assumptions and interpretations that were provided to officials are set out in my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary's reply to the hon. Member today. It is not normal working practice to keep a record of the time spent in providing factual information to Ministers and it is not therefore possible to offer a reliable estimate of the costs involved.

Motivation and Achievement

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State of Education and Employment when she plans to establish the national advisory group on improving motivation and tackling under-achievement. [8841]

Mr. Paice: I regard the establishment of the advisory group as an essential first step in the development of the relaunch strategy, because I want to harness the expert advice of all our partners. I expect the group to hold its first meeting early in 1997.

National Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the findings of the study "The Assessment of NVQs" by the University of Sussex institute of education. [8897]

Mr. Paice: The author of the report, Professor Eraut, accepted the invitation of the National Council for Vocational Qualification to address its NVQ policy committee on 5 December to discuss his report. The council will take those findings into account when revising the requirements for NVQs. The research raised important questions about the difficulties of assessment in NVQs, particularly when it occurs away from the job, but it also showed that very few practitioners wanted to go back to the old patterns of training and assessment.

Stammering

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will provide financial support for the distribution of the British Stammering Association teachers' video pack to schools nationwide. [8913]

Mrs. Gillan: The Department made a major contribution to the costs of producing the video. We have assisted the British Stammering Association with the distribution of copies to local education authorities. We shall be advertising the video in "Schools Update", a departmental publication which goes to every school in England.

Teachers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the timetable and consultation procedure on proposals to modify the arrangements for meeting the pension costs of early retirement for teachers in maintained and in independent schools. [9303]

Mrs. Gillan: The proposals were issued for consultation on 22 October 1996, with a closing date for responses of 17 January 1997. My right hon. Friend will take final decisions after that date.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will estimate the increase in contingent liabilities for trustees of schools administered by charities following the proposed modification of funding arrangements for early retirement pensions for teachers. [9304]

Mrs. Gillan: My right hon. Friend does not expect there to be an increase in contingent liabilities following the proposed reforms of premature retirement arrangements for teachers. Independent schools make their own decisions on premature retirement. The ongoing pension costs they will incur for premature retirements granted after 1 April 1997 will be liabilities, but they will not be contingent.

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) which local education authorities in the current year are budgeted to spend at or below the education standard spending assessment level; [9186]

(2) if she will list the local education authorities that have budgeted to spend over their education standard spending assessment level in the current financial year, indicating the percentage of excess expenditure planned in each case. [9185]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows each local education authority's education standard spending assessment and education budget for 1996–97, and the percentage difference.

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Denis MacShane, dated 13 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many men and women are currently held in prison in connection with charges or convictions relating to non-payment of the television licence.

Provisional information for 31 October 1996, the latest date for which figures are available, is that three males and no females were held in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales in connection with non-payment of television licences

Airguns

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, how many airguns are currently licensed. [7046]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 2 December 1996]: Higher-powered air weapons require a firearm certificate issued by the police. Information about how many are licensed is not recorded centrally and is not distinguished from other firearms in the total figure. Such information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

HEALTH

Paediatric Intensive Care Beds

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 20 November, Official Report, column 596, on paediatric intensive care beds, how many of the additional beds (a) are scheduled to open this year, (b) will open shortly, giving the timetable and location and (c) are now available, indicating their location. [6670]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 28 November 1996]: The report "Paediatric Intensive Care" (May 1996), copies of which are available in the Library, described plans to open 23 additional designated paediatric intensive care beds and seven high dependency beds in 1996–97. The current position is as shown in the table.

Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will announce changes in the membership of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority. [9680]

Mr. Horam: Further to my announcement on 7 November at columns 623–25, when I said that a further announcement would be made on one additional appointment to the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority, I am pleased to announce that the following has been appointed as a member:

> Dr. Joan Kathleen Stringer, principal of Queen Margaret college, Edinburgh, and member of the Scottish standing committee of the national committee of inquiry into higher education.

This appointment, in common with those announced previously, was made in accordance with guidance issued by the Commissioner for Public Appointments following the first report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life—the Nolan Report Cm 2850–1, May 1995.

Junior Doctors' Hours

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress the Government are making in their target of reducing to 56 by 31 December the number of hours worked weekly by junior doctors. [8804]

Mr. Malone: Steady progress is being made in reaching the ceiling of 56 hours average weekly working hours for junior doctors. This target is contained in the "New Deal on Junior Doctors' Hours", copies of which area available in the Library. At 30 September 1996 regional task forces reported that 22,221 junior doctors, or 78.4 per cent. of all juniors, were complying in full with all the new deal hours limits, including the 56-hour ceiling.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals his Department has made to alter the target of 56 hours to be worked weekly by junior doctors by 31 December. [8805]

Mr. Malone: I have no proposals to change the target of 56 hours maximum average weekly hours of work contained in the "New Deal on Junior Doctors' Hours", copies of which are available in the Library. I have made it clear that the Government have a strong commitment to action to bring all junior doctors within this ceiling.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a copy of the recent NHS executive internal report on junior doctors' hours. [8807]

Mr. Malone: No. The report concerned is an internal discussion paper and as such is covered by exemption 2 part II of the "Code of Practice on Access to Government Information (Internal Advice)".

Tuberculosis, Scurvy and Rickets

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of (a) tuberculosis, (b) scurvy and (c) rickets were reported (i) nationally and (ii) in each region in each year region in each year since 1980. [8806]

Mr. Horam: The numbers of notifications of tuberculosis to the Office for National Statistics for 1980 and provisional figures for 1995 are given in the table. Figures for the intervening years are given by standard region in table 5 of the annual publications "Series MB2 Communicable Disease Statistics", copies of which are available in the Library. Changes in the methods for recording numbers of notifications mean that total notification figures for 1980 and 1981 include cases of chemoprophylaxis but from 1982 totals excludes chemoprophylaxis are given. Cases of tuberculosis chemoprophylaxis are not cases of actual tuberculosis and most are therefore not notified. There was 458 cases of chemoprophylaxis in 1995.

Data are not collected centrally on scurvy or rickets. National diet and nutrition surveys since 1980 do not show any evidence of the vitamin C deficiency which causes scurvy in the general population. There are occasional reports of rickets in young children, caused by vitamin D deficiency from insufficient exposure to sunlight. The Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy has established an expert sub-group on the nutritional aspects of bone health which is considering this.

Practice Nurses (Pensions)

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) for what reasons practice nurses have not been allowed to transfer their contributions from the NHS pension fund to practice pension schemes; [8964]

(2) for what reasons no explanation was given to practice nurses in respect of requirements made of them to remove their pensions from the NHS pension fund and to take out private pensions; [8966]

(3) how many practice nurses have been advised to take out private pensions to date; [8962]

(4) what factors underlay his decision to remove practice nurses from the NHS pension fund; [8963]

(5) how many practice nurses came out of the NHS pension fund in (a) 1989, (b) 1990 and (c) 1991; [8965]

(6) when he last had discussions with the British Medical Association and the Royal College of Nurses about the removal of practice nurses' pensions from the NHS pension fund to private pension schemes. [8967]

Mr. Malone: There will be an announcement shortly on entry of general practitioner practice staff including practice nurses to the national health service pension scheme.

Genetically Engineered Soya

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to protect public health regarding the increased use of imported soya which has been genetically engineered; and if he will make a statement. [8959]

Mr. Horam: Ministers are advised on the safety of foods and ingredients obtained from genetically modified—GM—organisms by an independent committee of experts, the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes. The ACNFP assessed the imported GM soya beans developed by Monsanto in 1994 and concluded that they were toxicologically and nutritionally equivalent to, and therefore as safe as, conventional soya beans.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many cases of E.coli infection have been reported in east Lancashire since 1 December;[9223]

(2) what assessment he has made of the source of the E.coli infection in east Lancashire. [9222]

Mr. Horam: E.coli infection has been isolated in clinical samples from 12 individuals, including one outside the area who has been linked to this outbreak. Of these, nine have been or are ill, but all are recovering. The outbreak is being investigated locally by a control team, which comprises medical, scientific and environmental health experts. Officials in the Department of Health and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food are closely monitoring the progress of the local team and the action taken. Detailed epidemiological and microbiological investigations are continuing and precautionary measures have been taken to ensure that public health in the locality is not jeopardised.

Social Services White Paper

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations he (a) has had and (b) proposes to have with local authorities about his forthcoming White Paper on social services, with reference to the first paragraph of part D of the guidelines on central-local relations. [9317]

Mr. Burns: We expect to meet leaders of the social services authorities to discuss the proposed White Paper early in the new year.

SCOTLAND

Potato Prices

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he collates about the current levels of potato prices; and if he will list the prices for the current year and each of the past five years. [8346]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Information about average wholesale market prices is collected for statistical purposes and published annually in the "Economics Report on Scottish Agriculture" by the Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department and these are as follows for each of the last five years. Current year (1996) provisional figures should be amiable in February 1997.

Learning Difficulties

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will use the introduction of mandatory baseline assessment to provide effective screening for children at risk of literacy and numeracy difficulties. [9496]

Mrs. Gillan: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Sir J. Hannam) on 3 December 1996, Official Report, column 611.

Schools (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how she plans to monitor ethnic minority achievement through the national curriculum. [8811]

Mrs. Gillan: As I announced on 5 September, we propose to use the baseline statistics on the ethnic composition of each school, which we will be collecting through the annual schools census, as a basis for considering ways of monitoring ethnic minority pupils' progress through national curriculum assessment. We aim to consult on these in due course.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if she will list the new arrangements for collecting baseline statistics on the ethnic composition of schools; [8812]

(2) when she plans to introduce the collection of baseline statistics on the ethnic composition of schools. [8813]

Mrs. Gillan: We included two new questions in the 1996 schools census covering (i) the total number of minority ethnic pupils, and (ii) the total number of pupils for whom English is a second language, in each school. For the 1997 schools census, we will include a more detailed count of the number of pupils in each ethnic group for the school as a whole, and a separate count, in secondary schools only, of the number of pupils aged 15 in each ethnic group at the start of the academic year.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the School Curriculum Assessment Authority and the National Council for Vocational Qualifications will report their recommendations on how best to introduce ethnic monitoring for post-16 qualifications. [8814]

Mrs. Gillan: Current plans are that SCAA and NCVQ will provide advice to Ministers on the data collection recommendations in Sir Ron Dearing's report on 16 to 19 qualifications by May 1997.

Legislation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many items of legislation relating to her Department have been repealed since January 1994; how many statutory instruments were introduced during the same period; and how many of the latter were (a) deregulatory and (b) fee orders. [9373]

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster today.

Personal Services Industry

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will place in the Library a copy of the existing guidance, covering the acceptance of job advertisements by jobcentres; if the jobs on offer require the applicant to work as a model, or in (a) a sauna bath, (b) a massage parlour, (c) an escort agency and (d) a kissogram agency. [9613]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 17 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to write to you about your request that the Employment Service's existing guidance covering vacancies for employment as a model, in a sauna bath, a massage parlour, an escort agency or a kissogram agency be placed in the Library. This falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of the Agency.

The information requested is contained in the Guide to Job Broking volume 1 and I am arranging for a copy to be placed in the Library. The relevant instructions are contained in chapter 3, paragraphs 186 to 202.

In the light of recent events the Secretary of State has asked for this present guidance to be reviewed. This work is in hand and, subject to legal advice, should shortly be available. I will arrange for the new guidance to be sent to you and to be placed in the Library.

I hope this is helpful.

Schools (Performance)

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when assessment she has made of the relative performance of grant-maintained and local authority schools. [9786]

Mr. Forth: The 1996 school performance tables show that 50 per cent. of pupils in grant-maintained schools achieved five or more good GCSE passes, compared with 41 per cent. of pupils in LEA schools. There was almost no difference in the performance of pupils in selective schools in the two sectors, but 46 per cent. of pupils in GM comprehensive schools achieved five or more good GCSE passes compared with 40 per cent. in LEA schools. Analysis of the GCSE performance tables from 1992 to 1996 shows that GM schools have made rather more progress than comparable LEA schools in raising standards year on year. In the 1996 national curriculum assessments for 7, 11 and 14-year-olds, a higher proportion of pupils in GM schools reached or exceeded the expected levels of performance at each key stage. Details are set out in the following tables:

Table 1: Percentage of 15-year-old pupils achieving graded GCSE results in 1996

	Grades (per cent.)	Grades (per cent.)	Grades (per cent.)
1A: all schools

Work Accidents (Cost)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the cost to the economy of accidents at work in each year since 1990; and if she will make a statement. [9442]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have been asked to reply.

The Health and Safety Executive estimates that the total cost to the economy of work accidents, including preventable damage-only accidents, and work-related ill health was between £6 billion and £12 billion in 1990.

The next updating of these costs by the Health and Safety Executive will be in 1998. The updating will cover costs for 1995–96, on which the necessary data will be compiled from the Labour Force Survey.

Building Research Establishment

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which projects that the Building Research Establishment is currently undertaking will cease on privatisation. [9391]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I have been asked to reply.

I do not anticipate that any projects will cease as a result of privatisation.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Belize

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy that no British funds or loans will be disbursed for the paving of the Belize southern highway until the necessary social and environmental safeguards for the protection of the rainforest and the Maya peoples of Toledo district are in place. [9509]

Dr. Liam Fox: Our appraisal of the Belize southern highway project will take fully into account the social and environmental impact of paving the road before a decision is made on Britain's financial contribution.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Tea Room

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee (1) what was the total number of supervisors and managers responsible for the supervision of services provided by the House of Commons Tea Room in each year from 1990 to 1995; [9020]

(2) what was the total wage bill of the kitchen and counter staff in the House of Commons Tea Room in each year from 1990 to 1995; [9024]

(3) how many management and supervisory staff are planned to be responsible for the House of Commons Tea Room when all facilities are fully operational; [9028]

(4) how many counter and kitchen staff were in attendance over a full working week in the House of Commons Tea Room in each year from 1990 to 1995; [9018]

(5) how many House of Commons Tea Room staff have had their working hours reduced in the past six months; [9026]

(6) what was the total number of hours worked by counter and kitchen staff in the House of Commons Tea Room in each year from 1990 to 1995; [9019]

(7) how many counter and kitchen staff are planned to be in attendance over a full working week in the House of Commons Tea Room when all facilities are operational. [9027]

Sir Colin Shepherd: These are matters for the Director of Catering Services. I have asked her to write to the hon. Gentleman.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee what consultations took place with hon. Members prior to introducing the most recent changes in the House of Commons Tea Room. [9022]

Sir Colin Shepherd: Between 3 March and 5 May 1993, as part of its inquiry into refreshment services for the House of Commons, the Catering Committee took formal oral evidence from the hon. Members for Warrington, North (Mr. Hoyle), for Wolverhampton, South-East (Mr. Turner) and for Burnley (Mr. Pike), on behalf of the parliamentary Labour party, from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton (Mr. Kaufman) and from the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood). The evidence from these hon. Members included comments on the Members' Tea Room.

Written submissions, dealing in part with the Members' Tea Room, were also received from the hon. Members for Clydesdale (Mr. Hood), for Wrexham (Dr. Marek) and for Reading, West (Sir A. Durant).

These submissions were received in response to a notice inserted in the "All Party Notices," inviting comments from all hon. Members on the various aspects of the proposed refurbishment of Refreshment Department outlets and premises.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee if he will place in the Library copies of the consultation documents relating to organisational changes in the Tea Room. [9023]

Sir Colin Shepherd: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the First Report from the Catering Committee, Session (1993–94), HC (1993–94) 75–I and –II, which includes relevant documentation.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee what was the total capital cost of those changes to the House of Commons Tea Room introduced in 1996. [9021]

Sir Colin Shepherd: The refurbishment of the Tea Room was carried out in conjunction with the construction of the new Terrace cafeteria kitchen, which also serves the Tea Room. It is not, therefore, possible to allocate the costs of the various elements of the project meaningfully between the two areas.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee what estimate he has made of the average amount of time it will take an average customer in the House of Commons Tea Room to be served hot food when all facilities are fully operational. [9029]

Sir Colin Shepherd: As the new service has been in operation for less than two weeks, it is not possible at this stage to forecast the average time that it might take for a customer to be served hot food. I have, however, requested the Director of Catering Services to monitor the time taken to serve hon. Members; the Catering Committee will, of course, continue to keep the matter under review.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee what surveys he intends to undertake on customer attitudes to the changes introduced in the House of Commons Tea Room over the last 12 months. [9030]

Sir Colin Shepherd: The Catering Committee is keeping the matter under constant review through informal consultation with hon. Members, scrutiny of the comments book in the Members' Tea Room and through discussions with the Director of Catering Services. Any formal survey would be conducted by the management of the Refreshment Department, and although I am not aware of any such plans at present, the Department has conducted annual in-depth surveys in June or July in each of the last three years.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Legislation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Attorney-General how many items of legislation relating to his Department have been repealed since January 1994; how many statutory instruments were introduced during the same period; and how many of the latter were (a) deregulatory and (b) fee orders. [9368]

The Attorney-General: I refer to the hon. Member to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Paymaster General.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

"New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans"

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what costs quoted in the document, "New labour's Public Expenditure Plans", were prepared in his Department; what detailed assumptions and interpretations were provided to officials in his Department to enable preparation of each cost; and what was the total cost to public funds of preparing each estimate. [6351]

Mr. Hanley: This Department, in conjunction with the Treasury, prepared factual material relating to costings published in "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" numbered 1, 2, 3 and 86. The detailed assumptions and interpretations that were provided to officials were set out in my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary's reply to the hon. Member of today. It is not the normal working practice to keep a record of the time spent in providing factual information to Ministers and it is not therefore possible to offer a reliable estimate of costs involved.

Hong Kong Governor

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what allowances are paid to the Governor of Hong Kong; and how they are treated for tax purposes. [9141]

Mr. Hanley: The Governor, like his predecessors, receives entertainment, education and leave allowances from the Hong Kong Government. These allowances are not subject to Hong Kong tax.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current salary paid to the Governor of Hong Kong; and what tax treatment applies to that salary. [9142]

Mr. Hanley: The Governor's current salary, paid by the Hong Kong Government, is HK$3,036,000 per annum, equivalent to about £237,000 at present exchange rates. This figure is set at 125 per cent. of the Hong Kong Chief Secretary's salary. The Governor's salary, like that of his predecessors, is not subject to Hong Kong tax. An independent review of the Governor's salary and tax position was commissioned in 1993, which recommended that there should be no change in the calculation of his salary or in its tax free status.

Children (Payment of Airfares)

Sir Alan Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many children under the age of 16 years had air fares subsidised (a) wholly and (b) partly by reason of their relationship to service personnel and employees of his Department for travel between the United Kingdom and (i) other EU states and (ii) non-EU states in the last year for which information is available; and what was the total cost of the subsidy. [9321]

Mr Hanley: This Department does not distinguish by age between children in receipt of children's concessionary journeys. Officers serving overseas may claim the whole cost of no more than:

three journeys a year for children in primary or secondary boarding school education;

two journeys a year for unmarried children studying full-time for their first degree at university or college provided they have taken no more than one year away from full-time education; one journey a year for unmarried children under 21 who are unemployed or undergoing vocational training.

In 1995–96, the last full year for which figures are available, this Department—diplomatic wing and Overseas Development Administration—paid for 145 air fares in respect of 120 children to EU countries, and for 1,091 air fares in respect of 728 children to non-EU countries. Total expenditure was £1,009,109.

Hong Kong (Contracts)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those major contracts which will straddle the transition in Hong Kong which have been considered by the Sino-British joint liaison group, the date of their award, the successful contractor and the approximate value of the contract. [9607]

Mr. Hanley: The Sino-British joint liaison group has discussed a large number of contracts and franchises which will straddle the transition. These include contracts on infrastructure development such as for the new airport, and the provision of power and transport services. I will write to the hon. Member with a full list of the contracts, and, where known, the dates of their award, the name of the successful contractors, and the value of each contract. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery (Northern Ireland)

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list (a) the number of projects in Northern Ireland which have been given funding by the Millennium Commission and (b) the number of projects from Northern Ireland which are currently under consideration by the Millennium Commission. [3841]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall write to the hon. Member in my capacity as chairman of the commission and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

"New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans"

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what costs quoted in the document, "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans", were prepared in his Department; what detailed assumptions and interpretations were provided to officials in his Department to enable preparation of each cost; and what was the total cost to public funds of preparing each estimate. [6344]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department of National Heritage, in conjunction with the Treasury, prepared factual material relating to costings published in "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" numbered 54 and 55. The detailed assumptions and interpretations that were provided to officials are set out in my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary's reply to the hon. Member of today. It is not the normal working practice to keep a record of the time spent in providing factual information to Ministers.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Web Site

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to open his own web site. [9438]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The matter is under consideration.

Legislation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many items of legislation relating to his Department have been repealed since January 1994; how many statutory instruments were introduced during the same period; and how many of the latter were (a) deregulatory and (b) fee orders. [9374]

Mr. Bates: An analysis of new regulations introduced by all Departments during 1994 and 1995 is given in the table. By the end of 1996 the total number of deregulatory orders will have risen to 1,000. Comprehensive information about the number of other regulations is only gathered after the end of the year. A fuller analysis of regulations made during 1996 will be carried out as soon as the necessary information is available from HMSO and will be provided to the hon. Member.

Deregulatory measures	218	151
NHS Trusts	269	176
Fees and local provisions	188	152
EU and international obligations	151	140
Other (possible impact on business)	141	93
Other (no impact on business)	500	692
Commencement orders, Orders in Council and others not subject to Parliamentary procedures	1,867	1,963

A list of regulations repealed or amended since 1993 under the Government's deregulation initiative as at April 1996 was placed in the House Libraries in May. A revised list of the 1,000 regulations repealed or amended by the end of December will be published early in the new year.

No. 2 Marsham Street

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a progress report on the future of No. 2 Marsham street. [8126]

Mr. Freeman: Responsibility for the use of No. 2 Marsham street has been delegated under the terms of its framework document to the Property Advisers to the Civil Estate under its chief executive, Mr. Neil Borrett. The agency is therefore responding to the question.

Letter from N. E. Borrett to Mr. Harry Greenaway, dated 13 December 1996:

The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster has asked me to write to you in response to your Parliamentary Question regarding the future of 2 Marsham Street.

The decision to demolish 2 Marsham Street was announced by the Secretary of State for the Environment in February 1992. The current occupants, the Department of the Environment, are to relocate to Ashdown House and Eland House in Victoria following the completion of fitting out works now in progress. These moves are likely to be completed around Easter 1997. The other occupants of 2 Marsham Street, the Department of Transport, were successfully relocated to Great Minster House in 1995.

An international urban design competition was held earlier this year to produce designs which will guide the master planning for the future redevelopment of the site. Entrants were asked to submit designs which promoted a mixture of uses, make effective use of the available space and related well with the site's urban context. The results of the competition were announced by the Deputy Prime Minister in October. Work is planned to start on the demolition of 2 Marsham Street in April 1997 and to be completed in the Autumn of 1998, following which the site will be redeveloped for Government use if there is a requirement or sold.

TREASURY

"New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans"

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what interpretations or assumptions were made in costing the spending commitments described as having been made by the Labour party in the document, "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans"; and if the same interpretations and assumptions were adopted by each Government Department. [6338]

Mr. Waldegrave: The interpretations and assumptions identified by Ministers, assisted by their special advisers, are set out for each costing. These interpretations and assumptions were used by all Government Departments. In addition, general guidance was provided as set out in my separate written answer of today. Final responsibility for the judgments made in the document "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" rests with Treasury Ministers.

FOREIGN OFFICE

1. Increase Overseas Aid

The cost of restoring the Overseas Aid budget to the same percentage of GDP as in 1979.

2. Reverse cuts in the World Service and British Council

The cost of restoring funding to the BBC World Service and the British Council to the level in 1995–96 in real terms.

3. Rejoin UNESCO

The cost of rejoining UNESCO.

MINISTRY OF AGRICULTURE FISHERIES AND FOOD

4. Introduce an early retirement scheme for farmers

The cost of the United Kingdom taking up the CAP early retirement scheme, assuming a 25 per cent take up amongst eligible farmers.

5. Increase the number of state vets

The cost of employing the same number of veterinary staff as in 1979.

6. Create more Environmentally Sensitive Areas

The cost of a 10 per cent. increase in the current provision for ESAs.

DEPARTMENT OF TRADE AND INDUSTRY

7. Establish Regional Development Agencies in England

The cost of:

8 English regional development agencies each with an annual administrative cost equivalent to that of the Welsh Development Agency.

The RSA budget to be increased overall so that England receives as generous a sum in relation to its proportion of total UK unemployment as the average of the Scottish and Welsh take.

8. Establish a Business Development Bank

The cost of a Business Development Bank on the same basis as the proposal from the Union of Independent Companies in 1993.

9. Introduce New Technology Trusts

Assume that the "trusts" provide more subsidy for R&D—about £15 million—less the costs of the existing Innovation Counsellors included in Business Links.

10. Introduce a Venture Capital Guarantee Scheme

The cost of a 10 per cent. increase in the Loan Guarantee Scheme.

88. Implement the Parental Leave Directive

The cost to the public sector of implementing the parental leave directive.

DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORT

11. Restore public ownership of the railways

The cost of a complete takeover of Railtrack by the Government assuming a 30 per cent. premium over the market price and external financing requirements to service debt and take account of forward investment plans.

12. Provide new investment in railway safety

The cost of:

1. Installation, operation and maintenance of Automatic Train Protection

2. Replacing 25 per cent. of carriages.

13. Build more high speed rail links

The cost of modernising the Great Western line (which runs from London to Cardiff) based on the CBI's estimate for electrification in their report "Winning Ways", 18 July 1996.

The cost of modernising the London to Norwich line and the Bristol to Penzance lines based on the cost per mile of modernising the East Coast Main Line at 1996–97 prices.

14. Reduce bus and rail fares in London

The cost of:

A 10 per cent. reduction in LT fares.

A 10 per cent. reduction in NSE fares.

15. Provide more investment in buses

The cost of an increase of 10 per cent. in Government support for local bus services.

16. Reduce freight track access charges

The cost of a 20 per cent. reduction in freight track access charges on the assumption that Railtrack has been renationalised.

17. Invest in a network of freight terminals

The cost of doubling the existing 5 Channel Tunnel freight terminals.

DEPARTMENT OF THE ENVIRONMENT

18. Increase spending on house building

The increase in public spending if the stock of set aside receipts are released over five years and no set aside applies to new receipts.

19. Return business rates to local control

That in each year from 1997–98 to 2001–02, councils will choose to increase net revenue spending by 1 per cent. more than it would otherwise have been increased.

That the increase will be financed by additional increases in council tax and business rates, and that the percentage increase in each will be the same.

That the reserve powers to cap which Labour propose to retain would only bite on the dozen or so highest spenders, and so would only minimally affect overall spending.

20. End Council Tax capping

That in each year from 1997–98 to 2001–02, councils will choose to increase net revenue spending by 1 per cent. more than it would otherwise have been increased.

That the increase will be financed by additional increases in council tax and business rates, and that the percentage increase in each will be the same.

That the reserve powers to cap which Labour propose to retain would only bite on the dozen or so highest spenders, and so would only minimally affect overall spending.

21. Set up mortgage rescue scheme

The cost of providing extra grant to housing associations to enable them to buy up the property of people facing repossession. However, assume that only half choose to take advantage of the scheme.

22. End CCT in local government

The loss of expected future savings made from Compulsory Competitive tendering in local government.

23. Establish English Regional Assemblies

The cost of nine regional chambers with 50 members on average allowances of £2,500 and 50 support staff with average staff costs of £40,000 (including premises costs).

24. Establish a London authority

The cost of a strategic authority with:

1. 64 councillors.

2. A referendum.

3. Elections every 4 years.

HOME OFFICE

25. Establish a network of women's refuges

The cost of a network of women's refuges based on the following assumptions:

1. Refuge services cost £12,000 to £13,000 per family per annum (Women's Aid Federation report published in 1994).

2. One off Capital costs per refuge between £34,000 to £52,000 (London Housing Unit Report).

3. An extra 2,000 family bedspaces estimated on the basis of a recommendation by the Home Affairs Select Committee.

26. End the privatisation of prisons

The cost of:

1. Returning the four private sector prisons to the public sector.

2. Ending the contracting out of education.

3. Ending the contracting out of IT.

4. Ending the contracting out of seven court escort areas.

5. Returning the DCMF prisons to the public sector.

6. Ending market testing in the Home Office.

89. Provide referendums on voting reform and a Scottish Parliament

The cost of:

(A) a UK wide referendum; and

(B) a referendum in Scotland.

LEGAL DEPARTMENTS

27. Improve access to Legal Aid

The cost of reinstating the changes in eligibility since 1992.

28. Reform the Crown Prosecution Service

The additional costs associated with providing staff for each of the 43 police areas.

29. Establish a community legal service

The additional cost of employing the equivalent of 1½ salaried lawyers in each of the Citizens' Advice Bureaux, assuming some savings in the legal aid budget.

30. Change the design of court buildings

The cost of refurbishing Crown Courts and the larger magistrates courts, which have not already provided separate waiting facilities for witnesses and victims.

31. Introduce fast track sentencing for persistent young offenders

The cost of fast track sentencing for persistent young offenders.

DEPARTMENT FOR EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

32. Introduce sabbaticals for teachers

The cost of teachers with 10 years' service taking one sabbatical of one third of a year and the cost of teachers with 15 years or more service taking one sabbatical of a full year.

33. Introduce a new student loans scheme

The additional cost of extending student loans to cover the maintenance grant and to include fees and maintenance of part-time Higher Education students, assuming that the number of students entering Higher Education is not affected and that loan take up also remains unchanged (at 75 per cent.).

34. Double the number of students in higher education

The fifth year cost of a programme to steadily increase student numbers that would, after 20 years, have doubled the (percentage) participation rate among young people in full-time higher education.

35. Expand post-16 education

The additional cost of all 16 and 17 year olds who are currently not in any education staying on in full-time education in secondary schools.

36. Create a nursery place for every 3 year old

The cost of providing a nursery place for every 3 year old assuming that the voucher mechanism is used, that the value of the voucher is the same as for four year olds and the funding can be clawed back from local authorities in the same way as for 4-year olds.

37. Provide access to a lap top computer for every child

The cost of supplying one new lap top computer for 1 in 3 primary pupils over 8 years old and 1 in 3 secondary pupils if the computers cost about £1,000 each.

38. Increase capital spending on schools

The cost of increasing capital spending by £3.2 billion over 10 years by allowing schools to borrow the money from the banks, without taking account of interest rates.

39. Cable up every school—the cost of computer equipment and training

1. The cost of providing multimedia computers and Internet links to all schools assuming that BT pay the line, connection and on-line costs.

2. The additional cost of 2½ days training per teacher.

3. Assume that in secondary schools there would need to be one multimedia PC for every 10 pupils which would need to be networked throughout the school. In addition there would be one room with 30 PCs in each school. One in ten of the new computers would be connected to a good quality printer and to the Internet via an ISDN line. Each primary school would have one multimedia PC in each classroom with an extra three in each school, e.g. for the library. One computer in each school would be linked to the Internet.

40. Introduce a literacy guarantee at age 7

The cost of reintroducing the Reading Recovery Programme and extending it nationally.

41. Reduce class sizes for 5, 6 and 7 year olds

1. The cost of reducing class sizes to 30 or under for 5, 6 and 7 year olds.

2. Take a mid-point estimate of the range of possible costs.

42. Provide better teacher training

The cost of one day's extra training and supply cover per year for each teacher in maintained schools.

43. Establish intensive literacy summer schools

1. 300,000 pupils attend a 3 weeks summer school each year.

2. Pupils are taught in groups of 10 for 3 hours each day.

3. The cost of overheads is calculated in the same way as the ratio of overheads to teachers' salaries in LEA spending on schools.

4. Teachers can be recruited at the standard term-time supply rates.

44. Take steps to tackle youth employment

1. Each unemployed person receives on average £60 per week in benefits.

2. Each person offered a placement accepts it and completes a full six months.

3. 5 per cent. of participants leave the count and incur no further costs, 60 per cent. of those remaining receive wage subsidies, 20 per cent. enter training, 10 per cent. enter a placement with the voluntary sector and 10 per cent. with the Environmental task force.

4. It costs £2,000 to provide a placement in the voluntary or environmental task force—in line with the former Community Action Programme—and to fund a place in education/training.

45. Introduce a £75/week incentive for the long term unemployed

The cost of a £75 a week incentive which lasts 26 weeks for those unemployed over two years assuming no increase in the number of people getting work.

48. Re-establish the Community Action Programme

The cost of re-establishing the Community Action programme at its 1995–96 level.

49. Provide extra support to redundant workers

The cost of giving everyone who becomes redundant and joins the claimant count a place on Job Search Plus, as a replacement to the existing Job Search Plus scheme.

50. Provide better careers advice

The cost of 2 per cent. of the employed population having a full interview with a trained careers officer and a booklet.

51. Establish a University for Industry

The cost of an initial intake of 30,000 students based on the costs of the Open University.

52. Make the Re-Employment service available to non-working women

The cost of providing access to the Employment Service on a voluntary basis to non-working women who are not registered unemployed.

53. provide job advocates for the long term unemployed

The cost of extending the current "1-2-1" scheme to all people over 25 who complete one year in unemployment.

DEPARTMENT FOR NATIONAL HERITAGE

54. Introduce a national network of Millennium Volunteers

The cost of giving 100,000 young people each year a place as a Millennium Volunteer on the same basis as the Environmental Task Force, being paid the equivalent of benefit (£60/week) plus £20. Also assume that it costs an extra £2,000 to provide each place, in line with the costs of the former Community Action Programme.

55. Abolish admission charges to national museums

The cost of ending admission charges to museums and galleries funded by the Department of National Heritage.

56. Abolish the internal market in the NHS

The cost of abolishing the internal market in the NHS assuming that the average annual efficiency gain returned to the level before the reforms.

57. Withdraw PFI from the NHS

The cost of replacing private sector spending on Department of Health capital projects with public sector spending.

58. Introduce GP commissioning

The net cost of introducing GP commissioning and abolishing GP fundholding.

59. Increase spending on community care

The cost of £135 million extra spending on community care in 1993 uprated to 1996–97 prices.

60. Reintroduce a regional health structure

The cost of reintroducing the old Regional Health Authorities.

62. End CCT in the NHS

The loss of savings from compulsory competitive tendering in the NHS.

63. Phase out private provision from the NHS

The loss of net income generated by pay beds.

DEPARTMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY

64. Reduce the benefit tapers

The cost of

1. (A) a reduction in the Family Credit taper from 70 per cent. to 40 per cent.

(B) a reduction in the Housing Benefit taper from 65 per cent. to 40 per cent.

and

2. (A) a reduction in the Family Credit taper from 70 per cent. to 30 per cent

(B) a reduction in the Housing Benefit taper from 65 per cent. to 30 per cent.

65. Introduce a Pension Entitlement/Minimum Guaranteed Income for Pensioners

1. The cost of a 100 per cent. take up of Income Support and the abolition of all capital rules, except those in Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit, with a 100 per cent. taper.

and

2. A Minimum Guaranteed Income for pensioners set at £80/week with a 100 per cent. taper.

66. Abolish the "16 hour rule"

1. The cost of making any student other than those undertaking full-time courses in higher education eligible for JSA.

2. Take a mid-point estimate of the range of costs.

67. Allow local benefit decisions

1. The cost of paying 500,000 unemployed claimants a year their income from JSA 6 months in advance.

2. In 20 per cent. of cases, this money has to be repaid again since it is lost by the recipient.

68. Abolish the Jobseeker's Allowance

The cost of abolition of the JSA.

69. Introduce a maintenance disregard against Income Support

The cost of a £20 maintenance disregard against Income Support.

70. Allow an Income Support carry over

Assume that anyone unemployed for 6 months or more and in receipt of means-tested JSA will receive payments at the same rate for four weeks after taking a job.

71. Provide work help for lone parents

The cost of:

(a) giving Lone parents on Family Credit free school meals.

(b) giving Lone parents on Family Credit a £10 per week disregard for work related expenses.

72. Increase the take up of Family Credit

An increase in the take up of Family Credit to 96 per cent.

73. Introduce a JET scheme

The cost of a JET scheme for lone parents similar to the Australian JET scheme.

74. Encourage those on benefit to do voluntary work

The cost of 1 in 12 unemployed people doing voluntary work assuming that they stay on benefit for four weeks longer than they would otherwise have done.

75. Introduce a Disabled Rights Bill

The cost of a Disability Rights Commission plus the cost to:

(A) reduce from 20 to 5 the number of employees used to define those small employers exempt from the DDA's employment rights.

(B) extend the DDA to cover those wrongly perceived to have a substantial disability.

76. Allow unemployed people to borrow against future earnings

1. The cost of giving 50 per cent. of people on JSA for over a year a £300 loan.

2. In 20 per cent. of those cases the money is not repaid. In the remaining 80 per cent. of cases, the money is repaid over an average 2 year period.

77. Introduce budgeting loans for the low paid

1. The cost of extending the Social Fund to Family Credit recipients.

2. Assume that 30 per cent. of households on Family Credit use the fund each year.

78. Introduce Income Support protection

The cost of providing an automatic re-entitlement to Income Support at the claimant's previous rate if the job ends within six months.

79. Introduce an income disregard for the wives of unemployed men

The cost of allowing any couple, in which one member of the couple declares themselves to be unemployed, to disregard an extra £5 in earnings in addition to the existing £10 disregard.

80. Increase the disregard in the JSA

The cost of doubling the disregard in JSA to £10 a week.

APPENDIX 1. Introduce a flexible decade of retirement

The cost of a full basic pension payable from the age of 60 assuming that the same percentage of eligible people claim the pension from the new state pension age as currently do so.

SCOTTISH OFFICE

81. Increase tree cover

The cost of extending tree cover by 50 per cent. by 2010.

82. Establish a Scottish Parliament

The cost of the level of provision planned by the then Government in the run up to 1979, taking account of the Scottish Constitutional Convention proposals published in 1995.

83. End the sale of Forestry Commission land

The loss of expected receipts from the sale of Forestry Commission land.

TREASURY

85. Introduce a National Minimum Wage

The estimated gross increase in the public sector pay bill assuming a Minimum Wage set at £4.00 per hour with a 50 per cent. restoration of differentials across the entire earnings distribution, using the 1995 New Earnings Survey.

87. Increase funding on Trans European Networks

The cost of the European Commission's recent proposal to increase spending on TENs.

In the case of the following costings Treasury Ministers accepted Labour's own estimate of the costs:

46. Broaden the take up of Investors in People

47. Introduce Learn as you Earn Smartcards

61. Cut waiting lists

In the case of No. 84, "Establish a Welsh Assembly", the estimate was made by the Secretary of State for Wales.

In the case of No. 86, "Establish a European Recovery Fund", Treasury Ministers took the figure of about £11 billion, the approximate UK share of a proposal for a European Recovery Fund which was supported by Labour MEPs in the European Parliament, and scaled this back to produce a costing of £250 million a year over five years.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance was given to civil servants in respect of assembling the factual material to facilitate the costings of the public expenditure commitments described as having been made by the Labour party in terms of territorial bases, price level and first or four-year commitment, including possible overlaps and other similar costings. [6339]

Mr. Waldegrave: The costings were conducted in accordance with the guidance on costing Opposition policy which was published as a memorandum submitted by the Cabinet Secretary to the Treasury and Civil Service Select Committee in March 1990, reproduced in "Guidance on Guidance: An index of Useful Documents" issued in February 1996 and available in the Library of the House. In addition, Ministers provided the following general framework to civil servants in respect of assembling the factual material.

GUIDANCE ON COSTINGS

Introduction

This note explains the basis on which proposals should be costed. It is important that all proposals are costed on a consistent basis.

2. There may be some proposals for which a costing consistent with this guidance would be inappropriate. In such cases, please contact the Special Adviser to the Chief Secretary to agree an alternative basis.

Which year?

3. Policy proposals which involve an ongoing annual cost should be costed in year 5, in 1996–97 prices.

4. Where year 5 gives a misleading impression of the cost—because the cost builds up rapidly after that, or is much higher before year 5, that should be indicated separately.

One-off costs

5. All costs are annual costs. Where proposals involve a one-off cost—such as the purchase of shares in a privatised industry—it should be marked clearly as a one-off cost in 1996–97 prices. That cost will be assumed to be spread over the 5 years of the Parliament (that is, a fifth of the one-off cost will be added to the annual cost in year 5).

Changes from plans

6. The costs should be expressed in terms of changes from current policies assuming that none of the other proposals to be costed are implemented. They should be defined as additions to GGE (broadly, central and local government spending including support for public corporations). The costs need not distinguish spending inside and outside the Control Total.

Revenue effects

7. Only the effects on General Government Expenditure should be included. If there are additional offsetting effects on revenues or on public corporations' borrowing, these should be identified separately, but not included in the costings.

Offsetting changes in expenditure

8. If a proposal would automatically and intrinsically lead to an offsetting reduction to spending elsewhere—such as benefit savings from putting unemployed people into a training programme—the proposal should be shown net of any changes to other spending programmes.

Phased costs

9. If a proposal is to "phase in" a policy then it should be assumed that this will be phased in over 5 years.

10. Policies which would be implemented only "as far and as fast as resources allow" should not be phased in, but calculated as if they were implemented immediately.

Behavioural effects

11. Behavioural effects should not be included unless they are intrinsic to the proposal. For example, the cost of allowing local authorities to spend capital receipts should not assume that capital disposals will increase. However, the cost of lifting capping would include an assumption that some local authorities would increase spending above their existing capping limits.

Prices

12. All costings should be shown in 1996–97 prices.

13. If it is necessary to assume a price level to calculate the costing, it should be assumed that prices will grow by 2 per cent. a year from 1997–98.

14. If other macroeconomic assumptions are required, they should be consistent with the 1996–97 FSBR. If assumptions are required that are not included in the FSBR, they should be agreed with the Chief Secretary's Special Adviser.

EU-related costs

15. Any proposal involving expenditure from the European Union budget should take account of the effect on the overall level of the EU Budget, the UK contribution and the abatement. Please discuss any costings involving European Union expenditure with the Chief Secretary's Special Adviser.

Territorial consequentials

16. The costings should include any consequentials in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland of policy changes in England. In the case of Social Security costings, there is a separate page to add in the costs of pledges for Northern Ireland. If you need assistance calculating these, please contact the Chief Secretary's Special Adviser.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was (a) the cost to his Department and (b) the overall cost of the exercise to cost the spending commitments described as having been made by the Labour party in the document "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans", published on 20 November. [6336]

Mr. Waldegrave: It is not the normal working practice to keep a record of the time spent in providing factual information to Ministers and it is not therefore possible to offer a reliable estimate of the costs involved.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what scrutiny over the exercise to cost what were termed Labour party public expenditure commitments was carried out by the Treasury; and what criteria were used when checking consistency with other available estimates of the costs. [6340]

Mr. Waldegrave: The exercise was carried out in accordance with the published guidance on the procedure for costing policies of opposition parties. Treasury Ministers, assisted by their special advisers, in conjunction with Ministers and special advisers from other Departments, were responsible for identifying the text of commitments together with any further interpretations or assumptions necessary to allow the commitments to be costed. Treasury officials, in conjunction with officials from other Departments, were responsible for providing factual material. Final responsibility for the judgments made in the document "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" rests with Treasury Ministers.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if (a) Ministers, (b) their special advisers and (c) civil servants, identified the text of spending commitments described as having been made by the Labour party in the document "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans", published on 20 November. [6337]

Mr. Waldegrave: In accordance with the guidance, Ministers and their special advisers identified the text of commitments. To the best of my knowledge, civil servants other than special advisers did not identify the text of the commitments.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer to what extent the factual material provided by civil servants for preparation of the document "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" was altered by Ministers or special advisers; and what guidance was given about reconciling differences in costings. [6341]

Mr. Waldegrave: The costings published in "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" are consistent with the factual material provided by civil servants on the basis of assumptions made by Ministers.

In one case—the cost of establishing the Welsh Assembly—the estimate was made by the Secretary of State for Wales. In two cases—the cost of reducing benefit tapers and the introduction of a maintenance disregard against income support—the figures were calculated in cash terms rather than in real terms. Consequently these figures should have been slightly lower than quoted in the document. The figure for benefit tapers should have been £1.8 billion rather than £2.0 billion and the figure for the maintenance disregard against income support should have been £180 million rather than £200 million. In another case, namely the cost of an increase in funding on trans-European networks, the figure was calculated in ecus rather than in pounds. The annual cost should therefore have been £20 million rather than £27 million.

Unemployment

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of people out of work in the European Union as a whole on the basis of (a) benefit claimant count, (b) International Labour Organisation definitions and (c) the labour force survey definition. [7233]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Austin Mitchell, dated 17 December 1996:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the level of unemployment in the European Union.

Most European Union countries produce on administrative-based and a survey-based measure of unemployment. The benefit claimant count is the administrative measure of unemployment that applies to the United Kingdom. Because the administrative definitions of unemployment differ form country to country, the Office for National Statistics does not compile EU unemployment totals on this basis.

The Statistical office of the European Community (SOEC) published ILO based levels of unemployment derived from the Labour Force Surveys of its member countries. The latest figures from this source show that in spring 1995 there were 17.8 million people unemployed in the European Union.

SOEC also produce a monthly estimate of the level of ILO unemployment in the EU. These estimates are based on results from the spring 1995 Labour Force Surveys which are extrapolated to monthly (or quarterly) administrative unemployment statistics. The most recent estimate gives a figure of 18.1 million people ILO unemployed in September 1996.

Enclosed for your information is the latest edition of the booklet How Exactly is Unemployment Measured?, copies of which are also available in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many claimants have been recorded as experiencing at least one spell of unemployment in each jobcentre area since April 1992; [8304]

(2) how many claimants have been recorded as experiencing at least one spell of unemployment in Darlington since April 1992. [8305]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 10 December 1996]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Alan Milburn, dated 17 December 1996:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on how many claimants have experienced at least one spell of claimant unemployment in each Jobcentre area, in particular the Darlington area, since April 1992.

Information for each Jobcentre area could only be provided at disproportionate cost. However, since 1 April 1992, an estimated 20,760 claimants have experienced at least one spell of claimant unemployment at the Darlington Employment Service Jobcentre.

Economic and Finance Council

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the hon. member for Southport (Mr. Banks) of 4 December, Official Report, column 648–49, on the Ecofin of 2 December, what matters were put to the vote; how the United Kingdom voted; and if he will place in the Library all documents tabled at the meeting. [8608]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: None of the items on the main agenda for the Ecofin Council of 2 December were put to the vote. No papers were tabled at the meeting, but as I noted in my answer of 4 December, several papers were discussed. A number of "A" points were also agreed at the meeting without, in line with normal practice, a formal vote on them being taken. Details of these points are given in the Council secretariat press release, document 12212/96, which will be placed in the House as soon as it is available. All the papers considered at Ecofin which were eligible for scrutiny have been deposited with the House.

Employment (York)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will name the jobcentres within the York travel-to-work area; and if he will list the number of people in (a) full-time and (b) part-time employment in the York travel-to-work area (i) in April 1992 and (ii) currently. [8531]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr Hugh Bayley, dated 17 December 1996:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistic to your recent question on jobcentres and the number of people in full-time and part-time employment in the York travel-to-work area.

There are to jobcentres in the York travel-to-work area. They are Clifford Street and Stonebow. The available information showing the levels of employment in the York travel-to-work area is for employees and is at September 1991 and September 1993. This is shown in the table below.

Employees in the York travel-to-work area: at September

	Full-time	Part-time	All
1991	64,200	27,900	92,100
1993	62,400	28,800	91,200

Food Poisoning

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of days at work which were lost in 1995 due to food poisoning from (a) salmonella, (b) campylobacter, (c) listeria, (d) E. coli 0157 and (e) other causes; and if he will make a statement. [9139]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Bill Etherington, dated 17 December 1996:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on estimates of the number of days lost due to different types of food poisoning.

This information is not available. The Labour Force Survey collects information on sickness absence, but does not ask respondents about the diagnosis of the cause of their sickness absence.

Running and Operating Costs Limits

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the final outturn for 1995–96 for (a) each running costs limit and (b) the Ministry of Defence's operating costs limit. [9743]

Mr. Waldegrave: The final outturn for 1995–96 for each running costs limit and the Ministry of Defence's operating costs limit are shown in the table.

The list of 26 November represents a snapshot of significant PFI projects that individual departments have drawn to the attention of the Treasury's PFU. It was designed to provide an indication of the main areas of PFI activity, and may not be fully comprehensive. However I will arrange for a copy to be placed in the Library. I will arrange for similar updated lists to be placed there on a quarterly basis which reflects the regularity with which this information is now collected. However, primary responsibility for detailed project, or sector specific, information remains with individual Departments.

The cash sums alongside each project represents each Department's estimate on 26 November of expected capital investment associated with that particular project. The projected duration of each individual contract is not held centrally.

The list is available on request form the Treasury PFU and forms part of an information pack which is sent to people expressing a general interest in PFI. The list is updated from time to time. A previous version was included in the press pack accompanying the recent private finance panel conference.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legislation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many items of legislation relating to his Department have been repealed since January 1994; how many statutory instruments were introduced during the same period; and how many of the latter were (a) deregulatory and (b) fee orders. [9364]

Mr. Streeter: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Paymaster General.

Judges (Performance Tables)

Mr. Patten: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will publish performance tables giving the number of cases heard by each judge in England and the number of occasions on which each judge had their decisions overturned on appeal. [9576]

Mr. Streeter: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. John Patten, dated 17 December 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of cases heard by each judge in England and the number of judges' decision overturned on appeal.

These figures are not held centrally and could only be obtained at a disproportionate cost.

TRANSPORT

"New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans"

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what costs quoted in the document, "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans," were prepared in his Department; what detailed assumptions and interpretations were provided to officials in his Department to enable preparation of each cost; and what was the total cost to public funds of preparing each estimate. [6350]

Sir George Young: The Department of Transport, in conjunction with the Treasury, prepared factual material relating to costings published in "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" numbered 11 to 17. The detailed assumptions and interpretations that were provided to officials are set out in my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary's answer to the hon. Member today. It is not the normal working practice to keep a record of the time spent preparing factual information to Ministers and it is not therefore possible to offer a reliable estimate of the costs involved.

A13

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is the (a) design life span and (b) functional life of the Movers Lane bridge on the A13; [8060]

(2) when he expects the Renwick Road junction improvements on the A13 (i) will be started and (ii) completed; [8064]

(3) what is the annual daily flow of vehicles using the A13 this year and in each of the previous five years; [8054]

(4) what has been the cost of tendering the DBFO—design, build, finance and operate—improvements for the Roding Bridge and Movers Lane junctions on the A13; [8058]

(5) when and for what reasons the decision was taken not to build the proposed underpass for the junction of Movers Lane/River Road on the A13; [8062]

(6) how many accidents have occurred in each of the last five years on (i) the Lodge Avenue flyover on the A13 and (ii) the Movers Lane/River Road flyover on the A13;

(7) when the current traffic restrictions on the River Roding bridge and on the Movers Lane/River road on the A13 will be lifted; [8061]

(8) what plans he has to include a slip road in the realignment of the A13 at the junction of the Scrattons Farm estate and the A13; [8063]

(9) what is the annual daily flow forecast to use the A13 in each of the next two years on (i) weekdays and (ii) weekends; [8056]

(10) what is the annual daily flow of vehicles forecast to use the realigned A13 in the first year of the road opening for (i) weekdays and (ii) weekends; [8055]

(11) what is the annual daily flow of vehicles using the A13 between the M25 and the A406 in the current year and in each of the previous five years on (i) weekdays and (ii) weekends. [8057]

Mr. Bowis: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Ms Margaret Hodge, dated 17 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent questions about traffic flows, accident data and other associated issues on the A13.

Tenders have yet to be invited for the A13 "Thames Gateway" DBFO project and therefore tendering costs are not yet known. However, I am pleased to advise you that the Highways Agency has recently invited interest from potential bidders. This project includes the Roding Bridge strengthening. Movers Lane junction improvement and other maintenance and improvement schemes.

The lane restrictions on the Roding Bridge and the weight restrictions on the Movers Lane/River Road flyover will remain in place until respectively the proposed bridge strengthening and junction improvement schemes have been implemented.

The proposed underpass at the junction of the A13 Movers Lane with River Road remains in the programme as part of the A13 Movers Lane junction improvement.

The Movers Lane/River Road flyover was built in 1966 as a temporary structure with a minimum design life of fifteen years. Since 1991 vehicles using it have been restricted to 7.5 tonnes. It is well maintained and capable of serving its present function for at least another five years.

For 1995, the annual average daily flow for all motor vehicles using the A13 between the M25 and the A406 ranged between 26,000 and 73,000 vehicles per day, with flows generally increasing toward the A406. Figures are only collected on a three year cycle and for 1992, they ranged between 23,000 and 66,000. Separate figures for weekdays and weekends are not available.

Detailed forecasts for the existing A13 for each of the next two years are not available, but a number of factors will affect the growth of traffic on the Barking and Dagenham section of the A13. Current trends suggest that in outer London traffic growth generally could be in the order of 2%. a year.

Traffic data regarding the annual average daily flow for all motor vehicles forecast to use the re-aligned A13 in the first year of the road opening separated out for weekday and weekends is not available in the form requested. However, at the public inquiry in 1990, it was forecast that the transfer of traffic to the new A13 route would be in the region of 60% with 40% on the existing road. Given the 2 per cent growth figure mentioned above, traffic on the new road on opening would be in the region of 38,000 vehicles per day. The actual figure will depend upon the growth rates which occur and development which similarly may or may not occur.

In each of the last five years, accidents numbers for the Lodge Avenue Flyover and the Movers Lane/River Road Flyover are as follows:

Year	Number of personal injury accidents
Lodge Avenue Flyover
1991	7
1992	5
1993	6
1994	4
1995	6
1996	'2
Movers Lane/River Road Flyover
1991	8
1992	3
1993	8
1994	4
1995	5
1996	'1

' Up to August.

The Highways Agency has no firm dates for the start and completion of the Renwick Road junction improvement scheme. This is a development-led scheme, which cannot commence until the developer has submitted proposals to the Highways Agency and these have been accepted.

The A13 West of Heathway to Thames Avenue scheme, on which work has just started, will be connected to the existing A13 Ripple Road at a new interchange. A link road will be built between this interchange and the Scrattons Farm Estate which will provide access to both the local and trunk road network.

Nuclear Waste (Transportation)

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to approve the arrangements for British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. to transfer crated plutonium contaminated material from its site at Drigg to the waste treatment complex at Sellafield; and if he will make a statement. [8911]

Mr. Watts: The arrangements will be approved when the small number of outstanding safety issues have been resolved to the Department's satisfaction. These are subject to ongoing discussions between the Department and BNFL.

Utilities (Transport Schemes)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to amend the regulations making utilities liable for 18 per cent. of the costs of diversionary works for major transport schemes. [9293]

Mr. Watts: I am discussing this issue with ministerial colleagues.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contributions were made by utility companies towards the costs of diversionary works for major transport schemes, including street-running tramways, in each year since 1992. [9296]

Mr. Watts: This information is not held centrally. However, no contributions would have been made under the relevant provisions of the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991 before they came into effect on 1 January 1993.

Staff

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for his Department (a) how many people in total are employed, (b) how many of the total number of staff are (i) male and (ii) female and (c) how many (I) men and (II) women are employed on a (1) full-time and (2) part-time basis. [9481]

Mr. Bowis: The figures as at 1 December 1996 are:

	Total
(a) Number of employees	13,419
(b) (i) Number of males	7,414
(b) (ii) Number of females	6,005
(c) (I) (1) Number of full-time men	7,233
(c) (I) (2) Number of part-time men	181
(c) (II) (1) Number of part-time women	4,477
(c) (II) (2) Number of part-time women	1,528

Blackwall Tunnel

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what was the name of the company owning the vehicle which caused the closure of the Blackwall tunnel on 10 December and if he will make a statement; [9313]

(2) if he will make a statement on the circumstances and consequences of the closure of the Blackwall tunnel on 10 December; and what estimate has he made of the likely cost of the incident to businesses in London arising from traffic congestion during that day; [9315]

(3) what legal action he intends to take against the driver and owners of the vehicle which damaged the Blackwall tunnel on 10 December; [9314]

(4) what damage was caused to the Blackwall tunnel by the incident on 10 December; and what estimate he has made of the likely cost of repair work. [9312]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 16 December 1996]: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mr. Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 17 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent questions about the incident at the northern entrance to the Blackwall Tunnel on the 10th December.

The circumstances on 10th December which resulted in the closure for some ten hours of the southbound Blackwall Tunnel are as follows. At approximately 2.30 pm the boom of a crane mounted on a lorry struck a sign gantry located 30 yards before the entrance of the southbound tunnel. No damage was caused to the tunnel itself, but the gantry was so badly damaged that it had to be removed completely. It took until just after midnight to complete this operation which necessitated the southbound tunnel being closed from 2.30 pm to 00.30 am. In addition the northbound tunnel had to be closed for about one hour while the central support was removed.

The gantry carried essential lane-control signing used for operating the contraflow system during the morning peak, and without it two way traffic cannot operate safely. Manual control of the contra flow system is not a viable option for safety reasons.

There was widespread traffic congestion in East London caused by the closure of the southbound tunnel. Some traffic diverted to the Dartford crossing and the Woolwich Ferry ran an extended service until 10.00 pm to assist with the diverted traffic. On subsequent mornings there have also been queues approaching the northbound tunnel, as two way traffic has not been able to use the southbound tunnel.

The Highways Agency recognises that this incident has caused considerable delays and inconvenience with a subsequent cost effect to businesses and has worked to bring the contraflow system back into operation at the earliest possible opportunity. We cannot make a realistic estimate of the losses.

Estimates of repair costs are at this stage preliminary but demolition and the installation of a temporary and then a permanent gantry are likely to cost in excess of one hundred thousand pounds.

The Highways Agency has, at present, no confirmed report of the name of the company owning the vehicle that caused the closure of the tunnel. A full report of the incident is awaited from the police. When we receive full details of the incident we intend to seek to recover the costs of a replacement gantry from the owner of the lorry involved.

Air Service Negotiations

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if his Department requested from the Civil Aviation Authority a balance of benefits analysis for the renegotiation of the United States-United Kingdom air service agreements, Bermuda 2, in 1995. [9187]

Mr. Bowis: The UK-US air negotiations in 1995 concerned small-scale changes to Bermuda 2 rather than a full renegotiation. The Department of Transport asked the Civil Aviation Authority to estimate the possible costs and benefits to UK airlines of certain specific features of the proposed deal, notably a modest relaxation of restrictions on flights to London from Chicago and Philadelphia, and some new code-sharing opportunities.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if it is his Department's policy in the context of significant air service negotiations to request from the Civil Aviation Authority a balance of benefits analysis; [9189]

(2) if he will list all the air service agreements negotiated over the last three years for which the Civil Aviation Authority was requested to provide a balance of benefits analysis. [9188]

Mr. Bowis: It is not the Department of Transport's policy to request an all-encompassing "balance of benefits" analysis from the Civil Aviation Authority before conducting air service negotiations, especially those which have the objective of general liberalisation. However, we regularly commission a cost-benefit analysis from the CAA when limited and specific commercial rights are under negotiation, and CAA staff are always invited to participate in air services negotiations, including preparatory UK delegation meetings.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many European member states have negotiated with the United States open skies agreements which grant fifth freedom rights to United States carriers. [9114]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 13 December 1996]: We understand that the US has reached such agreements with the following European countries:

Austria
Belgium
Denmark

Finland
Germany
Iceland
Luxembourg
Netherlands
Norway
Sweden
Switzerland.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what representations his Department has made to the United States Government regarding the restrictions imposed on United Kingdom airlines within the United States aviation market; and if he will make a statement; [9113]

(2) in what circumstances his Department will grant fifth freedom rights to United States carriers; and if he will make a statement; [9115]

(3) what are the United Kingdom's objectives for the renegotiation of the US-UK air service agreements (Bermuda 2); and if he will make a statement. [9112]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 13 December 1996]: The Secretary of State's objective in the current negotiations with the US on air services is to reach a liberal aviation arrangement to the benefit of the UK. Both access to the internal US market and fifth freedom rights are being discussed within the current negotiations.

Road Safety Research

Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will provide a list of research projects, together with their start and end dates, initiated or planned in preparation for the setting of road safety targets after the year 2000; and if he will provide a summary of the aims and the work being undertaken within each project. [9319]

Mr. Bowis: We have only one research project planned or in progress on road safety targets after the year 2000—"Analysis and Exposure Monitoring Requirements for Post 2000 Targets". The project started on 17 June 1996 and is due to end on 16 June 1998.

The aim of this study is to provide analysis of past and future trends in casualty reductions in order to help develop soundly based new road safety targets post-2000.

The research will involve a systematic analysis of trends in casualty numbers taking account of current assumptions about traffic growth, demographic change, and other relevant factors. Possible new measures for casualty reduction which would be required to achieve a new target will be evaluated and costed. It will also consider how a future target should be monitored and future requirements for vulnerable road user exposure data.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the terms of reference are of the evaluation of the hazard perception testing working party set up by the road safety division of his Department; what its membership is; what progress it has made; and when it is expected to report. [9424]

Mr. Bowis: We are at present considering membership for an advisory group on the possible future use of hazard perception testing. Initial approaches have been made to several representative groups including: the Transport Research Laboratory, the Driving Standards Agency, DriveSafe Services Ltd. who administer the theory test for learner drivers, driver instruction bodies, the Parliamentary Advisory Council for Transport Safety, the Northern Ireland Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency, and other experts. There are no plans to ask any group to produce a report: the aim is to provide the Department with a source of advice.

Legislation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many items of legislation relating to his Department have been repealed since January 1994; how many statutory instruments were introduced during the same period; and how many of the latter were (a) deregulatory and (b) fee orders. [9370]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend, the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster today.

Road Vehicles (Pollution)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the feasibility of reducing the environmental disbenefits of current models of motor car. [9214]

Mr. Bowis: My Department has commissioned a number of research projects aimed at assessing and controlling the environmental impact of current models of cars. These are listed in the table and further details are available on the Department's internet web site at http://www.open.gov.uk/dot/rvs/rv-res00.htm. On completion, all projects will be evaluated for cost effectiveness, practicality and, if appropriate, their wider application in an EU context.

S140A/VB	Vehicle particulate emissions measurement

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the (a) feasibility and (b) desirability of encouraging industrial innovation to reduce the environmental disbenefits of current models of bus; and if he will make a statement. [9215]

Mr. Watts: There is no doubt that industrial innovation can help to reduce the environmental disbenefits of buses. This has already been demonstrated by the technological advances that are now being applied to new diesel engines in order to meet the tighter emission standards for heavy vehicles, including buses, that came into force on 1 October this year. My Department works closely with both our European partners and the European Commission to develop progressively tighter emissions standards, a strategy which is providing extremely successful in encouraging industrial innovation and results in significant reductions in emissions from all categories of vehicle.

Coastguard Towing Vessels

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library HM Coastguard's report on the winter trials of the emergency towing vessels stationed in Dover and Stornoway. [9224]

Mr. Bowis: HM Coastguard's report on winter trials of the emergency towing vessels stationed in Dover and Stornoway will be published very shortly, and a copy will then be placed in the Library.

Lorry Drivers (Delays Abroad)

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations have been made to the Greek Government in respect of providing (a) protection, (b) freedom of movement and (c) compensation to British drivers. [9423]

Mr. Watts: The British ambassador in Athens saw the Greek Minister of the Interior on 11 December when he asked that British drivers be given all support and protection. The following day my noble Friend the Minister for Aviation and Shipping spoke in Brussels to the Greek Transport Minister about the position of trapped British drivers and compensation. I am pleased to say that almost all the British drivers known to have been detained in Greece are now clear of the blockades.

Mr. Smith: To as the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what discussions have taken place at the Council of Ministers regarding the issue of compensation claims from British lorry drivers who were delayed by the French lorry drivers' dispute; [9421]

(2) what discussions have taken place at the Council of Ministers regarding the issue of British lorry drivers currently delayed in Greece. [9422]

Mr. Watts: The blockades of lorries in both France and Greece were discussed at the Transport Council last week. The French and Greek Transport Ministers both responded positively. The French Minister repeated the assurances she had previously given to my right hon. Friend that claims for compensation will be considered as quickly as possible.

BEST Pension Fund

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a copy of the correspondence which has passed between the trustees of the BEST pension fund and his Department. [9390]

Mr. Watts: A copy of the letter which my right hon. Friend wrote to NBC Pension Trustees Ltd. on 27 November has already been placed in the Library. Because of the possibility of legal proceedings, I do not believe that it would be appropriate to place other correspondence in the Library.

Public Transport (Assaults)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many attacks on (a) passengers and (b) staff have been (i) reported (ii) resulted in prosecutions and (iii) resulted in convictions in each of the last five years broken down by (1) gender and (2) age bands of 10 years on (x) London Underground, (y) each of the bus companies operating in London and (z) each of the railway companies; and if he will make a statement. [9608]

Mr. Bowis: The information is not available in the form requested.

West London Line

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from the British Railways Board on the funding of the noise mitigation scheme on the West London line; and if he will make a statement. [8742]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 16 December 1996]: Following discussions with the British Railways Board, the Government have taken steps to ensure that the board is able to meet its commitment to part-fund noise mitigation works on the West London line. It is now up to the board to take this forward with the local authorities concerned.

Policies and Programme

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what date the 1997–98 settlement for the transport policies and programme will be announced; and in what format the details will be published. [9159]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 16 December 1996]: Details of the settlement were released on 16 December. Copies of the press release containing a full analysis of data were placed in the Library of the House. They were also placed in Members' mail boxes in the Members' post office counter.

Bus Employees Superannuation Trust

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library the correspondence between himself and his predecessor and the trustee of the bus employees superannuation trust over the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [9177]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 16 December 1996]: A copy of the letter that my right hon. Friend wrote to the NBC Pension Trustees Ltd. on 27 November has already been placed in the Library. He and his predecessor have written no other letters to the company.

DEFENCE

Aviation Repairs

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what plans he has for privatisation in the field of defence aviation repair; and if he will make a statement; [8828]

(2) what consultations his Department plan in respect of the possible formation of a Defence Aviation Repair Agency; and if he will make a statement; [8825]

(3) what plans he has to establish a Defence Aviation Repair Agency; and if he will make a statement. [8827]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The armed forces requirements for deep aviation repair are currently the subject of a prior options review to determine the optimum means of providing this service. The team conducting this review has consulted widely with establishments concerned, including trades union representatives. They have also consulted industrial companies who undertake deep aviation repair. This review is expected to be completed in the new year.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Doctor Wisley's epidemiological study in relation to illnesses arising from the Gulf war and other operations is complementary to those announced by the Minister of State in his statement of 10 December, Official Report, columns 119–23; and if he will make a statement. [9172]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 16 December 1996]: In commissioning the two studies that I recently announced my Department sought to complement rather than duplicate federally-funded US research. To this end, the Medical Research Council was briefed about Dr. Wessely's study before the council made its recommendations to the MOD. The three projects will be carefully co-ordinated to ensure that they complement each other.

Children (Payment of Air Fares)

Sir Alan Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many children under the age of 16 years had air fares subsidised (a) wholly and (b) partly by reason of their relationship to service personnel and employees of his Department for travel between the United Kingdom and (i) other EU states and (ii) non-EU states, in the last year for which information is available; and what was the total cost of the subsidy. [9320]

Mr. Soames: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Legislation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many items of legislation relating to his Department have been repealed since January 1994; how many statutory instruments were introduced during the same period; and how many of the latter were (a) deregulatory and (b) fee orders. [9359]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Lady to the answer given today by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Bowman Radio Communications Contract

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning his Department's competition policy in relation to the Bowman radio communications contract. [9659]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Bowman programme has been pursued in accordance with Ministry of Defence procurement policy, whereby the Department seeks competition wherever possible. The programme is in the project definition phase, which is being undertaken by two competing consortia, Yeoman led by Siemens Plessey Systems and Racal, and Crossbow, led by ITT UK Ltd. The MOD is currently examining the procurement options open to the Department for production, including the scope for competition at sub-contractor level. Whichever procurement route is chosen for Bowman, MOD will aim to secure the maximum practicable level of competition.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he plans to announce the award of the Bowman radio communications contract. [9657]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The procurement options for the Bowman production phase are currently being evaluated by the Ministry of Defence. A decision on the way ahead will be announced as soon as possible.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what criteria he will base his decision to award the Bowman radio communications contract. [9658]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The criteria for placing a contract for the Bowman production phase will be consistent with departmental procurement policy, which aims to obtain the best overall value for money for the Defence budget. Securing the maximum practicable level of competition will be central to the achievement of this objective.

Royal Scots Dragoon Guards (Bosnia)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his statement to the Scottish Grand Committee on 25 November, Official Report, column 6, if he will make a statement on the number of men and quantity of equipment available to the Royal Scots Dragoon Guards in Bosnia. [9392]

Mr. Soames: There are 343 Royals Scots Dragoon Guards currently serving in Bosnia and Croatia. They are equipped with 15 Challenger tanks and a total of 44 tracked armoured vehicles. The remainder of the regiment is conducting training and rear party duties. Two squadrons of tanks which are not required for the current deployment have been retained in Germany.

Officers (Retirement)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many officers in each service and by rank have been retired on full pay in each year since 1992; and what was the annual cost in each category. [9445]

Mr. Soames: None. The armed forces pension scheme makes no provision for the retirement of officers, or other ranks, on full pay.

Clansman Radio Communications System

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the current operational effectiveness of the Army's Clansman radio communications system. [9660]

Mr. Soames: The operational effectiveness of all in-service equipment is kept under constant review. Clansman continues to provide a useful capability and will be maintained in-service until it is replaced by Bowman.

"Competing for Quality"

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he proposes to announce the result of the "Competing for Quality" competition at RAF Sealand, Deeside, Flintshire; and if he will make a statement. [8826]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, the then Minister of State for Defence Procurement, announced on 18 October 1994, Official Report, column 237, his intention to undertake a "Competing for Quality" programme for all activities at RAF Sealand. After a hard-fought competition, I can now announce that the in-house bid team has been selected, against two commercial bidders, and that my Department intends to enter into a service level agreement with the team, beginning in April next year. The competition has resulted in significant savings and will safeguard the important role of RAF Sealand in providing crucial support to the front line. I congratulate the in-house team on the imagination and hard work shown in putting together the winning bid.

Ministry of Defence Police

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the standard disciplinary procedures for his Department's police force; who is the nominated disciplinary officer; and who deputises in the absence of the nominated disciplinary officer. [8935]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the chief constable/chief executive of the Ministry of Defence Police. I have asked the chief constable/chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from W.E.E. Boreham to Mr. John McFall, dated 17 December 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about disciplinary procedures within the Ministry of Defence Police, as this falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Constable/Chief Executive of the Ministry of Defence Police Agency.

The Ministry of Defence Police (Discipline) Regulations 1985, (as amended 1988) are based on the Home Office Police Discipline Regulations.

The Deputy Chief Constable is responsible for deciding the level of disciplinary action to be taken in complaints against police and reported disciplinary matters.

If it is decided by the Deputy Chief Constable that formal disciplinary proceedings by way of a hearing are required, the officer(s) will appear before either the Chief Constable or a nominated Assistant Chief Constable depending on the seriousness of the matters complained of, and the levels of punishment thought appropriate.

However, all complaints against police matters in England and Wales are referred to the independent Police Complaints Authority in the same way as for all other Home Department Police Forces. Complaints matters in Scotland are dealt with in exactly the same way as those considered by Scottish Chief Constables with their Forces. There is no provision in Scotland for an independent body for complaints against the police other than Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (Scotland) to whom a complainant may refer if dissatisfied with the Chief Constable's decision. In Northern Ireland complaints are referred to the Independent Commission for Police Complaints for Northern Ireland.

Young Service Personnel

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British soldiers under the age of 18 years are serving in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) Bosnia. [9299]

Mr. Soames: The number of British soldiers under 18 years of age who are currently serving in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) Bosnia is 44 and 32 respectively.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

"New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans"

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what costs quoted in the document, "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans", were prepared in his Department; what detailed assumptions and interpretations were provided to officials in his Department to enable preparation of each cost; and what was the total cost to public funds of preparing each estimate. [6352]

Mr. Lang: The Department of Trade and Industry, in conjunction with the Treasury, prepared factual material relating to costings published in "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" numbered 7,8,9,10 and 88. The detailed assumptions and interpretations that were provided to officials are set out in my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary's reply to the hon. Member today. It is not the normal working practice to keep a record of the time spent in providing factual information to Ministers and it is not therefore possible to offer a reliable estimate of the costs involved.

Business Links

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what monitoring process will be used by his Department to ensure that merging the business links budget into a single budget will be cost effective; and what checks will be in place to ensure that money is being targeted effectively by business links. [8937]

Mr. Page: Merging the business links budget into a single budget stream is part of a simplification process which also involves relating funding to achievements. Bids for business links service funding are submitted by training and enterprise councils which are required to assess the business support services required in the local area in a business plan which will also describe how the TEC will monitor achievements and impacts. The TEC will be required to submit regular management information to the Government Office, have regular reviews of the targets and milestones in the business plan with the Government Office contract manager, satisfy financial appraisal and monitoring checks and provide evidence of achievements against plans before each contracting round. In addition, my Department has a programme of independent evaluation to check that Government funding is being targeted in a way that secures optimum value for money.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many business links have not proved financially viable; and what has been the total amount of funding provided by the Government. [8938]

Mr. Page: The Department of Trade and Industry's contribution towards establishing the business links network is approximately £54 million over the period 1993–94 to 1995–96. Over the same period the Department has provided £113 million for business support services. For the current financial year the Department has made available £49 million for establishing the network and £81 million for business support services. No business link has proved not be financially viable.

Offshore Petroleum Licensing

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the current position of the 17th round of offshore petroleum licensing. [9728]

Mr. Page: I am pleased to announce that the Petroleum (Production) (Seaward Areas) (Amendment) Regulations 1996 came into force on 16 December 1996. These regulations vary the terms and conditions of petroleum licences to reflect the nature of the acreage to be awarded in the 17th round.

Following the entry into force of the regulations, the formal notice offering tranches within the UKCS for licence in the 17th round of offshore licensing will soon be published in the Official Journal of the European Communities. This will set out the detailed terms of the round, including the format of applications, the information required with the application, the criteria to be used in assessing applications and the date by when applications must be received which will be no earlier than 90 days after the notice appears.

In order to provide as much flexibility to applicants as possible, applications may be made from 6 January 1997 until the closing date. No decisions about licence awards will be taken until after the closing date for applications and after all applications have been thoroughly assessed.

Chemical Weapons Act 1996

Mr. Lidington: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the operation of the Chemical Weapons Act 1996. [9863]

Mr. Lang: The Chemical Weapons Act 1996 entered into force on 16 September 1996.

In consultation with industry and other interested parties, my Department has continued with preparations to implement the chemical weapons convention in the United Kingdom from when it comes into effect on 29 April 1997. The Chemical Weapons (Notification) Regulations 1996 and the Chemical Weapons (Licence Appeal Provisions) Order 1996 have been made; the production, possession and use of the most toxic chemicals is now subject to licence, with a more refined licensing system to be introduced from 1 January 1997; the first stage of the process of collecting information to enable the compilation of the United Kingdom's initial declaration to the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons has started; and consultation on the composition of the advisory committee is also well advanced. I hope to be able to make an announcement about the appointment of the committee's chairman soon.

EU Research Council

Mr. Lidington: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the outcome of the EU Research Council on 5 December. [9862]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The main issue considered by the Council was the Commission's revised proposal for 100 million ecu additional funding for the fourth framework programme for research and technological development. The Council agreed the proposal subject to a statement in the minutes by the Council and Commission recognising the need for the Council to examine urgently, on the basis of detailed figures provided by the Commission, the expenditure pressures expected to arise in category 3 of the EU's financial perspectives until the end of the current financing period. This statement was included to respond to concerns expressed by the UK, and shared by other member states, that the proposal should be fully compatible with the financial perspectives. The Netherlands and Sweden entered reservations that are expected to be raised as and when the European Parliament confirm funding agreed by the Budget Council for research and TENs—trans-European networks—in the final stages of the EU's 1997 budgetary process. The areas to be funded from the 100 million ecu match the United Kingdom priorities well, especially research on transmissible spongiform encephalopathies and vaccines, and on aeronautics technologies.

The Council had a brief discussion of the Commission's proposals for the structure of the fifth framework programme outlined in its working paper, "Towards the Fifth Framework Programme: material for the policy debate". Most member states shared the reservations expressed by the UK, that substantial further consideration was needed of programme objectives and management mechanisms to achieve the aim of a focused, user-driven programme.

The Council agreed conclusions endorsing the Commission's proposed research strategy for transmissible spongiform encephalopathies, which specifies priority research areas and embodies provisions that will ensure that the research undertaken is of the highest quality. The Council also agreed conclusions on the treatment of SMEs in the framework programme, the role of the joint research centre and the contribution of research to the fight against drugs.

Science, Engineering and Technology Expenditure

Mr. Lidington: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has reviewed the interrelationships between the science, engineering and technology expenditure of Government Departments. [9864]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Government chief scientific adviser has carried out such a review at my right. hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade's request. A report of the review is published today and I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

Newspaper Publishers

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received regarding the conclusion of the recent report of the Committee for Diversity and Pluralism on the space available for minority titles; and if he will make a statement. [7965]

Mr. Page: I have seen a copy of the report and noted the comments about the distribution of newspapers and magazines.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what conclusions his Department has reached in respect of the recent recommendations about home news delivery made by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission; and what assessment he has made of representations from local professional newsagents regarding margin decreases imposed by newspaper publishers. [7964]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The MMC last reported on newspaper distribution in 1993. It made no recommendations in respect of home delivery.

Newsagents' margins on the sale of newspapers are a commercial matter for the parties concerned.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the conclusions of the recent report of the Committee for Diversity and Pluralism relating to newspaper publishers' imposed margins; and if he will make a statement. [8582]

Mr. Page: I have seen a copy of this report and noted its contents.

Offshore Installations (Pollution)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what records his Department compiles of the oil company names and the oil drilling rigs and platforms involved in oil spillages and discharges in United Kingdom licensed blocks in the (a) North sea and (b) North Atlantic. [9500]

Mr. Page: Oil spills and oily discharges from oil and gas installations on the United Kingdom continental shelf are reported on an installation by installation basis to my Department. This information is then compiled on an annual basis to provide the records contained in the "Energy Report", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

The reports prior to 1994 are held in a non-electronic form on file in chronological order, whilst those from 1994 are held electronically and can thus be more readily sorted to give information on a company or installation basis.

European Business Survey

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when his Department received a copy of Grant Thornton's spring 1996 European Business Survey; and what assessment he has made of the survey. [9281]

Mr. Page: My Department received a copy of Grant Thornton's 1996 "European Business Survey" when it was published in May of this year.

I welcome the survey and have noted its findings. The Government place great emphasis on listening to and responding to the views of business. Grant Thornton's "European Business Survey" is an important contribution to that process. It provides a comprehensive, comparative analysis of the opinions of small and medium-sized enterprises in 17 European countries, including the United Kingdom, on a wide range of issues relevant to their competitiveness.

Airline Alliance

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the undertakings and conditions he has proposed in relation to the British Airways/American Airlines alliance are subject to amendment; and if he will consult on them with (a) the public and (b) interested parties. [9420]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade announced on 6 December that the parties to this alliance would have to agree to certain undertakings and conditions if they were to avoid a reference to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. In asking the Director General of Fair Trading to negotiate these undertakings he explicitly invited all interested third parties to make known their views on the proposals. Representations should be made to the Office of Fair Trading by 5 pm on 10 January 1997.

CE Energy

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he proposes to refer the bid for Northern Electric by CE Energy to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission; and if he will make a statement. [9310]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 16 December 1996]: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade announced on 13 December that he had decided not to refer CE Electric UK plc's proposed acquisition of Northern Electric plc to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

SOCIAL SECURITY

"New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans"

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what costs quoted in the document, "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans", were prepared in his Department; what detailed assumptions and interpretations were provided to officials in his Department to enable preparation of each cost; and what was the total cost to public funds of preparing each estimate. [6348]

Mr. Lilley: The Department of Social Security, in conjunction with the Treasury, prepared factual material relating to costings published in "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" numbered 64 to 80. The detailed assumptions and interpretations that were provided to officials are set out in my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary's reply to the hon. Member today. It is not the normal working practice to keep a record of the time spent in providing factual information to Ministers and it is not therefore possible to offer a reliable estimate of the costs involved.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much per year a claimant on invalidity benefit is allowed to earn under the therapeutic rule without it having any effect on his benefit; and if he will make a statement. [6901]

Mr. Burt: Incapacity benefit recipients are permitted to work for up to 16 hours per week provided that such work has been certified by their general practitioner as being beneficial to their specific medical condition. Such work will not normally affect benefit entitlement unless earnings exceed £45.50 per week.

Retirement Pension

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of (a) the number of pensioners (i) aged 75 years and over and (ii) aged under 75 years and (b) the cost of the flat-rate basic retirement pension, at 1995–96 prices, for the years (1) 1995–96, (2) 2000–2001, (3) 2010–2011, (4) 2020–2021 and (5) 2030–2031. [8016]

Mr. Heald: There are 4.3 million pensioners aged 75 years and over, and 6.2 million pensioners aged under 75 at 31 March 1996.[1]

Estimates for the expenditure on basic state retirement pension at 1995–96 prices for the specified years are given in the table.[2]

1995–96 prices £ billion

Year	Expenditure on basic state retirement pension for pensioners aged under 75	Expenditure on basic state retirement pension for pensioners aged 75 and over	Total expenditure on basic state retirement pension
1995–96	15.9	11.0	26.9
2000–01	16.8	12.8	29.5
2010–11	19.8	13.5	33.3
2020–21	19.4	15.8	35.3
2030–31	22.7	19.8	42.5

Notes:

[1] Figures are for all countries and are rounded to the nearest 100,000. State retirement pension includes all contributory and non contributory state pensions.

[2] Figures are rounded to the nearest £100 million.

Contributory basic retirement pension: the Government Actuary's Department. The figure for 1995–96 is based on the draft accounts for the national insurance fund for 1995–96. The figures for 2000–2001 onwards are based on the report by GAD on the "Financial Effects of the Pension Bill 1994 on the National Insurance Fund", Cm 2714, and assume price uprating of benefits and the equalisation of state pension ages at 65 by 2020. The expenditure on basic state retirement pension for pensioners above and below the age of 75 has been calculated using GAD population projects.

Non-contributory retirement pension: departmental estimates based on the departmental report.

Disability Working Allowance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the future of the disability working allowance. [8210]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The Government are committed to helping sick and disabled people who wish to return to work and disability working allowance is an important element of our approach. This benefit is providing valuable help to an increasing number of people: currently there are nearly 11,000 recipients, more than double the number 18 months ago. Similarly, expenditure for 1995–96 has risen to an estimated £15 million, just under three quarters of the total spend for the first three years.

Research conducted by the Policy Studies Institute into the performance of disability working allowance has recently been published and this, along with our own more recent management information, will be used to continue to look at ways of refining and improving the benefit.

Benefit Fraud Hotline

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of reports to the benefits cheat information line have proved unfounded to date; and what redress is available to those wrongly accused. [8073]

Mr. Heald: It is too early to give any indication of the number of unfounded or successful referrals generated by calls from the public to the hotline. Fraud investigations often take some time to process, to ensure that fraud is proven before someone has their benefit stopped.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Lord Chancellor's Department, my hon. Friend the Member for Plymouth, Sutton (Mr. Streeter), to the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) on 17 October 1996, Official Report, columns 1086-87.

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the annual cost of running the national benefit fraud hotline; [8924]

(2) what has been the total cost of the national benefit fraud hotline since it was set up. [8923]

Mr. Heald: The annual cost of running the national benefit fraud hotline will be approximately £1.5 million per annum. Information regarding running costs to date is not available.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much has been spent on advertising the national benefit fraud hotline in 1996–97. [8926]

Mr. Heald: The answer is £500,000.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average number of calls made to the national benefit fraud hotline each month. [8921]

Mr. Heald: The average number of calls to the national benefit fraud hotline per month is 27,791.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the cost of setting up and running the benefit fraud hotline; and if he will make a statement. [9444]

Mr. Heald: The cost of operating the national benefit fraud hotline is £1.5 million per annum.

War Pensions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) in what circumstances individuals may claim a war pension; and if he will make a statement; [8205]

(2) how many people are currently (a) claiming and (b) entitled to claim a war pension; and if he will make a statement. [8204]

Mr. Heald: In October 1996, the latest month for which figures are available, the War Pensions Agency received a total of 3,300 new claims for war disablement and war widows pensions. At 31 October 1996, 326,716 War Pensions were in payment. A war disablement pension may be claimed by any former member of the armed forces who considers that disablement may be due to an injury attributable to, or aggravated by, service. A war widow's pension may be awarded where the late husband's death was due to, or hastened by, service. Similar schemes exist in respect of disablement or death sustained outside the armed forces as a result of enemy action during the second world war, for example, by members of the merchant navy.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many new claims for war pensions were made in each of the last five years by people aged over 65 years. [8662]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will place in the Library a copy of the medical evidence in relation to hearing loss of war pensioners which was presented to the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions. [8719]

Mr. Heald: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Davyhulme (Mr. Churchill) on 12 December, Official Report, column 360.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) men and (b) women are currently in receipt of a war pension in the age categories (i) 20 to 30 years, (ii) 30 to 40 years, (iii) 40 to 50 years, (iv) 50 to 60 years, (v) 60 to 70 years, (vi) 70 to 80 years and (vii) over 80 years; and if he will make statement. [9446]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

However, information regarding the number of people in receipt of a war disablement or war widow's pension at 30 November 1996, the most recent date for which information is available, by age is in the table.

Age band	Disabled	Widows
Under 21	76	2
21–30	3,986	81
31–40	8,801	467

Deafness

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on proposed reductions for higher deafness pensions; and how many war pensioners will be affected. [8665]

Mr. Heald: No reductions in war disablement pensions awarded in respect of a hearing disability have been proposed. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has been advised that there has been a change in medical opinion on the effect of noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss on a subsequent hearing loss due to other causes such as aging.

Where medical matters need to be determined on a claim for, or application for review of, an award of a war disablement pension, the law requires that part of the claim to be determined by a medical officer appointed by the Secretary of State. The medical officer certifies whether or not the disablement is due to or aggravated by service in the armed forces, and also the degree of disablement due to service. The Secretary of State is required to make payments of war disablement pension in accordance with the certified level of disablement.

It was previously thought that a service-related noise induced hearing loss could intensify the effect of a subsequent hearing loss due to other causes such as aging. Authoritative medical opinion is now that such interaction does not occur and that the maximum effect of service-related hearing loss is at release from service. Medical officers must apply current medical opinion. For them to do otherwise would be unlawful.

It is estimated that, in 1997–98, some 10,000 claims by existing war pensioners for deterioration of their hearing loss, and about 1,000 new claimants may be affected by the change in medical opinion.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims have been made for industrial deafness from people employed or formerly employed in the mining industry; how many have been resolved; and how many are waiting for assessment. [8528]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

However, we estimate that as at 1 April 1995 there were more than 2,000 industrial injuries disablement pensions in payment for occupational deafness to people employed or formerly employed in the deep coal mining, opencast working and the manufacture of solid fuel industries.

Notes:

Information is based on a 10 per cent. sample with an allowance for late returns.

Severe Disablement Allowance

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will reconsider his decision to remove the qualification which currently entitles those on severe disablement allowance to retain their benefit without further medical assessment; and if he will make a statement in respect of future qualifications. [8446]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: We propose to change the severe disablement allowance regulations to simplify the medical test arrangements by passporting those who satisfy the SDA 80 per cent. disablement test through the all-work test; and target resources on the severely disabled by limiting the criteria which passport people through the SDA 80 per cent. disablement test to those which are adequate measures of 80 per cent. disability.

These proposals were the subject of a recent Social Security Advisory Committee consultation exercise. I will provide a statement to Parliament in response to the forthcoming SSAC report in due course.

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the estimated savings in his Department in (a) 1997–98 and (b) future years as a result of the changes to reduced earnings allowance. [8705]

Mr. Roger Evans: Savings in 1997–98 and 1998–99 have been estimated at £35 million per year.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give a breakdown by location of those affected by amendments to regulations relating to the reduced earnings allowance. [8725]

Mr. Evans: The available information is set out in the table:

Reduced earnings allowance cases by area directorate

Area directorate	Number of cases
AD1—East London And Anglia	882
AD2—Chilterns	409
AD3—London South	1,984

Benefits Agency: 100 per cent. count as at 31 October 1996 and subject to amendment.
Note:
Information relates to the amendment regulation that were introduced on 24 March 1996.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent representations he has received about changes in the reduced earnings allowance. [8721]

Mr. Evans: As at 9 December, we had over the preceding six weeks received 12 representations from hon. Members and 14 from members of the public.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals there have been to social security appeals tribunals against reductions in the reduced earnings allowance; what were the results of these appeals; how many appeals are to be considered by the Social Security Commissioners; by what date the appeals will be heard; and if he will make a statement. [8726]

Mr. Evans: The information regarding appeals to social security tribunals is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Since the amending regulations came into force from 24 March, there have been 24 appeals to Social Security Commissioners, 20 are from claimants and four from adjudication officers. It is not possible to say at this stage when the appeals will be heard.

Family Credit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the annual cost of increasing the maintenance disregard for lone parents receiving family credit to (a) £20 per week, (b) £25 per week and (c) £30 per week and of the numbers who would gain in each case. [8870]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table.

Estimated cost of increasing the maintenance disregard in family credit for lone parents

1997–98

Weekly maintenance disregard (£)	Additional net benefit costs (£ Million)	Number of gainers
20	5	50,000
25	10	50,000
30	15	50,000

Estimates are rounded to the nearest £5 million.

Income Support (Lone Parents)

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the annual cost of introducing a maintenance disregard for lone parents on income support and of the numbers who would gain, at a weekly disregard level of (a) £5, (b) £10, (c) £15 and (d) £20. [8869]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: It is estimated that the cost of introducing a £5 maintenance disregard for lone parents in 1997–98 would be around £60 million; the cost of a £10 disregard would be around £100 million; the cost of a £15 disregard would be around £135 million; and the cost of a £20 disregard would be around £165 million. Some 240,000 lone parents would gain.

The annual cost of a disregard and number of lone parents who gained would increase over time as the Child Support Agency's caseload increased. There would also be increases in costs and numbers if the disregard were extended to parents with care who had repartnered. The estimates apply the disregard to child support maintenance and other forms of child maintenance.

Paracetamol

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of deaths in the past seven years in which (a) paracetamol was the only drug involved and (b) paracetamol was one of the drugs involved. [7508]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 9 December 1996]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 17 December 1996:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on how many deaths over the past seven years resulted from (a) paracetamol as the only drug and (b) paracetamol as one of the drugs involved

The number of deaths associated with paracetamol reported to ONS over the past three years are shown in the attached table. The data for 1989 to 1992 are published, for each year separately, in Table 10 of Mortality statistics: injury and poisoning, England and Wales, series DH4, Nos. 16-18, copies of which are available in the House of Commons Library.

The figures in brackets indicate the number of deaths with a mention of alcohol. These bracketed figures are already included in the unbracketed data and should not, therefore, be added to them.

Aspirin

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths have occurred, in the most recent five-year period for which statistics are available, as a result of the use of aspirin or aspirin-based products. [7500]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 9 December 1996]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 17 December 1996:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National statistics to your recent question on how many deaths occurred as a result of using aspirin or aspirin-based products.

The table below sets out the numbers of deaths which were certified as due to salicylates (aspirin and related compounds) in the years 1991 to 1995. It includes deaths due to poisoning[1], and to adverse effects[2] of salicylates in normal use as underlying or secondary cause of death.

Hypothermia

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many pensioners have died in each year since 1992 as a result of hypothermia (a) nationally and (b) in the west midlands; and what was the percentage change from the previous year in each case. [7694]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 9 December 1996]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Jim Cunningham, dated 17 December 1996:

Fixed Capital Formation

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors underlie his forecast in table 3.3 of the Red Book about growth in 1997 of gross domestic fixed capital formation in private dwellings and land. [8278]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 9 December 1996]: Housing investment is expected to respond to the recovery in the housing market. This recovery is now well established. In the third quarter of this year the number of mortgage loans approved by banks and building societies was up by 28 per cent. on a year earlier, and in the three months to October turnover—as measured by particulars delivered at the Land Registry—was up by 19 per cent. on a year earlier. House prices in November were more than 7 per cent. higher than a year earlier. Housing starts have picked up in recent months, and this should be reflected in rising housing investment in 1997.

Self-assessment

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list (a) how much has been spent on advertising and (b) how many inquiries have been received regarding the introduction of self-assessment; and in each case what were his initial estimates. [8274]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 9 December 1996]: So far, £13,365,724 has been spent on advertising and publicity support material for the self-assessment public information campaign. In total 368,563 people have sought further information by telephoning the information line, or by sending a in a coupon for press advertising. Initial estimates for the campaign budget were £25 million over three years and we remain within that budget. The number of responses to the information line have been three times greater than was originally estimated.

Public Appointments

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many of the individuals appointed by his Department to public positions in the last year were first identified by the public appointments unit. [8551]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 10 December 1996]: The Chancellor's Departments and agencies appointed 13 individuals to public positions in the last year from names first identified by the public appointments unit.

Income Tax (Personal Allowance)

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost of increasing personal allowance on income tax to (a) £4,000, (b) £5,000, (c) £6,000, (d) £7,000 and (e) £8,000 in Scotland based on 1996–97 prices for each year from 1996–97 to 1999–2000; and in each case how many taxpayers would be removed from income tax altogether. [9079]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 13 December 1996]: It is not possible to provide a reliable breakdown below United Kingdom level for 1996–97. The latest available information is for 1994–95. The full-year cost of increasing the non-aged personal allowance in Scotland under the 1994–95 tax regime and at 1994–95 income levels is given in the table below. The numbers of taxpayers removed from income tax are also shown.

Increase non-aged personal allowance in Scotland from £3,445 to:	Full year cost (£ million)	Number of taxpayers taken out of income tax (thousands)
£4,000	290	100
£5,000	770	260
£6,000	1,200	400
£7,000	1,700	540
£8,000	2,100	710

Inflation

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the annual rate of inflation in April of (i) 1993, (ii) 1994, (iii) 1995 and (iv) 1996. [9133]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 16 December 1996]: The annual rate of inflation—measured by the retail prices index excluding mortgage interest payments—in April 1993, 1994, 1995 and 1996 was 2.9 per cent. 2.3 per cent. 2.6 per cent. and 2.9 per cent. respectively.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) which of the projects in the list entitled "Agreed Private Finance Initiative Projects" as of 26 November 1996, issued by the private finance unit, are signed projects; [9327]

(2) if he will make a statement on (a) the cash sum attached to and (b) the projected duration of each project in the list entitled, "Agreed Private Finance Initiative Projects" as of 26 November 1996, issued by the private finance unit; [9329]

(3) if he will place a copy of the list entitled "Agreed Private Finance Initiative Projects" as of 26 November 1996, issued by the private finance unit, in the Library; and if he will place updated lists in the Library on a monthly basis; [9328]

(4) to whom (a) the list, "Agreed Private Finance Initiative Projects" as of 26 November 1996, issued by private finance unit, and (b) predecessor versions of the list have been issued; and if he will place a copy of the list in the Library. [9326]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 16 December 1996]: Of the projects listed in the document dated 26 November, Departments advised the Treasury that those which are signed are as follows;

Parliament; and what is his latest calculation of the total cost of the last state opening. [8001]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 6 December 1996]: Expenditure on the state opening of Parliament properly reflects the nature of the occasion. The deployment of police officers to maintain public order on the route of the procession is an operational matter for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis.

On the cost of the last state opening, I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 11 November, Official Report, column 32, and to the answers given by my hon. Friend, the Minister of State for the Armed Forces, 19 November, Official Report, column 504 and by my right hon. Friend, the Minister of State, Home Office, 16 December, Official Report, column 450.

ENVIRONMENT

Household Growth

13. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on household growth. [7863]

Mr. Gummer: The latest projections for England show a rise in the number of households—by up to 4.4 million over a 25-year period up to 2016. I am determined to ensure that the maximum number of these are accommodated on land that has already been used—particularly in our city centres.

Local Government Finance

15. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the local authority financial settlement for 1997–98. [7865]

29. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the impact of the Budget settlement upon local authorities in England. [7879]

Mr. Curry: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made to the House on 27 November, Official Report, columns 337–42.

23. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received in respect of the standard spending assessment for Essex county council and Basildon district council. [7873]

Sir Paul Beresford: We have one representation from Essex county council about pupil numbers. We have not received any representations from Basildon district council on the provisional local government finance settlement for 1997–98.

28. Sir Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the extent to which the present formula for deriving standard spending assessments reflects accurately the differing costs of providing services in sparsely populated rural areas and areas of urban density. [7878]

Sir Paul Beresford: The research we commissioned into sparsity and local authority costs found that the size of the current allowance for sparsity in standard spending assessments is about right.

Research into density concluded that other measures of urbanness might also be relevant, but that further study would be needed.

For 1997–98, we therefore propose no changes in the basis of the sparsity and density allowances.

30. Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received following his statement on the local authority finance settlement for England in 1997–98. [7880]

Mr. Curry: Following my right hon. Friend's announcement on 27 November, authorities have until 3 January 1997 to make written representations on the 1997–98 settlement. We have received 45 written representations so far.

Business Rate

17. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the impact on rural East Anglia of proposals to reduce business rates for village shops. [7867]

Mr. Curry: We consulted widely on our proposals for a village shop rate relief scheme; local authorities in East Anglia welcomed the proposals as a positive measure to help rural communities in the region.

Council Housing (Central Heating)

18. Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to provide resources to each local authority to install central heating in each council dwelling built before 1974. [7868]

Mr. Clappison: At the time of the 1991 English house condition survey, 73 per cent. of local authority properties built before 1974 had central heating. Local authorities receive allocations from the Government each year through the housing investment programme and other programmes. It is for them to decide how best to use these locally-determined priorities.

Planning Policy

19. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the preservation of public open space and green belt land in Greater London. [7869]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Government remain committed to the preservation of green belt and open space land in London, as demonstrated in the recent publication of the housing Green Paper and revised strategic guidance for London planning authorities issued earlier this year.

Planning System

20. Sir Michael Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the practice of developers of paying the relevant local planning authority to conduct public opinion surveys in order to gauge the likely reaction of residents in surrounding areas to their proposed development; and what assessment he has made as to whether such payments detract from the independence of the planning system. [7870]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: There is no reason why developers should not pay all or part of any cost involved in procuring public opinion surveys, if that is relevant to the consideration of a planning application. The value of such an arrangement would be dependent on the professionalism with which the survey was conducted and the integrity of the local authority involved.

Greenhouse Gases

21. Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the number of countries which will meet their current commitments on reducing greenhouse gas emissions. [7871]

Mr. Gummer: All developed countries are committed, under the framework convention on climate change, to aim to return their emissions of greenhouse gases to 1990 levels by 2000.

It seems that three European Union countries, including the United Kingdom, are currently on course to meet this commitment.

Unified Business Rate

22. Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about unified business rates for small businesses in areas affected by out-of-town shopping development. [7872]

Mr. Curry: I have received a number of such representations.

Computers (Millennium Date Change)

24. Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the millennium compliance of his Department's computer systems and of those in local government, together with those with which they are connected; and if he will make a statement. [7874]

Mr. Gummer: My Department is aware of the potential problems to departmental systems that may be caused by the millennium date change.

The Department is a member of the public sector year 2000 group and is currently undertaking a study which will produce a year 2000 compliance audited inventory of systems, which will form the basis of a costed departmental year 2000 programme.

It is for individual local authorities to assess for themselves the millennium compliance of their computer systems and take whatever action they consider necessary.

Ferris Wheel, South Bank

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received asking him to call in the application for a ferris wheel on the south bank. [7875]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: My right hon. Friend received 25 representations asking him to call in the proposed ferris wheel. When the application was referred to my right hon. Friend as a departure from Lambeth's development plan, the council provided copies of over 100 representations it had received. By a large majority, these were in support of the proposal. My right hon. Friend considered all these representations very carefully before deciding not to call in the planning application.

City Challenge Partnerships

26. Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the progress being made by the city challenge partnerships. [7876]

Mr. Curry: Annual reports, reflecting the performance of all 31 city challenge partnerships during 1995–96, were received during the summer. The reports are very encouraging and show that city challenge is having a significant impact in regenerating some of the worst areas of urban deprivation.

The annual reports record outputs achieved in 1995–96 through each of the 31 city challenge partnerships programmes. The aggregated achievements were:

Over 26,000 dwellings were completed or improved (21 per cent. above target);

Over 35,200 jobs were created or preserved (16 per cent. above target);

Over 900 hectares of land were reclaimed or improved (4 per cent. above target);

Over 700,000 sq m of new or improved business and commercial floorspace was provided (3 per cent. below target);

Over 2,100 business start-ups (13 per cent. above target).

Over £1 billion of city challenge funding is expected to attract over £4.7 billion of private sector leverage over the lifetime of the initiative.

An independent study by a team from Liverpool John Moores university, the city challenge interim national evaluation, published by my Department in November. concluded that city challenge "is the most promising urban regeneration scheme so far attempted".

Building Research Establishment

27. Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the future of the Building Research Establishment. [7877]

Mr. Clappison: We have announced that we propose to privatise BRE by February 1997, and are on course to do so.

Car Parking

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to promote better management of car parking in town and city centres. [7864]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I am keen to see better management of car parking in town centres. Our planning guidance on town centres emphasises the importance of a coherent town centre parking strategy in maintaining urban vitality. My Department also supports the Association for Town Centre Management in its role in encouraging good practice.

Green-field Sites

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received from house builders about the need to use green-field sites; and if he will make a statement. [7866]

Mr. Gummer: I have received one letter from the House Builders Federation. I also discussed this issue, among many others, at the federation's annual lunch last week.

"New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans"

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what costs quoted in the document, "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans", were prepared in his Department; what detailed assumptions and interpretations were provided to officials in his Department to enable preparation of each cost; and what was the total cost to public funds of preparing each estimate. [6349]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department of the Environment, in conjunction with the Treasury, prepared factual material relating to costings published in "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" numbered 18 to 24. The detailed assumptions and interpretations that were provided to departmental officials are set out in my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary's reply to the right hon. Gentleman today. It is not the normal working practice to keep a record of the time spent in providing factual information to Ministers and it is not therefore possible to offer a reliable estimate of the costs involved.

West Midlands Police

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the non-council tax funding made available to the West Midlands police in 1996–97; what it will be in 1997–98; and what is the percentage difference between these two figures; [9016]

(2) what was the spending cap for the West Midlands police authority in 1996–97; what it will be in 1997–98; and what is the percentage difference between these two figures. [9017]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is as follows:

	1996–97 £ million	Provisional 1997–98 £ million	Percentage increase
Non-council tax funding of budget requirement[1]	309.017	314.391	1.7
Other grants[2]—Police specific grant, Additional Rule 2	0.991	2.965
Total non-council tax funding	310.008	317.356	2.4
Maximum budget requirement under proposed capping criteria	343.218	354.201	3.2

[1] Comprises revenue support grant, redistributed non-domestic rates, and principal formula police specific grant, which together represent the amount of Exchequer funding in support of the authority's budget requirement.

[2] Excluding certain capital financing grants, totalling £1.359 million in 1996–97; the figure for these grants in 1997–98 is not yet available.

Farmland Birds (Decline)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his letter to the hon. Member for Linlithgow of 27 November on the song thrush, if he will list the research projects into the causes and possible solutions to the decline in farmland birds to which he was referring. [8013]

Mr. Clappison: Research dealing with the possible relationship between farming practices over the last 20 years and population of farmland birds is listed in the table. All the research is funded by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Contractor	Project title
Institute of Terrestrial Ecology/ADAS	Field survey and experimentation; the effects of water regime on bird and invertebrate populations
Game Conservancy Trust	Arable reversions to permanent grassland; determining best management options to benefit declining bird populations
British Trust for Ornithology/Institute of Terrestrial Ecology/Central Science Laboratory	Effects of agricultural management on farmland birds
Oxford University/British Trust for Ornithology	The effects of agricultural change on bird populations
Central Science Laboratory	Assessment of the effects of seed treatments on birds feeding in orchards
Central Science Laboratory	Improving the assessment of pesticides risks to birds in orchards
Central Science Laboratory	Strategic monitoring and modelling of woodpigeon populations to predict damage and the implication of agricultural change
Ecoscope Applied Ecologists	Enhancement of farm woodlands for birds

Permaculture

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 6 November, Official Report, column 525, on a definition of permaculture, what non-statutory definitions of permaculture are employed by his Department in its dealings with other bodies. [9213]

Sir Paul Beresford: The new shorter Oxford English Dictionary defines "permaculture" as "An agricultural ecosystem intended to be complete and self-sustaining".

Legislation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many items of legislation relating to his Department have been repealed since January 1994; how many statutory instruments were introduced during the same period; and how many of the latter were (a) deregulatory and (b) fee orders. [9360]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster earlier today.

Single Regeneration Budget

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to make announcements regarding the single regeneration budget bid from North Lincolnshire council. [9612]

Sir Paul Beresford: The announcement was made yesterday. The bid submitted by North Lincolnshire council on behalf of the Barton Upon Humber regeneration partnership has been awarded £1.6 million SRB challenge fund support. A copy of the announcement is in the House of Commons Library.

Technetium

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking with respect to reports of increased levels of technetium (TC-99) in seafood collected along the Cumbrian coast; and if he will make a statement. [9656]

Mr. Clappison: All discharges from Sellafield to the Irish sea, including technetium-99, are regulated by means of authorisations granted by the Environment Agency.

British Nuclear Fuels has applied to the agency for a 25 per cent. reduction in the authorised discharge limits for technetium-99 from Sellafield, lowering it from 200 terabecquerels per year to 150 TBq per year. In addition, the company proposes to set as an internal working target an average discharge of 100 TBq per year.

The proposed reduction in the limit is contained in an application to the Environment Agency for a variation to the certificate of authorisation under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993 to dispose of liquid waste from premises on the Sellafield site. Proposals by the Environment Agency to vary the authorisation will be the subject of public consultation.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what regulations govern the collection and environmentally safe disposal of (a) nicad rechargeable batteries, (b) fluorescent light bulbs and strip lights and (c) oil-based surplus paints and white spirit from (i) households and (ii) industrial and commercial premises. [9575]

Mr. Clappison: Waste from household, industrial and commercial premises must be managed and disposed of in accordance with sections 33 and 34 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Although it will depend on the product and the use to which it has been put, most surplus oil-based paints and white spirits from industrial and commercial premises will be subject to additional controls set out in the Special Waste Regulations 1996. Waste nickel cadmium—Ni-Cd—rechargeable batteries from industrial and commercial premises are also subject to these regulations, under which all movements of "special waste" are tracked by a system of consignment notes to ensure that they reach an appropriate waste management facility. Waste fluorescent tubes from industrial and commercial premises are not special waste, but their movements are subject to the requirements of the duty of care under section 34 of the 1990 Act. The waste management licensing system is also designed to ensure that the recovery or disposal of controlled wastes—including fluorescent tubes—is carried out in a manner that does not harm human health or cause environmental damage. Under section 45 of the 1990 Act, responsibility for the collection of all these wastes from household premises lies with local authorities.

Ni-Cd rechargeable batteries are also covered by the EC batteries directive—(91/157)—which requires them to be marked with a separate collection symbol for the purposes of recycling or controlled disposal. The battery and electrical appliance industries have set up a working group which has formulated a strategy aimed at increasing the number Ni-Cd batteries being collected and recycled.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made by Government Departments towards the target of improving energy efficiency by 15 per cent. in the five years ended March 1996. [9856]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The Government's energy efficiency record has improved by just over 14.5 per cent.; very close to the 15 per cent. target we set five years ago. This is an important achievement and reflects much effort and commitment by the staff concerned. I am particularly pleased to draw attention to the very good results achieved on the Ministry of Defence estate. Full details are shown in the following tables.

Energy management in individual Government Departments is a matter for those Departments. Comparisons between Departments need to be treated with care since their estates and activities vary considerably. There have been greater pressures on electricity use, resulting in particular from the growth in use of IT equipment: some very large increases in electricity usage are due to moving a dominant HQ building from naturally ventilated premises to air-conditioned ones. This is in line with trends in the economy as a whole as part of the process of improving productivity.

I am delighted my own Department has been able to exceed the 15 per cent. target, with even more impressive progress having been made towards reducing emissions of carbon dioxide, down by 26 per cent. since 1990–91.

Energy efficiency has been an important consideration in the design of the Department's new headquarters buildings, both of which are expected to be classified as "very good" under the Building Research Establishment environment assessment method—BREEAM.

While these figures are encouraging, we must build on this success. Green Ministers have now agreed a further energy saving target of 20 per cent. by 2000, on the 1990–91 base year, and my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has given this his personal support. Further savings will be challenging, but I remain determined that the Government should set an example and contribute to the reductions we need in meeting our climate change commitments.

* Base year is not 1990–91. Agreed base year therefore used for the purposes of these calculations.

[1]Progress is expressed as a percentage relative to the 1990–91 base year value of the performance indicator in question. Positive figures represent improvement. The standard indicator, against which the target to improve energy efficiency by 15 per cent. by 31 March 1996 is measured, is obtained by weather-correcting energy consumption and converting to costs using "standard prices" for fuel (6p/kWh for electricity and 1.25p/kWh for all fossil fuels) then dividing by floor area. Conversion to money both reflects the relative costs of electricity and fossil fuel and their environmental impact, and the use of fixed prices eliminates the effects of tariff changes which distort the comparison of fuel bills. In August 1995 a report was provided for the Environment Select Committee which gave more detailed background on the energy efficiency initiative and on the indicators used.

[2] Although figures have been prepared on a consistent basis, caution should be exercised in comparing the energy use of different Departments and Agencies because of differences in their estate and the nature of their work. For example, the operational needs of prisons and the QEII Conference Centre mean that they have a pattern of energy use which is different from that of a Department which has predominantly office accommodation. Expenditure on energy and investment figures are included for information only. Investment figures relate to clearly identifiable energy efficiency measures undertaken by Departments. Energy efficiency is an integral part of all major construction projects, including building refurbishment and plant replacement; for example, the investment figure for the Lord Chancellor's Department is an estimate, a large proportion of which is accounted for by works justified on operational grounds and does not reflect specifically the proportion of works attributed to energy efficiency.

[3] The average performance figure for the civil estate cannot be derived by simply adding together the individual Departmental progress and dividing by the number of Departments because this does not allow for the large variations in consumption. The correct figure is obtained by calculating the value of the performance indicator for the year in question and the base year, for the civil estate as a whole, and calculating the reduction relative to the base year.

[4] Energy performance is improving despite the addition of new buildings, major refurbishment of specialised buildings, continued growth in the use of information technology, the business led demands of Agencies and longer working hours. Depots have been removed from the reporting mechanism.

[5] For consistency with earlier years of the energy efficiency initiative, the Departments of Education and Employment have been reported separately, in the format prior to the formation of the DFEE. Figures for ACAS (now part of DTI) and HSE (now part of DOE) have been included with those for Employment Department and Employment Service.

[6] QEII Conference Centre is reported separately because of its business led demands.

[7] Since the beginning of the initiative the Department of Health estate has reduced from a large number of naturally ventilated buildings to five densely occupied, mainly air-conditioned, buildings with consequent substantial savings of rent and CILOR. Only 17 per cent. of the Department's 1990–91 estate remains on the current portfolio and comparisons between the 1990 data and current performance are therefore unreliable and do not reflect the real improvements achieved.

[8] Base year is 1991–92.

[9] Base year is 1994–95 by which time energy efficient lighting and other improvements already installed. Increased Information Technology, and also constant air conditioning during 1995's hot summer months.

[10] Workload is increasing, affecting occupancy and requiring offices to be occupied for longer, increasing the use of energy. Greater use of information technology, expansion of the use of air conditioning and the upgrading of lighting levels has increased electricity consumption.

[11] Figures exclude the Vehicle Inspectorate Agency. Own investment in energy efficiency advised as 8 per cent.

[12] The Ministry of Defence (MOD) estate is different from the rest of the Government estate, and has been undergoing more radical changes. It is therefore treated in a slightly different way. In common with the civil estate, it has greatly increased its use of information technology. Full data for the years between 1990–91 and 1993–94 are not available, so the table shows the results for 1994–95 and 1995–96.

[13] Floor area cannot be calculated for the majority of the MOD estate. However, to enable comparisons with data for the civil estate which is adjusted for changes in floor area, a proxy has been used. Changes in consumption arising from estate changes have been estimated as a result of estate adjustments, with appropriate adjustments made to the gross data for the years following the change. In common with other Departments, the MOD has a target to achieve a 15 per cent. improvement by 31 March 1996. Positive figures represent improvement.

Granny Annexes (Council Tax)

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the assessment of granny annexes for council tax purposes. [9857]

Mr. Gummer: Under current legislation, if a building or part of a building, such as a granny annex, is a self-contained unit of living accommodation, then it is assessed for council tax purposes as a separate dwelling.

In some circumstances, this means that families whose dependent relatives live with them may face two council tax bills, one for each part of their property.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I now propose to amend these rules, so that in future a self-contained unit within a single property will not be treated as a separate dwelling if it is occupied by an elderly or disabled member of the family living in the rest of the property. This will relieve the burden which presently falls on some families who have chosen to provide support for close family members under the same roof with a measure of independence.

Departmental Cash Limits

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to change his Department's cash limits for 1996–97. [9947]

Mr. Curry: The DOE/LACAP (local authority capital) non-voted cash limit will be increased by £3,529,000 from £1,741,558,000 to £1,745,087,000. The increase is due to the take-up of end-year flexibility for supplementary credit approvals to local authorities to enable funding of additional cash incentive scheme grants. The EYF entitlement of £4,105,000 announced by the Chief Secretary on 12 July 1996—Official Report, columns 327–28—was subsequently recalculated following revised forecast outturn data. The increase will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Local Government Commission

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his response to the recommendations from the Local Government Commission following its recent reviews of Blackburn, Blackpool, Halton, Medway Towns, Peterborough, The Wrekin, Thurrock and Warrington. [9948]

Mr. Curry: The Local Government Commission has made recommendations for changes to the district warding arrangements in all eight areas that it has reviewed. It has also made some recommendations for changes to parish boundaries and parish electoral arrangements.

I have decided to accept all of the Commission's recommendations. It is important that the process for making local authority electoral arrangements should be seen to be fully independent. For this reason, it is the Government's intention not to modify the substance of electoral recommendations from the Local Government Commission.

My Department will be consulting on draft orders so that these recommendations can be implemented in time for the elections to the future unitary councils on 1 May 1997.

Sulphur Protocol

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a strategy for meeting the United Kingdom's commitments under the second sulphur protocol of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe; and if he will make a statement. [10278]

Mr. Gummer: I am pleased to announce that the United Kingdom has today ratified the UNECE second sulphur protocol. We are among the first handful of countries to do so. Achievement of the emission reduction targets in the protocol will mean even better protection for our sensitive ecosystems, forests, lakes and buildings, as well as benefits for our continental European neighbours. It will also lead to substantial improvements in the quality of the air we breathe which will be good for asthma sufferers and for everyone who has breathing problems.

The protocol needs ratification by 16 countries to become fully effective. So far 28 countries have signed it but only five, including now the United Kingdom, have ratified. It is clearly important that all those who have signed the protocol should now ratify it. Only by concerted action across the whole of Europe shall we deal effectively with the problem of acid rain.

Our commitment is to reducing emission of sulphur dioxide by 80 per cent. by 2010 compared with 1980 levels. I am publishing today a national strategy setting out how this will be achieved.

The figures for 1995 reveal that emissions from the major sources—power stations, refineries and large industrial boilers and furnaces—have been reduced by 55 per cent. since 1980. This shows that we have already made enormous strides in tackling acid rain.

We have buried the old myth that Britain is the dirty man of Europe. It never was true. Our policies on this, and on the whole range of environmental matters, show how serious is this country's commitment to the environment. We have a record of which we can be rightly proud.

I am pleased to announce also that changes have been made to the national plan which gives effect in the United Kingdom to the requirements of the European Community large combustion plant directive. The aim of these changes, which were widely welcomed by those who commented on the consultation proposals issued in the summer, is to ensure that future allocations of emissions quota for both sulphur dioxide and oxides of nitrogen under the national plan are more closely in line with regulatory consents under integrated pollution control.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Legislation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many items of legislation relating to his Department have been repealed since January 1994; how many statutory instruments were introduced during the same period; and how many of the latter were (a) deregulatory and (b) fee orders. [9366]

Mr. Ancram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to her by my hon. Friend the Member for Langbaurgh (Mr. Bates) earlier today.

Prednisolone

Mr. Flynn: to ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate how many people (a) have been prescribed and (b) took the steroid prednisolone in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9604]

Mr. Moss: It is not possible to identify the number of patients who were prescribed or took prednisolone. Data collected cover only the number of prescriptions dispensed in Northern Ireland, and not how many patients were prescribed any medicinal product.

Hospital Admissions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate (a) how many and (b) the percentage of people who have been admitted to hospital as a direct result of complications after (i) surgery and (ii) medicinal treatment in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9605]

Mr. Moss: The information is not available centrally.

Care in the Community

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate (a) how many and (b) the percentage of diagnosed mentally ill who are currently receiving care in the community; and if he will make a statement. [9611]

Mr. Moss: It is estimated that over 100,000 people seen by GPs each year are diagnosed as having some form of mental illness. Over 99 per cent. receive treatment in the community. Mental health is a key area in the "Government's Regional Strategy for Health and Social Wellbeing 1997–2002".

General Practitioners

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what are the building cost location factors for general medical practitioners in Northern Ireland; [9684]

(2) for what reasons the building cost location factor for general medical practitioners in Northern Ireland is lower than the factors for England and Wales; [9685]

(3) when the last review was undertaken of building cost location factors for general medical practitioners in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the United Kingdom; [9686]

(4) what plans he has to bring the building cost location factor for general medical practitioners in Northern Ireland into line with that for England and Wales. [9687]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subjects in this question has been delegated to the Health Estates under its chief executive, Mr. R. H. Browne. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from R. H. Browne to Dr. Joe Hendron, dated 17 December 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions concerning the building cost location factor for Northern Ireland.

PQ2066

The building cost location factor for Northern Ireland is currently 0.75.

PQ2067

The building cost location factor for Northern Ireland is lower than the factors for England and Wales because the cost of construction, as measured by the Building Cost Information Service provided by the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors, is lower in Northern Ireland than in England or Wales.

PQ2068

The location factors for General Medical Practitioners in Northern Ireland and Great Britain were reviewed for 1996–97, applicable from 1st April 1996. These location factors were produced by the BCIS and were current at that time.

PQ2069

The principles of the GP Cost Rent Schemes and the source of the location factors are the same throughout the United Kingdom. By definition the location factors will vary according to local current building costs.

It is hoped that the above information fully explains the situation but should you require any further details I will be happy to provide them.

Information Technology Projects

Ms Church: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 11 November, Official Report, column 69, what were the proposed annual savings for the nine IT projects in the bands above and including £1 million to £2 million, undertaken since 1992; and what have been the realised annual savings. [6711]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 28 November 1996]: The information is not available in the form requested. However, the available information is listed:

Cost band (£ million)	Number of IT projects	Proposed savings (£ million)	Realised savings (£ million)
1–2	2	0.959	[1]0.441
	3	8	[2]—
	1	[3]—	6.8
2–3	1	1.3	[2]—
3–4	1	0.701	[2]—
5–6	1	This project has been curtailed

[1] In addition to unquantifiable productivity gains.
[2] Implementation of project not yet complete, therefore realised savings not available.
[3] Information not readily available. To provide the information would incur disproportionate cost.

Appointments

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the party political affiliations of the appointments which he made to statutory bodies and boards (a) between 1 April 1986 and 31 March 1996 and (b) 1 April and 1 July 1996. [9157]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 16 December 1996]: Information on the party political affiliation of those appointed to statutory bodies and boards during the period in question is not available. This information will, however, be available in the future for those persons appointed to bodies which fall within the remit of the Northern Ireland Commissioner for Public Appointments, in line with the terms of the commissioner's guidance published on 1 July 1996.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list each appointment which he made to statutory boards and bodies between 1 April 1986 and 31 March 1996, the length of time of each of the appointments and the remuneration paid in respect of each appointment; and how many of the appointments were of members of political parties. [9156]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 16 December 1996]: To identify each appointment made and the remuneration level involved over a 10–year period would incur disproportionate costs. Current remuneration levels are, however, set out in "Public Bodies 1995", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. Information is not available on the number of appointees during the period from April 1986 to March 1996 who were members of political parties.

Prisoners

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what estimate he has made of the number of drug dependent prisoners currently detained in prisons in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [9201]

(2) for what reasons women convicted of terrorist offences are routinely strip-searched when leaving or returning to prison from periods of parole; and how many women prisoners were strip-searched in each of the last five years; [9171]

(3) what representations he has received in respect of discrimination against women convicted of terrorist offences. [9280]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 16 December 1996]: Responsibility for the subjects in these questions has been delegated to the Prison Service under its chief executive, Mr. Alan Shannon. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Alan Shannon to Mr. Max Madden, dated 16 December 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to the 3 Parliamentary Questions you have tabled. You requested the information regarding:

- the number of drug dependent prisoners currently detained in prisons in Northern Ireland;
- the reasons why women convicted of terrorist offences are routinely strip-searched when leaving or returning to prison from periods of parole and how many women were strip-searched in each of the last 5 years; and
- what representations the Secretary of State has received in respect of discrimination against women convicted of terrorist offences.

There are currently no persons detained in prisons in Northern Ireland who are registered as being drug dependent.

Full searching (referred to as strip-searching in your question) is a necessary measure to maintain prison security. A full search is a visual search only and at no time is the prisoner entirely undressed. Prison staff do not have the power to conduct any body cavity search although they may require prisoners to open their mouths.

All prisoners (male and female) are routinely full searched when leaving or returning to the prison to inhibit the passage of items such as explosives, weapons, drugs and other contraband into and out of the prison in order to reduce the risk of escape and for the general safety of prisoners, staff and visitors.

The average female population and the number of female committals in each of the last 5 calendar years was:—

	Average female population	Number of female committals
1996 to 31st October 1996	30	169
1995	35	159
1994	41	198
1993	40	158
1992	41	166

As to the question of representations made to the Secretary of State, I regret we do not keep statistics in a form which would enable us to answer it.

I hope that this information is helpful.

HEALTH

"New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans"

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what costs quoted in the document, "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" were prepared in his Department; what detailed assumptions and interpretations were provided to officials in his Department to enable preparation of each cost; and what was the total cost to public funds of preparing each estimate. [6345]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health, in conjunction with Her Majesty's Treasury, prepared factual material relating to costings published in "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" numbered 56 to 63. The detailed assumptions and interpretations that were provided to officials are set out in my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary's reply to the hon. Gentleman of today. It is not the normal working practice to keep a record of the time spent in providing factual information to Ministers and it is not therefore possible to offer a reliable estimate of the costs involved.

Family Health Services

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for the future of family health services. [9495]

Mr. Dorrell: The Government today publish a White Paper, "Primary Care: Delivering the Future", which responds to many of the issues raised in the primary care debate launched by the Government last year. It sets out practical proposals to improve further the quality and accessibility of primary care services and to offer improved development and career opportunities for the professionals who work in them. "Primary Care: Delivering the Future" complements the proposals set out in the recent White Paper, "Primary Care: Choice and Opportunity". Copies of both White Papers are available in the Library.

Secure Accommodation (Young People)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many young people were being held in local authority secure accommodation (a) on criminal grounds and (b) on care grounds by age and by gender on the latest date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [9123]

(2) how many young people in local authority secure accommodation on criminal grounds were (a) on remand, (b) sentenced under section 52(2) of the Children and Young Persons Act 1993 and (c) held on other grounds, on the last date for which figures are available. [9083]

Mr. Burns: I refer the hon. Member to table D in "Children Accommodated in Secure Units year ending 31 March 1996, England" A/F 96/21, copies of which are available in the Library. Information on which part of section 53 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 under which a young person is detained is not collected centrally.

Renal Services (Greater Manchester)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response has been received from the South Manchester University Hospitals NHS trust to the consultation document on the future of renal services in Greater Manchester; when he expects a decision to be announced; and if he will make a statement. [9180]

Mr. Horam: The response from South Manchester University Hospitals NHS trust is one of many responses to consultation which West Penine health authority is evaluating. The right hon. Member may wish to approach Mr. P. Hadfield, chairman of the trust, or Mr. J. S. Downs chairman of West Pennine health authority, for further details. The lead purchaser will present its evaluation to the seven participating health authorities in mid-January 1997. Members of each authority will then be given the opportunity to consider the proposals further.

East London and City Health Authority

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his oral statement of 2 December concerning future funding of the East London and City health authority, Official Report, column 686, what was the source of the additional funds he referred to; and when his decisions on the amounts and purposes will be (a) determined and (b) published. [9318]

Mr. Malone: From within the overall settlement for hospital and community health services, revenue funds have been set aside for a number of special purposes.

The procedure and timetable for most of the schemes involved were set out in a circular letter to health authorities—EL(96)109—copies of which are available in the Library.

Decisions on applications for special assistance to health authorities undergoing structural or strategic change will be determined and published individually.

Legislation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many items of legislation relating to his Department have been repealed since January 1994; how many statutory instruments were introduced during the same period; and how many of the latter were (a) deregulatory and (b) fee orders. [9362]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster gave her today.

Prednisolone

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of (i) afflictions for which the steroid Prednisolone is prescribed, (ii) the side-effects which have been recorded and (iii) the alternative treatments there are for such conditions; and if he will make a statement. [9647]

Mr. Malone: Prednisolone is a corticosteroid licensed for more than 70 specific indications which are serious or life threatening, such as asthma, malignant diseases, and arthritic disorders.

The side effects of Prednisolone are well known and documented in product information for doctors and patients and in the British National Formulary, copies of which are available in the Library.

Other treatments are available for many of the diseases for which Prednisolone is indicated. These are not usually alternatives, but are used to treat symptoms rather than modify the disease process.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people (a) have been prescribed and (b) have taken the steroid Prednisolone in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9646]

Mr. Malone: It is not possible to identify the number of people who were prescribed Prednisolone.

Medical Negligence Claims

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total compensation paid by the NHS in medical negligence claims in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9651]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the figures that were given to the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn), on 6 March 1995, Official Report, columns 41–42, and 17 May 1996, column, 586, and to the hon. Member for Dulwich (Ms Jowell) on 28 November 1996, Official Report, columns 371–72.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many medical negligence claims have been (i) brought and (ii) been successful against NHS physicians in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9650]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is not held centrally.

Dental Registrations

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new registrations on the dental register have been made in each year since 1985; and if he will make a statement. [9443]

Mr. Malone: The number of new registrations added to the dental register since 1985 is in the table.

Number of new registrations on the dental register from 1985 to date

Registered for	Total
1985	1,103
1986	1,036
1987	1,083
1988	1,038
1989	1,047
1990	1,206
1991	1,075
1992	1,141
1993	1,254
1994[1]	571
1995	1,041

Source:
Dental register.
Note:
[1] The drop in the number added to the register in 1994 is due to the effect of the extension in 1990 of the British dental undergraduate course from four years and one term to five years.

Private Health Insurance

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of people with private health insurance cover in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement. [9447]

Mr. Horam: The Department does not collect this information.

Medicines Control Agency

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the names of the members of the Medicines Control Agency together with their (a) other employers, (b) other voluntary and paid work undertaken, (c) length of service and (d) areas of expertise; if he will set out the reasons for their appointment in each case; and if he will make a statement. [9653]

Mr. Malone: The Medicines Control Agency, MCA, is an agency of the Department of Health whose staff are employees of the Department of Health on standard civil service terms and conditions.

Decisions regarding the licensing of medicines are made by the licensing authority—United Kingdom Health Ministers. For all new drugs, the licensing authority seeks the advice of the Committee on Safety of Medicines before deciding whether they should be licensed.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the (a) total and (b) percentage of funding provided for the Medicines Control Agency by the pharmaceutical companies in the current year; and if he will make a statement. [9652]

Mr. Malone: Apart from interest earned on bank balances and minor receipts for miscellaneous services, the Medicines Control Agency's income receipts for 1996–97 are currently estimated to total about £25 million, all of which will comprise fees from pharmaceutical companies.

Prescription Drugs Damages Cases

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prescription drugs damages cases (i) have been brought and (ii) were successful against (a) the NHS and (b) pharmaceutical companies in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9649]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is not held centrally.

Complications Admissions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate (a) how many and (b) the percentage of people who have been admitted to hospital as a direct result of complications after (i) surgery and (ii) medicinal treatment in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9648]

Mr. Horam: Information on hospital admissions following surgical and medical care is set out in the table. As to the number of hospital admissions relating to an adverse reaction to a medicament, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 14 November, Official Report, columns 334–35.

Multiple Chemical Sensitivity Disorder

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has had from the charity Miracles in relation to recognition of multiple chemical sensitivity disorder in the United Kingdom and other issues; what response he is making; what action he plans to take; and if he will make a statement. [9425]

Mr. Horam: I shall let the right hon. Member have such information as is available as soon as possible.

SCOTLAND

"New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans"

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what costs quoted in the document, "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans", were prepared in his Department; what detailed assumptions and interpretations were provided to officials in his Department to enable preparation of each cost; and what was the total cost to public funds of preparing each estimate. [6346]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Scottish Office, in conjunction with the Treasury, prepared factual material relating to costings published in "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" numbered 81, 82, 83 and 89. The detailed assumptions and interpretations that were provided to officials are set out in the reply given today by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary. It is not the normal working practice to keep a record of the time spent in providing factual information to Ministers and it is not therefore possible to offer a reliable estimate of the costs involved.

Publicity

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what promotional and public information campaigns his Department is (a) currently running and (b) planning to run during the next six months; and for each campaign (i) how much it will cost, (1) in total and (2) to his Department, (ii) what agencies or bodies are undertaking the work and (iii) what is its planned duration. [7411]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Details of current and planned promotional and public information campaigns by my Department are set out in the table.

Campaigns currently running	Campaigns planned over the next six months	Cost		Agencies undertaking work	Planned duration

Department have been repealed since January 1994; how many statutory instruments were introduced during the same period; and how many of the latter were (a) deregulatory and (b) fee orders. [9369]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster today.

Water Bills

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current amount for water bills allowed for in assessments of benefit entitlement; and by how much it has increased since 1994. [9181]

Mr. Burt: Social security benefits do not identify separate amounts for specific expenditure items. Benefit levels are considered for uprating each year and we seek to take account of all relevant factors including water costs as part of that exercise.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which weather stations are used for the purpose of cold weather payments in those areas covered by postcodes NE1 to NE49. [9606]

Mr. Roger Evans: The weather stations used for the postcodes NE1 to 49 inclusive are as follows:

Boltshope Park: NE19, 44, 47–48

Boulmer: NE22, 24

Carlisle: NE49

Newcastle: NE1–13, 15–18, 20–21, 23, 25–43, 45–46

Note:

Postcode NE14 does not exist.

PRIME MINISTER

Libya (Sanctions)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what action he is taking to enter into dialogue with Arab and African countries about sanctions against Libya; [8012]

(2) what recent representations he has received from (a) France, (b) Arab states and (c) the USA on the reconsideration of UN sanctions against Libya. [9393]

The Prime Minister: When the need arises, we remind other Governments, including Arab and African Governments, that sanctions against Libya must remain in place until Libya complies fully with the requirements of the United Nations Security Council's resolutions. These requirements include the surrender of those accused of the Lockerbie bombing for trial in Scotland or the United States.

The Arab League and some Arab Governments have pressed for sanctions to be lifted and a compromise reached on Lockerbie.

The US and French Governments agree with us that sanctions against Libya must remain in place until Libya complies fully with the requirements of the UN Security Council's resolutions.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 17 December. [8127]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today.

Council of Europe and WEU

Sir Michael Shersby: To ask the Prime Minister if he will announce the composition of the United Kingdom delegation for the 1997 ordinary Session of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe. [9742]

The Prime Minister: The 1997 ordinary Session of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe will be opened in Strasbourg on 27 January 1997. The delegation from the United Kingdom for the Session will consist of 19 members of the Conservative party, 15 members of the Labour party and two members from the minority parties.

The appointments of representatives and substitutes have been made on the basis of nominations by the parties concerned in accordance with the resolution of the House on 22 May 1992, Official Report, column 682 and the House of Lords on 18 June 1992, Official Report, House of Lords, columns 290–92.

The same delegation will be representing the United Kingdom Parliament at the Assembly of the Western European Union.

Representatives from the Government benches will be:

My hon. Friend, the Member for Reading, West, (Sir A. Durant) who will continue to act as leader of both delegations.

My right hon. and hon. Friends the Members for Northavon (Sir J. Cope) for Warwick and Leamington (Sir D. Smith), for Calder Valley (Sir D. Thompson), for Ashford (Sir K. Speed), for Medway (Dame P. Fenner), for Bournemouth, East (Mr. Atkinson) for Ravensbourne (Sir J. Hunt), for Bridlington (Mr. Townend), and Lord Newall.

Representatives from the Labour party will be:

The hon. Members for: Wentworth (Mr. Hardy), for Tooting (Mr. Cox), for Wansbeck (Mr. Thompson), for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks), for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond), for Birmingham, Hodge Hill (Mr. Davis), and Lord Kirkhill.

The representative from the minority parties will be the hon. Member for Inverness, Nairn and Lochaber (Sir R. Johnston).

The following substitutes have been appointed to act as necessary on behalf of the delegates from the Government benches:
The hon. Members for Sheffield, Hallam (Sir I. Patnick), for Norfolk, North (Sir R. Howell), for Brighton, Kemptown (Sir W. Bowden), for Salisbury (Mr. Key), for Hayes and Harlington (Mr. Dicks), for Chipping Barnet (Sir S. Chapman), for Newark (Mr. Alaxander), Baroness Hooper and Earl of Dundee.

From the Labour Party the hon. Members for Sunderland, North (Mr. Etherington), for Glasgow, Provan (Mr. Wray), for Newport, East (Mr. Hughes), for Glasgow, Maryhill (Mrs. Fyfe), for Leigh (Mr. Cunliffe), for Leicester, South (Mr. Marshall), for Manchester, Central (Mr. Litherland) and Baroness Gould of Potternewton.

From the minority parties: Lord Mackie of Benshie.

Sir Anthony Durant: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library a copy of the latest information bulletin of the United Kingdom delegation to the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe and the Assembly of the Western European Union. [9785]

The Prime Minister: I have done so today.

Public Appointments

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Prime Minister how many of the individuals appointed by his Department to public positions in the last year were first identified by the public appointments unit. [8548]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 10 December 1996]: Eight of the individuals appointed by me in the last year were first identified by the public appointments unit.

State Opening of Parliament

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister what proposals he has to reduce the expenditure on the state opening of

Prescribed Drugs (Adverse Effects)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people have (a) become crippled and (b) died from taking the steroid Prednisolone in Scotland in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9639]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information is not held centrally on the number of people crippled from taking the steroid Prednisolone in Scotland.

There have been no deaths in Scotland in the last five years where the steroid Prednisolone has been mentioned on the death certificate.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much in total his Department has failed to recover from companies defaulting on the terms of awards of regional selective assistance for each of the last 10 financial years; and if he will list the companies from which his Department has failed to recoup these moneys. [6481]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 28 November 1996]: The amounts of regional selective assistance grant written off each year since 1990–91, the earliest year for which records are available, are given in the table.

	£ million	Number of individual cases
1990–91	0.45	21
1991–92	1.39	16
1992–93	0.87	21
1993–94	0.20	6
1994–95	19.90	28
1995–96	1.25	13

Payments of regional selective assistance to individual companies are generally regarded as commercially confidential as are any grant payments subsequently recovered or written off. It is, however, already public knowledge that in 1994–95 an amount of £17.6 million was written off in respect of the Health Care International case, and this amount is included in the total shown for that year.

Companies (Financial Assistance)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what types of financial assistance his Department provides to companies creating or safeguarding employment with proposed development within Scotland; and under what legislation these payments have been made. [6489]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 28 November 1996]: Grant assistance from the Scottish Office for these purposes is generally given under the powers of the Industrial Development Act 1982. The principal grant assistance scheme is regional selective assistance, for which the legislative authority is section 7 of that Act. Full details of assistance given under the Act are contained in the publication "Industrial Development Act 1982: Annual Report by the Secretaries for Trade and Industry, Scotland and Wales for the year ended 31 March 1996" London, HMSO, 1996.

Agri-environmental Schemes

Sir Jerry Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each of the agri-environmental schemes for which his Department is responsible, (i) actual expenditure in 1992–93, 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96, (ii) provision and estimated outturn of expenditure in 1996–97 and (iii) planned expenditure in 1997–98, 1998–99 and 1999–2000, distinguishing in each case between (a) payments to farmers, (b) running costs and (c) monitoring costs. [8008]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 10 December 1996]: The information is set out in the following table. Information on running costs is not collected separately and it is not possible at this stage to make forward projection of monitoring costs for other than environmentally sensitive areas. Overall planned provision is £9.235 million for 1997–98, £13.468 million for 1998–99 and £15.7 million for 1999–2000.

Seat Belts

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate how many (a) drivers, (b) front seat passengers and (c) back seat passengers have been (i) killed and (ii) injured as a result of not wearing a seat belt in a vehicle in Scotland in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [8227]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 11 December 1996]: The table provides the recorded statistics on the number of drivers and passengers killed or injured in Scotland in cars or vans while not wearing a seat belt, whether or not one was fitted. Separate information between front and back seat casualties is only available for cars. Statistics for seat belt wearing are only available until 1993 and only for the occupants of cars and vans. The table does not include figures for casualties where the wearing of a belt was not reported–about 11 per cent. of all casualties.

	1991		1992		1993
	Killed	Injured	Killed	Injured	Killed	Injured
Car or van drivers	23	332	27	305	26	285
Car or van passengers	52	1501	28	1,087	24	913
Front seat car passengers	15	149	13	142	8	129
Rear seat car passengers	29	1,242	13	874	16	733
All van passengers	8	110	2	71	—	51

Separate information on the number of casualties in Scotland saved by wearing seat belts is not available, but for Great Britain as a whole it is estimated that 510 lives and 8,800 serious injuries have been saved each year as a result of seat belts being worn.

Student Grants

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the cost of making student grants available at 1990 levels in 1996–97 prices in Scotland. [9080]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 12 December 1996]: Expenditure on student awards in Scotland in financial year 1990–91 was £172.46 million. The equivalent cost at 1996–97 prices, adjusted for the increased number of award holders, is estimated to be £333,657 million.

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the administrative cost in each local authority area in Scotland of implementing the nursery voucher scheme in the first full year of its operation. [8969]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 16 December 1996]: The operational evaluation of the pilot year voucher schemes which I have commissioned from a research team at Stirling university will look, amongst other things, at the impact on providers, including the four piloting authorities, of introducing the voucher system. This research will be published following submission of the research team's final report in early autumn 1997.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

BSE

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about bovine spongiform encephalopathy. [10143]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A further report on bovine spongiform encephalopathy was placed in the Library of the House today.

The report gives an update on new virus Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease cases and explains the new measures taken on cattle identification and animal feed. Reference is made to the five point plan agreed in Florence for the resumption of exports and explains that all the preconditions, with the exception of the accelerated slaughter programme, have been complied with. It also details the sustained improvement in the handling of specified bovine material in slaughterhouses. The report also announces the occurrence of transmissible spongiform encephalopathy in a domestic cat born after the extension of the specified bovine ban in September 1990.

The number of clinically suspect cases of BSE reported in Great Britain has continued to fall, and at 31 October 1996 was 36.1 per cent. less than at the same time in 1995, and 63.3 per cent. less than the same time in 1994. A continued improvement is expected for the future.

Renderers and Abattoirs (Prosecutions)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list each prosecution initiated by his Department which has now been completed against (a) renderers, (b) abattoirs, (c) livestock dealers, (d) animal feed manufacturers and (e) pet food manufacturers in each year since 1990, with in each case the (i) name of the individual or organisation prosecuted, (ii) nature of the charges and (iii) outcome of the prosecution; and if he will make a statement. [3505]

Mr. Boswell: Available records do not reveal any prosecutions as having been instituted by the Department against (a) renderers, (d) animal feed manufacturers, or (e) pet food manufacturers during the years in question.

The following prosecutions, initiated by the Department, have been completed in the relevant years.

1990

One prosecution of an abattoir under the pig carcase grading regulations. Convictions on three charges sustained on appeal. Conviction now spent.

1991

One prosecution of a livestock dealer for offences in relation to certification for export of squirrel monkeys. Conviction now spent.

1992

No relevant prosecutions.

1993

One prosecution of a livestock dealer by name of White for offences relating to movement of animal records. Fined a total of £2,500, ordered to pay £1,000 costs.

1994

One prosecution of an abattoir by name of Casemore for offences in relation to maximum residue limits in meat, and record keeping. Fined a total of £800, ordered to pay £400 costs.

One prosecution of a mink keeper by name of Smith for keeping mink on unlicensed premises. Fined £5,000, ordered to pay £700 costs.

1995

One prosecution of a company called Towers Barron Ltd. for acting as a cutting premises without a licence. Fined a total of £2,750, ordered to pay £1,423 costs.

One prosecution of an individual called White for three similar offences. Fined a total of £1,000, ordered to pay £1,340 costs.

One prosecution of a livestock dealer called Shone for offences relating to export certification for horses. Fined £1,500, ordered to pay £4,000 costs.

1996 (to date)

One prosecution of an abattoir called Bakers for failure to stain, and failure to separate specified bovine offal. Fined a total of £3,000, ordered to pay £2,000 costs.

One prosecution of an abattoir run by an individual called Kellow for similar offences. Fined £1,500, ordered to pay £1,050 costs.

One prosecution of an abattoir called Stillmans (Somerset) Ltd. for similar offences. Fined a total of £7,500, ordered to pay £3,000 costs.

One prosecution of an abattoir run by Blackpool Abattoir Co. Ltd. for failure to separate specified bovine material. Fined £3,000, ordered to pay £1,818 costs.

One prosecution of an individual called Townsend who worked in an abattoir premises for using vertebral bones in the production of mechanically recovered meat. Fined £600, ordered to pay £1,380 costs.

One prosecution for unlicensed slaughtering against an individual called Newall. Fined £2,000, ordered to pay £1,500 costs.

One prosecution of a slaughterman in an abattoir under welfare rules. Fined £250.

One prosecution of a livestock dealer called Smith for record keeping offences. Fined a total of £3,800, ordered to pay £5,767 costs.

One prosecution of an individual called Hart for unlicensed cutting. Fined a total of £900, ordered to pay £500 costs.

To research these matters to provide more details of the prosecutions would entail excessive cost.

Mammalian Meat and Bone Meal (Transport)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what provisions other than the Food Safety (General Food Hygiene) Regulations 1995 provide for the decontamination of vehicles used to transport mammalian meat and bone meal from potentially BSE-infected cattle; and if he will make a statement. [7947]

Mrs. Browning: Regulation 14 of the Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy Order 1996 requires any vehicle used to transport mammalian meat and bone meal, or material containing mammalian meat and bone meal, to be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected as soon as possible after the transport ceases and in any event before the vehicle is used for any other purpose.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

Sir Robert Hicks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of applications (a) made during 1996 for the countryside stewardship scheme, (i) in total and (ii) for Devon and Cornwall; and if he will indicate the number (1) approved and (2) being processed; and (b) made in 1995 which have not yet been determined. [8693]

Mr. Boswell: Some 2,545 countryside stewardship applications were received during the 1996 application period; 1,336 have been identified for approval, of which 124 were in Devon and Cornwall. A total of 163 agreement offers have been issued, six in Devon and Cornwall, and the target is to issue all the remainder by the end of January.

Of the applications received, 873 have been rejected, 42 of which are in Devon and Cornwall. The remainder are still being processed.

Four 1995 applications in Devon and Cornwall passed to the Ministry by the Countryside Commission have not yet been determined. The equivalent figure for the scheme as a whole is not readily available.

Sir Robert Hicks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the average length of time his Department takes to process and approve applications for the countryside stewardship scheme; and if he will make a statement. [8694]

Mr. Boswell: The average length of time to process agreements in 1996 is likely to be about six months. This is no longer than had been expected, owing in part to receipt of more applications than expected. It is the Ministry's intention to reduce the processing time for 1997.

Organic Produce

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the scope for increasing the size of the United Kingdom market for organic produce. [9221]

Mr. Boswell: The size of the market for organic produce will be determined by consumer demand and industry efforts to promote the market. However, it is already evident that demand is strong and that much is being met by imports. The Government are doing a great deal to encourage farmers and growers to respond. As well as providing aid for conversion to organic production, we also provide free advisory services and fund the United Kingdom register of organic food standards and a substantial organic research and development programme.

Legislation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many items of legislation relating to his Department have been repealed since January 1994; how many statutory instruments were introduced during that same period; and how many of the latter were (a) deregulatory and (b) fee orders. [9345]

Mr. Boswell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster today.

Fishing Permits

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made concerning the scheme of fishing permits proposed for adoption after 2002. [9662]

Mr. Baldry: Council regulations 3760/92 and 1627/94 already provide the framework for Community licence and permit systems to enable member states to regulate fishing activities. These are the basis of the detailed measures in western waters introduced on 1 January 1996. The UK industry is therefore already familiar with these arrangements, which involves licences issued by UK fisheries Departments. The Government would reject any proposals to take away such national responsibilities and introduce a single EU fishing fleet managed and policed from Brussels.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Service (Female Appointments)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many female chief constables there have been since 1966. [8859]

Mr. Maclean: The first female chief constable was appointed on 31 July 1995 to Lancashire Constabulary. A second female chief constable was recently appointed to Wiltshire Constabulary with effect from 1 April 1997.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure that female police officers reach senior positions; and if he will make a statement. [8861]

Mr. Maclean: The police service, supported by the Government, actively pursues equal opportunities policies. Such policies directly affect the numbers of female police officers who are now able to reach the more senior ranks.

Every force has an equal opportunities statement which includes sections on unfair discrimination, and which is supported by a grievance procedure.

In addition, forces are committed to open selection and promotion systems and make regular use of the Equal Opportunities Commission codes of practice on selection and promotion.

Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary has been a driving force behind many equal opportunities initiatives and maintains an oversight of equal opportunity issues within the police service. The inspectorate carries out regular inspections of forces and monitors the implementation of equal opportunities policies.

Police forces are also subject, in common with other employers, to the requirements of the Race Relations Act 1976 and the Sex Discrimination Act 1975. These require forces not to discriminate on the basis of race, colour, ethnic or national origin or gender in the recruitment and promotion of staff.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many female (a) chief constables, (b) deputy chief constables, (c) assistant chief constables, (d) chief superintendents and (e) superintendents there are currently. [8860]

Mr. Maclean: At present there is one chief constable, although there will be two with effect from 1 April 1997. There are seven assistant chief constables and 41 superintendents, the ranks of deputy chief constables and chief superintendent having been abolished in 1995.

Children and Crime Report

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the recommendations of the recent Institute of Public Policy and Research report, "Children and Crime: Taking Responsibility". [8944]

Mr. Maclean: I cannot comment as I have not seen the report. If the hon. Member would like to send me a copy, I shall be happy to consider it.

Physical and Sexual Abuse

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into (i) the effects of physical and sexual abuse and (ii) the correlation between such abuse and offending. [9301]

Mr. Maclean: The Home Department has not carried out any research which specifically examines these questions.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of convicted offenders who have suffered physical or sexual abuse in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9300]

Mr. Maclean: None. The information which would be required to make such estimates is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Police Helmets

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the traditional police helmet will be replaced by a new design. [9217]

Mr. Maclean: This is an operational matter for chief officers of police.

I understand that the Association of Chief Police Officers established a uniform project group in 1995 to research the national requirements for uniform and uniform-related equipment. Among the issues that the group is considering is the design of the traditional helmet, having regard for the need to afford police officers adequate protection.

It is important to preserve the reassuring image and tradition which the existing helmet helps bring to officers on foot patrol. We are, therefore, working with ACPO to ensure that any redesign of the helmet fully takes into account this unique symbol of the British "bobby" and will seek to preserve the traditional style so far as it is compatible with affording officers the protection they deserve.

Young Offenders

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many juveniles were (a) cautioned and (b) found guilty of indictable offences, in each of the last 17 years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [9091]

Mr. Maclean: Information available centrally on the number of young offenders cautioned and found guilty for indictable offences is published annually in "Criminal Statistics England and Wales". Table 5.26 of the 1995 edition, table 5.23 of the 1989 edition and table 5.19 of the 1983 edition refer.

Copies of the publications are available in the Library.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of recorded offenders were juveniles in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [9092]

Mr. Maclean: The information is given in the table.

Persons aged 10 to 17 found guilty or cautioned for indictable offences as a proportion of all offenders by sex 1991–95

England and Wales

Percentages

Sex	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995
Males	26	25	24	24	25
Females	32	33	31	34	34
Persons	27	27	25	26	26

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the joint statement on the sentencing of persistent young offenders recently issued by the Magistrates Association and Justices' Clerks Society. [9860]

Mr. Maclean: I very much welcome this excellent statement which encourages speedier sentencing of persistent young offenders.

The statement suggests that, when dealing with those who have committed multiple or "spree" offences, it would be right for the court to sentence for the offences currently before it rather than wait for further alleged offences to come to trial. Such steps should help to reduce the number of adjournments that may be needed, speed up youth justice and ensure that these offenders are promptly and properly punished.

I commend the Magistrates Association and Justices' Clerks Society for drawing up this guidance, which has been widely distributed within the criminal justice system.

Offenders (Ages)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the peak age of offending for men and women in (a) London and (b) England and Wales in (i) 1979, (ii) 1990 and (iii) the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [9096]

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 10 December 1996, Official Report, columns 134–35.

Legislation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many items of legislation relating to his Department have been repealed since January 1994; how many statutory instruments were introduced during the same period; and how many of the latter were (a) deregulatory and (b) fee orders. [9363]

Mr. Howard: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster today.

Police Officers (Private Hire)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how much income from the hiring of police officers by private companies was raised by each regional police authority in England and Wales in each year since 1990; and if he will make a statement; [9503]

(2) what guidelines he has issued to police authorities on the hiring of police officers by private companies; and if he will make a statement. [9502]

Mr. Maclean: Police Officers are not available for hire. Statistics on police income are published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy, but these do not distinguish income derived from private companies.

Mentally Ill People (Prosecutions)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many mentally ill people receiving care in the community have been (a) prosecuted and (b) found guilty of (i) non-violent and (ii) violent crimes in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9610]

Mr. Maclean: The information is not collected.

Bus Attacks (Gwent)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many attacks on (a) passengers and (b) staff have been (i) reported, (ii) resulted in prosecutions and (iii) resulted in convictions in each of the last five years broken down by (1) gender and (2) age bands of 10 years in each of the bus companies operating in the Gwent region; and if he will make a statement. [9609]

Mr. Maclean: The information is not collected.

Vehicle Crime

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the statute of limitations for juvenile offenders involved in car crime. [9426]

Mr. Maclean: The Government are committed to tackling juvenile crime and have made a number of legislative changes specifically aimed at strengthening the courts' powers for dealing with young offenders. However, we are not aware that the limitation causes problems in practice and there are no plans at present to undertake any such review.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the maximum sentence that can be passed on a 17-year-old convicted of reckless driving. [9428]

Mr. Maclean: The maximum sentence that can be passed on a 17-year-old convicted on indictment of dangerous driving is two years detention and/or a fine of up to £1,000. Disqualification from driving is obligatory on conviction for this offence.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the maximum time after which the prosecution can be brought for a vehicle crime. [9427]

Mr. Maclean: Under section 127 of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980, proceedings for summary offences, which include offences such as taking a vehicle without consent, must be commenced within six months of the date when the alleged offence occurred.

In the case of theft or aggravated vehicle-taking, where a vehicle is taken unlawfully without consent and there is dangerous driving, damage or injury to others before the vehicle is recovered, the offence can be tried either in a magistrates court or in the Crown court and no time limit applies.

Justice and Home Affairs Council

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Justice and Home Affairs Council held in Brussels on 28 and 29 November. [9859]

Mr. Howard: I represented the United Kingdom at the Council. The main matters dealt with were as follows:

The Council agreed as "A" points, among other things, a joint action creating a directory of competences in the fight against organised crime, and a joint action establishing a European Community funded incentive and exchange programme to combat trafficking in human beings and child sex abuse.

The presidency reported progress in negotiations on the draft external frontiers convention, and on the Europol draft regulations. The United Kingdom hopes to ratify the Europol convention before the end of the year.

Meetings were held with Ministers of associated central and eastern European countries and, separately, with Cyprus. These concentrated on the fight against drugs and the need to co-operate against trafficking in human beings and paedophile rings.

Two reports were considered on the fight against organised crime, one dealing with the situation in 1995, the other looking forward to future possibilities for closer co-operation and assistance. The first report will be presented to the European Parliament in due course.

A joint action was agreed concerning action to combat trafficking in human beings and sexual abuse of children.

A draft report to the European Council on drugs in the European Union was discussed. Some amendments were agreed and the report will now be forwarded, via the General Affairs Council, to the European Council.

There was extensive discussion of a draft joint action, proposed by France, on approximation of laws and practices to combat drug consumption and drug trafficking. While a strong will was shown on all sides to combat drug trafficking, final agreement of the text of the action was deferred pending further consultations by several countries.

Agreement was reached on a draft resolution on sentencing for serious illicit drug trafficking. The text will now be submitted to the European Council.

The presidency outlined proposals for settling the outstanding issue of European Court of Justice jurisdiction in the draft convention on corruption. More work was commissioned on these proposals.

A report to the European Council on achievements in the field of justice and home affairs was briefly discussed. The text will now be finalised and forwarded to the European Council.

A brief summary was given of activities in the field of crime prevention, including the outcome of recent seminars and proposals for a follow-up seminar next year.

Priorities were outlined by the Netherlands for its presidency in the first half of 1997. These included implementation of the Europol convention, further work on action to combat drugs and organised crime, trafficking in human beings and abuse of the Internet, and development of the structured dialogue with the countries which are candidates for accession.

Discussions took place on aspects of the draft convention on the service of documents in civil and judicial matters. In the absence of agreement, further work was commissioned.

Conventions were signed allowing Sweden, Austria and Finland to accede to two conventions on jurisdiction and enforcement of judgments in civil and commercial matters and on the law applicable to contractual obligations. Protocols were signed providing on an optional basis for European Court of Justice jurisdiction in the European Union conventions on the protection of the European Communities financial interests and on the use of information technology for customs purposes.

Closed Circuit Television Challenge

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many bids have been received in the latest CCTV challenge competition; and if he will make a statement. [9861]

Mr. Maclean: The deadline for bids under round 3 of the closed circuit television challenge competition was 20 November. A total of £15 million is available to crime prevention partnerships in 1997–98 to support CCTV schemes and 371 bids have been received; the value of the bids is £26.8 million. The bids are now subject to detailed assessment. We shall be announcing the results of the competition early next year.

"New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans"

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what costs quoted in the document "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" were prepared in his Department; what detailed assumptions and interpretations were provided to officials in his Department to enable preparation of each cost; and what was the total cost to public funds of preparing each estimate. [6354]

Mr. Howard: The Home Office, in conjunction with Treasury, prepared factual material relating to costings published in "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" numbered 25, 26 and 89. The detailed assumptions and interpretations that were provided to officials are set out in my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary's reply to the hon. Member today. It is not normal working practice to keep a record of the time spent in providing factual information to Ministers and it is not therefore possible to offer a reliable estimate of the costs involved.

Stolen Guns and Vehicles (Deaths and Injuries)

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been (a) killed and (b) injured by (i) stolen pistols and (ii) stolen motor vehicles in each of the last five years. [8945]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 13 December 1996]: Information as to whether firearms used in offences have been stolen has not, in the past, been routinely collected centrally in England and Wales. However, a special exercise has recently been conducted to find out whether the guns used in homicide were licensed or not and, if not, whether they were stolen.

This covered the years 1992 to 1994, and out of a total of 55 homicides involving the use of a handgun where it was known that the weapon was illegally held, one was reported to have been stolen.

No information is held centrally to show whether motor vehicles involved in killing or injuring people were stolen.

Child Abuse

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the operation of the law in relation to the prosecution of child abuse cases. [7629]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 16 December 1996]: The Government commissioned several independent research projects to look into the effectiveness of measures introduced by the Criminal Justice Acts of 1988 and 1991 to improve the handling of cases involving child witnesses. These examined the use of live television links for giving evidence and the use of video-recorded interviews for giving evidence-in-chief, and the speed of prosecutions for cases involving child witnesses. Further research has been commissioned to evaluate the effectiveness of training given to those involved in child abuse investigations and into the admissibility and sufficiency of evidence gathered during those investigations, the results of which will be available at the end of 1997.

The findings from the completed research have shown that the legislation, and other supporting measures introduced by the Government have improved the management of child abuse cases. The Government will continue to make further changes where we consider, in the light of research and other information, they will bring further improvements.

Police (Contracted-out Services)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what studies he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the effects of contracting out services supplied by civilian personnel of police forces, with particular reference to (i) the morale of those currently employed, (ii) the security of information, (iii) unpredictable surges of work due to emergencies, (iv) discipline, (v) collective levels of skills and experience and (vi) the quality of communication with the forces concerned. [8810]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 16 December 1996]: These are operational matters for chief officers. As police authority for the Metropolitan police, I am aware that there has been a recent review of support services for the force and the Commissioner has advised me of the recommendations made and the decisions reached.

Police (Civil Staff)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement concerning recent changes to the employment conditions, terms and contracts of Metropolitan police civil staff support services; what consultation took place on those changes; how many staff are affected; what is the cost of implementing the changes with particular reference to (a) consultancy fees, (b) redundancies and (c) early retirement plans; when the changes will be fully implemented. [8882]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 16 December 1996]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that there has been no recent change to the employment contracts of Metropolitan police civil staff. A review has been conducted of headquarters support services covering 5,000 staff. Following a two-month consultation period, proposals for a range of efficiency savings, including contracting-out services covering some 2,000 posts, have been approved by the Metropolitan police policy board. Contracts are expected to be let by mid 1998. Detailed implementation costs are not yet available.

Charity Collections

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (i) prosecutions and (ii) convictions there have been, in each of the last three years for which figures are available, for breaches of licensing rules on street and house-to-house charity collections in (a) the Metropolitan police district, (b) the City of London police district, (c) for each other area in the United Kingdom and (d) in total; and if he will make a statement. [8884]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 16 December 1996]: Information collected centrally does not identify individual offences committed under the Police Factories etc. (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1916 and the House to House Collections Act 1939 from other summary offences.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to require each police station in the Metropolitan police district to be supplied with a regular list of street collection licences in that area; and if he will make a statement. [8886]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 16 December 1996]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that police stations within the Metropolitan police district are routinely informed of all authorised charitable street collections in their area.

Charity Fraud

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a statistical breakdown of prosecutions and convictions for charity fraud offences in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [8885]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 16 December 1996]: The information is not available centrally.

Immigration Detainees

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are currently detained for immigration purposes; what is the longest period of detention; how many people detained for immigration purposes have, over each of the last three years, obtained bail; what procedures exist under which a person detained for immigration purposes may apply for bail; and if he will make a statement [9176]

Mr. Kirkhope [holding answer 16 December 1996]: The latest information relates to 31 October 1996 when 1,033 persons were detained solely under Immigration Act powers in Prison Service establishments or Immigration Service detention centres. The longest period of detention at that time was 75 months and related to a person since released whose case was awaiting a decision from the European Court of Human Rights. Statistics on detainees who obtained bail are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. With certain limited exceptions, anyone who is detained can apply for bail. An application can be made to a chief immigration officer, a police inspector or an immigration adjudicator.

WALES

"New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans"

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what costs quoted in the document, "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans", were prepared in his Department; what detailed assumptions and interpretations were provided to officials in his Department to enable preparation of each cost; and what was the total cost to public funds of preparing each estimate. [6347]

Mr. Hague: The estimate of the cost of establishing the Welsh Assembly published in "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" was made by me. It is not the normal practice to keep a record of the time spent in providing factual information to Ministers and it is not therefore possible to offer a reliable estimate of the costs involved.

Energy Advisers

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress has been made in meeting the commitment laid down in the energy plan for Wales published in 1989 of establishing a network of energy advisers over the Principality. [8696]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Welsh Office's Energy and Environment Office has a network of five energy advisers across Wales who provide free, impartial advice during site visits. The advisers are continually trained and developed to provide businesses and other organisations with effective advice on the efficient use of energy.

Prescribed Drugs (Adverse Effects)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people (a) were prescribed and (b) took the steroid Prednisolone in Wales in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9643]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information collected centrally relates to the number of prescription items dispensed. Available information shows that there were 610,750 prescriptions, excluding drugs used in hospitals, dispensed for Prednisolone between June 1994 and July 1996. This does not, however, indicate the number of people being prescribed or taking the drug as one person can have more than one prescription dispensed during the period in question.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people have (a) become crippled and (b) died from taking the steroid Prednisolone in Wales in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9642]

Mr. Jones: Information on the number of people crippled by taking Prednisolone is not available centrally. There were no deaths, as a result of taking Prednisolone, recorded in Wales between 1993 and 1995—the only years for which these data are readily available.

Medical Procedures (Complications)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate (a) how many people and (b) the percentage of people who have been admitted to hospital as a direct result of complications after (i) surgery and (ii) medicinal treatment in Wales in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9644]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Due to the complexity of the data analysis required, I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

St. David's Medical Centre, Cardiff

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what official engagement the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones) had with Mr. Dusan Bako and Dr. Angelina Bako and others at the St. David's Medical Centre, Pentwyn drive, Pentwyn, Cardiff on Monday 9 December. [9505]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: None.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date his Department (a) set and (b) informed the parties of the date of the oral hearing into the inclusion of Triocare in the list at the St. David's Medical Centre, Pentwyn drive, Pentwyn, Cardiff under the NHS Pharmaceutical Regulations 1992. [9504]

Mr. Hague: My officials are presently in the process of setting the date of the oral hearing and informing all parties.

Objective 2 Status

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent consultations he has had with the member of the European Commission responsible for regional affairs concerning objective 2 status for industrial south Wales. [9506]

Mr. Hague: My hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North met the European Commissioner responsible for Regional Affairs on 6 December when they discussed the successor objective 2 single programming document for industrial south Wales.

Public Expenditure Statement Leak

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the outcome of the inquiry that he has set up into the leaking to the press on Tuesday 10 December of the contents of his statement on the 1997–98 Welsh Office budget. [9507]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the statement that I made to the House on Thursday 12 December, Official Report, column 412. I will keep him informed about the progress of the inquiry and will let him know the outcome when the investigation is complete.

Legislation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many items of legislation relating to his Department have been repealed since January 1994; how many statutory instruments were introduced during the same period; and how many of the latter were (a) deregulatory and (b) fee orders. [9372]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Lady to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

New Health Authorities

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his 1996 departmental report, Cm 3215, page 79, if he will make a statement on progress in achieving the savings of £8 million arising from the setting up of the five new health authorities. [9508]

Mr. Hague: The savings targets of the five unified health authorities, established on 1 April this year, are linked to full implementation of all related charges and I expect to see savings achieved in 1998–99. Progress towards the targets will be monitored through the health authority annual accounts.

Written Answers to Questions

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Workplace (Fire Precautions) Regulations

Sir Donald Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has received from the British Retail Consortium concerning the proposed Workplace (Fire Precautions) Regulations; and what estimate he has made of the cost to retailers, particularly small businesses, of the proposed regulations. [9138]

Mr. Freeman: I refer to the reply given on 11 December, Official Report, columns 263–64, by the Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville), to the hon. Member for Dumbarton (Mr. McFall).

My right hon. and noble Friend Baroness Blatch, Minister of State, Home Office, and I recently also had a meeting with representatives of the British Retail Consortium to discuss the possible implementation costs for the retail trade in complying with the proposed Workplace (Fire Precautions) Regulations. We visited two retail outlets with the British Retail Consortium, a fire service inspector and a fire prevention officer to assess at first hand possible implementation costs. I propose to visit further outlets in due course to gain further information for myself and colleagues. The Home Office will use the results, together with views from other businesses, in preparing a compliance cost assessment, which will accompany the proposed regulations.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Millennium Projects

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what steps she has taken to ensure that submitted millennium projects which meet the Millennium Commission's published criteria are objectively assessed to determine their distinctiveness; and how she defines distinctive in relation to millennium projects; [7422]

(2) which of the criteria for the proposal stage of the Millennium Commission's round 3 the Dreaming 2000 project failed to meet; and what differences there were between the criteria for the application stage of round 2 and the proposal stage of round 3; [7708]

(3) how the Millennium Commission ensures that its criteria are applied consistently in decisions on bids; and if she will make a statement; [7710]

(4) if she will make a statement on the factors underlying the Millennium Commission chief executive's rejection of the Dreaming 2000 project; [7705]

(5) what assessment she has made of the advantage of millennium proposals which involve schools taking responsibility for conservation projects; and if she will make a statement. [7707]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: These are matters for the Millennium Commission. I shall write to the hon. Member in my capacity as chairman of the commission, and place copies of my replies in the Libraries of the House.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what estimate she has made of the latest date for a start on the millennium dome in order to ensure completion and fitting out before 31 December 1999. [9433]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall write to the hon. Member in my capacity as chairman of the commission, and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Sports Council

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress is being made on the restructuring of the Sports Council. [10425]

Mr. Sproat: Letters patent under the Great Seal granting royal charters of incorporation to the United Kingdom Sports Council and the English Sports Council were made on 19 September 1996. The United Kingdom Sports Council and the English Sports Council will become fully operational form 1 January 1997, subject to the legal transfer to the new bodies of the assets and liabilities of the Great Britain Sports Council. From that date, the United Kingdom Sports Council and the English Sports Council will receive a parliamentary grant from class X, vote I, to provide services and support for the benefit of sport and physical activities.

The English Sports Council will become responsible from 1 January 1997 for the distribution in England of lottery proceeds for expenditure on or connected with sport.

Television Relay Building Programme

Sir James Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what are the conclusions of her review of the ultra-high frequency television relay building programme; and if she will make a statement. [10295]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The announcement made on 16 April 1991 by the then Home Secretary, my right hon. Friend the Member for Mole Valley (Mr. Baker), Official Report, column 131, explained that the Government had agreed with the BBC and Independent Television Commission that the programme of building 25 ultra-high frequency relay stations a year to extend UHF television coverage would be maintained until 1996 when its further continuation would be reconsidered. I have now undertaken that consideration in close consultation with the Independent Television Commission and the BBC, which have jointly administered the relay building programme to date.

[1] Media schedules and costs have still to be finalised.
[2] The figures given are indicative. Final costs will be dictated by the frequency of the campaign which will be triggered by severe weather conditions.
[3] Historic Scotland.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department has spent on promotional or public information campaigns in each of the last five years; and how much he estimates will be spent on these campaigns during the (i) current and (ii) next financial years. [7536]

Mr. Forsyth: Details of expenditure on promotional or public information campaigns by my Department in each of the last five years, and estimated spend for the current and next financial year is as follows:

Spend for each of the last five years	£
1991–92	1,220,000
1992–93	1,366,000
1993–94	1,058,000
1994–95	1,682,000
1995–96	1,819,000
Estimated spend for current financial year
1996–97	[1] 1,860,000
1996–97	[2] 1,350,000
Estimated spend for financial year
1997–98	[3] 2,000,000

[1] This figure is the original estimate based on spend to date and proposed spend to the end of the financial year.
[2] This figure is an additional estimate based on spend to date and proposed spend for three new public information campaigns running in the latter part of the current financial year: tackling violent crime, food hygiene awareness and severe weather warning.
[3] Costs are estimated figures only. Departmental budgets for next financial year have not yet been agreed.

Locate in Scotland

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total grant made by the Scottish Office to Locate in Scotland; and how much of this grant was spent in advertising in England to encourage companies to relocate in Scotland in the last year for which information is available. [8105]

Mr. Kynoch: In 1995–96 Locate in Scotland had a total budget of £8.9 million, none of which was spent on advertising to encourage companies in England to relocate to Scotland.

EU Institutions (Scottish Interests)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the means by which the Government ensure that Scottish interests are effectively represented in the institutions of the European Union. [8934]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Scottish interests are effectively represented to the institutions of the European Union by being incorporated into the view of the United Kingdom. I am able to ensure that this is the case by my attendance at Cabinet, and at Cabinet Committees which discuss UK policy on EU issues. In addition, Scottish Office Ministers attend Council meetings as part of the UK delegation and when matters relevant to my responsibilities as Secretary of State are discussed. As at 11 December, Scottish Office Ministers have attended 13 Councils during the current year.

Nominations by the Government have ensured that five of the total of 24 UK members of the Committee of the Regions serve in Scottish local authorities, that the current UK judge in the Court of Justice is Scottish, and that two members of the Economic and Social Committee are Scots. My hon. Friend will be aware that Scotland is already served by eight MEPs, of whom one is a Vice President of the European Parliament. These arrangements ensure that Scottish interests are effectively represented in the institutions, and the advisory committees, of the European Union.

Prisoner Assaults

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were prisoner-on-prisoner assault rates in Scottish prisons in the most recent period for which figures are available. [8943]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. John McFall, dated 17 December 1996:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your question relating to the number of prisoner-on-prisoner assaults in Scottish prisons in the most recent period for which figures are available.

The most recent published figures are set out on page 9 of the Scottish Prison Service Annual Report and Accounts for 1995–96 (HMSO Cm 508). There were 108 such serious assaults. The figure for 1996–97 will be published in the Annual Report for that year in July 1997.

Landfill Tax (Exemptions)

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he proposes to permit a temporary exemption to landfill tax for those local authorities who have to dispose of unsold paper for recycling, having collected the paper to meet the Government's target for recycling waste by 2000. [8920]

Mr. Kynoch: The scope of the tax is a matter for consideration by my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Erskine Bridge

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the location of the gas and water pipes on the Erskine bridge; and what assessment the Health and Safety Executive has made of them. [9071]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Two water pipes and one gas pipe are situated on each side of the Erskine Bridge, in the open, underneath the footways. The structure was designed to accommodate these services and they have been in place since the bridge opened in 1971.

Following an incident on 4 August 1996 when an oilrig platform collided with the bridge, the pipes were inspected by the undertakers responsible and minor repairs carried out.

No specific assessment of the pipes has been made by the Health and Safety Executive although it has made a number of visits to the bridge since the incident in connection with the main structural repairs.

Legislation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many items of legislation relating to this Department have been repealed since January 1994; how many statutory instruments were introduced during the same period; and how many of the latter were (a) deregulatory and (b) fee orders. [9367]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given today by my hon. Friend the Paymaster General.

Island of Coll (Fuel)

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to provide short-term emergency fuel supplies to the island of Coll. [9277]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office has no immediate plans to provide emergency fuel supplies to the island of Coll. However, arrangements for doing so have been the subject of discussions between the emergency planning unit of the Scottish Office, the local council, local suppliers and the Army.

Mr. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with Argyll and Bute Council about the need for short-term emergency fuel supplies for the island of Coll. [9278]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The emergency planning branch of the Scottish Office has been regularly in touch with Argyll and Bute emergency planning unit about the fuel shortage on the island of Coll. Discussions have taken place about the options for the delivery and dispensing of fuel by commercial sources and by the Army. Argyll and Bute council have deployed a diesel-powered vehicle to the island to help with transport problems.

Local Government

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the size of each local authority area in square miles or kilometres. [9394]

Mr. Kynoch: The land area of each Scottish local authority was given in "The New Councils" published by the Government Statistical Service in May 1995 as follows:

	Km²
Aberdeen city	186
Aberdeenshire	6,318
Angus	2,181
Argyll and Bute	6,930
Clackmannanshire	157

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) proposals and (b) appeals were submitted in each local authority area as a consequence of the introduction of council tax on 1 April 1993. [9398]

Mr. Kynoch: The available information relates to all classes of proposal to change the valuation list made to assessors and subsequent appeals. Information on proposals/appeals in relation to the valuation list in force at 1 April 1993 is available only for regions. Information on proposals/appeals in relation to the list after 1 April 1993 is available only for valuation board areas. The latest available information, giving the position up to September 1996, is given in the tables.

Millennium Exhibition

Mr. Bendall: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the millennium exhibition. [10477]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: At its meeting on 11 December, the Millennium Commission confirmed its decision to proceed with the national exhibition at Greenwich in the year 2000. The commission is now finalising the means by which the exhibition will be delivered within an acceptable budget.

Good progress has also been made on a number of other fronts: the planning application was submitted to the London borough of Greenwich as planned on 31 October and a decision is expected by the end of January. The Highways Agency announced on 15 November that the last two contracts for the M11-A12 link road have been awarded: the road will be completed in 1999 and will enable optimum use of the park-and-ride facilities planned for the exhibition. Work on the Jubilee line extension, which will provide easy access by underground from central London into the centre of the exhibition site, is progressing well, with the new line scheduled to open in 1998. On 22 November, English Partnerships announced that it had agreed terms with British Gas to acquire the Greenwich peninsula. Meanwhile, statutory decontamination works by British Gas are well under way.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Solicitors' Charges

Mr. Parry: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many complaints have been made to the Law Society concerning solicitors' charges to clients between 1993 and 1996; and if he will make a statement. [9769]

Mr. Streeter: This is a matter for the Law Society.

Legal Aid

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many recipients of legal aid there have been; and how many applications have been refused in Darlington in each year since 1990. [9740]

Mr. Streeter: The total number of acts of assistance granted for civil and criminal legal aid was as follows:

1990–91: 2,609,509

1991–92: 3,045,456

1992–93: 3,305,699

1993–94: 3,500,402

1994–95: 3,512,451

1995–96: 3,469,368.

It is not possible to identify separately applications for legal aid received from Darlington; these applications are dealt with by the Legal Aid Board area office in Newcastle, which covers the country from North Yorkshire to Northumberland and parts of Cumbria.

Figures for the total number of applications received and refused for civil legal aid by the Newcastle area office are available since 1992–93 only. These were as follows:

Year	Total applications	Applications refused
1992–93	35,963	9,042
1993–94	35,672	9,563
1994–95	34,929	10,578
1995–96	32,672	9,821
Total	139,236	39,004

Applications for criminal legal aid are dealt with by the courts. Equivalent figures for applications made prior to 1992–93 and for criminal legal aid are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Staff

Mr. Hain: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) permanent and (b) non-permanent staff there have been in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies of his Department in each year since 1992. [9626]

Mr. Streeter: The tables give details of the information requested for staff employed in the Lord Chancellor's Department headquarters and associated offices, and in the executive agencies for which the Lord Chancellor is accountable to Parliament.

[1] All the figures given for non-permanent staff in LCD Headquarters and the Associated Offices include staff on renewable and unrenewable fixed term contracts. No central record of casual staff in this area was kept prior to 1996.
[2] No central record of the number of non-permanent staff for the Court Service was kept prior to 1996.
[3] Permanent figures for the Public Record Office include a small proportion—not exceeding 8 per cent.—of fixed-term jobs. Separate figures are not kept and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Ombudsman Service

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Enviornment what plans he has to enhance the powers of the local government ombudsman to ensure that local authorities comply with the findings of the ombudsman; and if he will make a statement. [8916]

Mr. Curry: In his final report on the civil justice system in England and Wales, "Access to Justice", Lord Woolf proposed that the remedies recommended by ombudsmen should be enforceable through the courts. As I explained in the paper "Government Response to the Financial and Management and Policy Review of the Commission for Local Administration in England", which I announced in an answer to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Scarborough (Mr. Sykes) on 28 November 1996, Official Report, column 333, and placed in the Library, consideration of Lord Woolf's recommendations on ombudsmen is being postponed for the time being while my right hon. and noble Friend the Lord Chancellor concentrates on implementing the major elements of Lord Woolf's proposals.

Coal Mines (Accidents)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many major injuries occurred in United Kingdom coal mines during 1995–96; and if he will list the dates of the accidents and the mines they occurred in. [9297]

Sir Paul Beresford: The number of major injuries reported to HM inspectorate of mines occurring in UK coal mines for 1 January 1995 to 27 November 1996 was 307.

The information relating to the date of each injury and coal mine is as follows:

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what restrictions are placed on the Health and Safety Executive in respect of providing information to local authorities on accidents at THORP without the consent of British Nuclear Fuels plc. [9146]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Health and Safety Executive may release such information to an officer of a local authority authorised to receive it, where HSE has acquired the information under statutory requirements. However, HSE would normally make the information available only if there was a health and safety purpose in doing so.

Section 28 of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 contains restrictions on the release of information obtained under statutory requirements or in the exercise of inspectors' powers. Associations of local authorities, unlike individual local authorities, do not fall within the exemptions from these restrictions.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he made of the health and safety consequences of incidents (a) during the construction of THORP at Sellafield and (b) since it commenced operational activity. [9145]

Sir Paul Beresford: Conditions attached to the Sellafield nuclear site licence require BNFL to have arrangements in place to investigate and report incidents at THORP to HSE's nuclear installations inspectorate. These apply throughout the lifetime of the plant, including the construction stage. Additional arrangements exist to comply with other regulations, such as the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985 relating to non-nuclear incident reporting.

The HSE routinely monitors BNFL's arrangements including the conduct of its investigations, and carries out separate investigations where appropriate, which take into account the health and safety consequences of the particular incident. Significant incidents are reported in the HSE's quarterly statements of nuclear incidents.

Radiation (Sellafield)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what requests British Nuclear Fuels plc has made to his Department for permission to increase the levels of radiation released into the atmosphere from its plant at Sellafield. [9143]

Mr. Clappison: No requests have been made to this Department. However, British Nuclear Fuels has applied to the Environment Agency for a variation to its current certificates of authorisation under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993 to dispose of waste gases, mists and dusts from premises on its Sellafield site.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what levels of radiation have been released into the atmosphere from the BNFL plant at Sellafield in each of the last five years; and what are the current levels. [9144]

Mr. Clappison: Information about air-borne discharges of radioactivity in past years from British Nuclear Fuels' Sellafield site is contained in the company's "Annual Report on Radioactive Discharges and Monitoring of the Environment", the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food's "Radioactivity in Food and the Environment" and the Department of the Environment's "Digest of Environmental Statistics". Copies of all these are available in the Library of the House.

Details of current discharges are contained in public registers held by the Environment Agency and local authorities in the area. The information may be obtained from the Environment Agency at Mitre house, Church street, Lancaster, LA1 1BQ.

Health and Safety Commission

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which appointments to the Health and Safety Commission lapse before 1 May 1997; on what dates; and if he will consult Her Majesty's Opposition before making the new appointments. [9571]

Sir Paul Beresford: Two appointments to the commission lapse on 31 March 1997. Any new appointments will be made in accordance with the extensive consultation requirements set out in section 10(3)(c) of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974; and with the guidance issued by the Commissioner for Public Appointments. The Secretary of State has no plans to consult on the appointments beyond that.

Staff

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for his Department (a) how many people in total are employed, (b) how many of the total number of staff are (i) male and (ii) female and (c) how many (I) men and (II) women are employed on a (1) full-time and (2) part-time basis. [9492]

Sir Paul Beresford: The figures for the Department of the Environment and its executive agencies are given in the table:

	Male	Female	Total
Department of the Environment
Full-time	2,098	1,414	3,512
Part-time	30	280	310

Full-time	2,429	1,599	4,028
Part-time	21	397	418
Total	2,450	1,996	4,446

The figures are taken from the Department of the Environment's Staff On-Line Information System (SOLIS) and the Health and Safety Executive's Personnel information database (PRIMA). Other figures were supplied by the relevant executive agencies. The figures show the actual numbers of staff-in-post for December 1996 except for Health and Safety Executive—these figures are for 1 April 1996.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) permanent and (b) non-permanent staff there have been in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies of his Department in each year since 1992. [9624]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I sent on 3 December 1996 in response to his previous named day question for Monday 25 November.

The figures supplied in the annexe to that reply provide the following sub-totals:

Official Ministerial Visits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each of the Ministers in his Department how many official ministerial visits they have undertaken since 1 January; and how many of these have been abroad. [9387]

Mr. Gummer: The information requested is as follows:

	Visits in the UK[1]	Visits outside the UK
John Gummer	42	17
David Curry	43	4
Robert B. Jones	44	5
The Earl Ferrers	30	4
Sir Paul Beresford	52	1
James Clappison	38	3

[1] A visit may incorporate travelling to more than one place.

Housing Association Starts

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the number of new housing association starts (a) in total and (b) in the eastern region next year. [9440]

Mr. Clappison: In the month to 13 December we received a total of 41 letters from Members of Parliament enclosing letters from housing associations about new housing association starts, including seven from associations in the eastern region.

Formaldehyde

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what regulations are currently in force in respect of the protection of human health and the environment from formaldehyde fumes. [9565]

Mr. Clappison: The following legislation relevant to the protection of human health and the environment from formaldehyde is in force:

the Environmental Protection Act 1990 with respect to emissions from those industrial processes with the greatest potential for pollution, the range of pollutants controlled includes formaldehyde where appropriate;

the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 and the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1994; and the Building Regulations 1991, part D (toxic substances), with respect to the use of urea formaldehyde foam insulation in cavity walls.

Housing (Single People)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many households living in accommodation matching the definition of the single room rent assessment figure for housing benefit purposes were identified in the census of 1991; [9418]

(2) how many single people (a) aged under 25 years (b) aged 25 to 59 years and (c) aged 60 and over were identified as living in accommodation matching the definition of the single room rent assessment figure for housing benefit purposes in the census of 1991. [9416]

Mr. Clappison: The information available from the census is for households occupying a bedsitting room. This is a wider category than that defined as a single room by the Department of the Environment and used by the Department of Social Security for housing benefit purposes, as it includes households who shared only one of the facilities of a toilet, kitchen or bathroom.

The relevant age breakdown in the census related to heads of households, and the "single, widowed, and divorced" category of heads of households and so included cohabiting couples and lone parents as well as people living by themselves, but excluded separated people living by themselves who were counted under the group "married heads of households".

There were 136,498 households identified as living in bedsits in Great Britain in the 1991 census, and of these 117,120 were people living by themselves.

The information by age available from the census was for the 121,355 single, widowed and divorced heads of household living in bedsits, as follows:

Age	Number
16–29	63,582
30–pensionable age	46,192
Pensionable age and over	11,581

Source:
1991 Census of population.

More up-to-date information on those living in rented accommodation in England is available from the annual survey of English housing.

Secondary Liquid Fuel

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which of the recommendations contained in the second report of the Environment Committee on the burning of secondary liquid fuel in cement kilns, HC497 of Session 1994–95 (a) have been implemented, (b) the Government have decided not to implement and (c) the Government are still considering. [8628]

Mr. Clappison: The Select Committee on the Environment is currently carrying out a further inquiry into the environmental impact of the cement manufacture. My Department's memorandum of evidence to the latest inquiry describes the extent to which the Committee's previous recommendations have been implemented. A copy of the memorandum has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the burning of secondary liquid fuels in kilns has been brought within the scope of the EU hazardous waste incineration directive; and if he will make a statement. [8629]

Mr. Clappison: The directive requires that the incineration of hazardous waste is subject to specified controls over pollution. Co-incineration plants, such as cement or lime kilns which burn hazardous waste, are within its scope.

Cammell Laird Shipbuilding Yard

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number of fatal accidents at Cammell Laird shipbuilding yard in each year from 1966 until 1995. [9614]

Sir Paul Beresford: One fatal accident at the Cammell Laird shipbuilding yard has been reported to the Health and Safety Executive during the period 1986 to 1995.

Information Technology (Euro)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what tenders his Department has put out to convert its information technology systems to be euro compliant; what are the cost and person hours required to convert the systems to handle the euro; and when he expects his Department's systems to be fully economic and monetary union compliant. [9460]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department and agencies will need to assess the impact which a single currency, assumed to be starting on 1 January 1999, would have on their information systems whether or not the United Kingdom decides to participate in the third stage of economic and monetary union.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the specific spending pressures identified in the proposals of the local authority associations in the Consultative Council on Local Government Finance which have been recognised in his recent announcement on total spending for 1997–98. [9701]

Sir Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend took into account all pressures on local government spending for 1997–98 as well as the scope for efficiencies. In forming his assessment of pressures, he had regard to the proposals which the local authority associations put to the Consultative Council on Local Government Finance. The provisional total standard spending announced by my right hon. Friend represents his view of the appropriate level of local authority spending in the round. It is not possible to identify how much has been included to meet individual burdens or pressures.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the provision for 1996–97 in respect of recycling supplementary credit approvals for local authorities; and what was the equivalent figure in the current year. [9787]

Sir Paul Beresford: Planned provision for the recycling supplementary credit approval programme in 1997–98 is nearly £2.2 million, which we propose to devote to the promotion of home composting. The provision for 1996–97 is currently £10 million.

The reduction in the resources available next year reflects the additional funding for recycling which is likely to be available from capital challenge allocations, landfill tax environment bodies, our initiatives on producer responsibility for packaging waste and newspapers, together with benefits arising from the private finance initiative.

Air Pollution Control

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sites in England and Wales are subject to local authority air pollution control under the Environmental Protection Act 1990; how many have been granted authorisation; of these how many (a) have been visited and (b) have submitted a detailed upgrading plan to the enforcing authority within the required period; and how many authorisations have been granted to industrial sites after the relevant upgrading deadline date has passed. [9832]

Mr. Clappison: I refer the hon. Lady to the report on the first five years' successful operation of the local air pollution control system, which was published on 9 December and a copy sent to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson). The report contains a statistical overview of the operation of the system, including the latest available information on numbers of authorised processes, and the results of a survey on upgrading. Information on process visits is to be collected for 1996–97.

Drinking Water

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list each occasion in the last five years when domestic drinking water was contaminated to an extent which was assessed by his Department as constituting a threat to public health; and if he will make a statement. [9775]

Mr. Clappison: There is a robust regulatory regime controlling drinking water quality administered by the drinking water inspectorate. Since 1990, there have been over 2,000 enforcement actions and some £2 billion of expenditure aimed at further improvements in drinking water quality. In 1995, the water companies in England and Wales carried out approximately 3.2 million tests on drinking water of which 99.5 per cent. showed that the relevant standards had been met.

Water companies in England and Wales are required to report all incidents in which drinking water quality might be affected. All incidents are investigated by the inspectorate. Most incidents are relatively minor happenings.

In those cases in which the drinking water was chemically contaminated and where the inspectorate has completed its investigations, there is no evidence that the magnitude or duration of the contamination was such as to endanger public health.

Most cases in which there is bacteriological contamination are trivial and often involve the notification of advice to boil water to a small number of consumers while tests are undertaken on the quality. In most cases, the advice is found to have been unnecessary, but consumers have been given protection rather than potentially left at risk.

The most significant risk to drinking water quality is the presence of cryptosporidium oocysts. On cryptosporidium, the notification to the inspectorate can relate to either the detection of cryptosporidium oocysts in treated water, or to an increase of the illness cryptosporidiosis in the community or both. The transmission of the illness occurs in a number of ways and often through contact with animals. One recent outbreak of cryptosporidiosis was found to be associated with a failure of a milk pasteurisation plant.

All incidents are investigated fully by the drinking water inspectorate. As cryptosporidiosis can be transmitted in many ways, the source of any outbreak has to be established through epidemiology. A case of South West Water Services Ltd. allegedly supplying water unfit for human consumption because of cryptosporidium is currently before the courts.

Notifications of events involving cryptosporidium are listed in the table under four headings. It should be noted that not all notifications become confirmed as incidents.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what funds he plans to make available to authorities that have been or are to be reorganised on 1 April 1995, 1996, 1997 or 1998 for reorganisation costs incurred by them in 1997–98; and if he will make a statement. [10336]

Mr. Curry: On 10 October, I invited authorities that have or are to be reorganised on or before 1 April 1998 to submit estimates of the amount of expenditure they expect to incur on transitional costs of reorganisation in 1997–98. On the basis, inter alia, of the information provided by the authorities, I have decided the maximum amounts to allocate towards such costs in 1997–98. I have given priority to authorities to be reorganised in 1997 and 1998. The majority of authorities to be reorganised in 1998 asked for allocations in respect of redundancy to be deferred until the mid-year review in October 1997. Accordingly, the allocations listed for authorities reorganising in 1998 are not intended to cover redundancy costs.

Housing Allocations

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to make regulations exempting further classes of people from the allocation provisions in part VI of the Housing Act 1996; and if he will make a statement. [10337]

Mr. Curry: The Government are committed to ensuring that the new allocations provisions in part VI of the 1996 Act do not compromise the present arrangements under which many local authorities accept a limited number of referrals from welfare agencies and hostels for homeless people. I have reflected carefully on whether it is necessary to make regulations in order to allow such arrangements to continue, and have concluded that it is not. There is sufficient flexibility inherent in part VI to allow local authorities to maintain such arrangements within the new allocation schemes they will be establishing, and I am issuing guidance to this effect.

Packaging Waste Regulations

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has considered the responses to the consultation paper he issued in July on the Producer Responsibility (Packaging Waste) Regulations; and if he will make a statement. [10475]

Mr. Gummer: Together with my colleagues, the President of the Board of Trade and the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales, I published proposals in July which aim to secure an effective business-led approach to meeting the environmental goal of a more sustainable approach to packaging waste. This followed a lengthy process of consultation with a wide range of business sectors and is based on the industry agreement on the shared approach achieved on 15 December 1995.

The system we propose is based on four guiding principles:

- using the market to reflect the cost of dealing with waste in the price the consumer pays;
- a shared approach involving all parts of the packaging chain;
- the lightest regulatory approach giving the maximum scope for obligated businesses to self-certify and self-assess their obligations and to perform those obligations through business-run schemes, or individually subject to monitoring by the environment agencies.
- continuing industry involvement in monitoring, reviewing and proposing changes to the system through the Advisory Committee on Packaging.

We have had a wide range of responses to the consultation paper including 100 from trade associations representing 53,000 member businesses and a further 348 from individual businesses and other interested organisations. Most respondents endorsed the overall framework and the basic provisions which flow from the 15 December agreement. However, the responses did raise specific concerns on issues such as the timetable, the level of interim targets, the cut-off threshold for small businesses, the wholesaler obligation and the scope and nature of exemptions. I have considered these and have sought the views of Sir Peter Parker and the Advisory Committee on Packaging and I am grateful to have their further comments which will be published separately.

I therefore intend to make the following modifications to the draft regulations which will be subject to parliamentary debate.

To allow businesses sufficient time to assess the implications of the regulations for them and the merits of joining a collective business scheme such as VALPAK, I propose to delay the first requirement for registration and provision of data until the summer of 1997 and I will make a further announcement shortly. The date for the renewal of registration and the provision of data will, from 1998 onwards, be 1 April.

A further concern raised related to the proposed interim targets for recovery and recycling which could place an unnecessarily high burden on some businesses and particularly on those who handle materials which are harder to recover. Many felt that a slower build-up to the full directive targets in 2001 targets would be more realistic. I therefore propose to revise the interim targets on individual businesses as follows:

	Minimum recycling target for each material	Overall recovery target	Recovery of UK packaging waste
1998–99	7	38	32
2000	11	43	40
2001	16	[1]52	50

[1] Of which a minimum of 26 per cent. must be recycling.

These targets will enable the UK to meet the recycling and recovery targets set out in the EC directive on packaging and packaging waste, 94/62 EC.

I have also taken account of the representations that some sectors of industry will have greater difficulty in adapting to the proposed obligations than others, particularly in the case of small firms. I also consider that the most effective means of introducing the new system will be to take a staged approach starting with the largest businesses. I therefore propose to adopt a phased approach in relation to the following aspects:

> No business with a turnover of less than £5 million, or that handled less than 50 tonnes of packaging will have an obligation in the years 1997 to 1999, but from 1 January 2000 an eligible business with a turnover of £1 million or more and that handled more than 50 tonnes of packaging will be obligated. The proposed wholesaler obligation will apply from 1 January 2000.

I am confident that a phased approach will allow these sectors additional time to prepare and work up methods for meeting recycling and recovery objectives in a form which meets their needs.

I have considered also issues raised by those who handle packaging which is or is associated with special or hazardous waste. Where packaging is likely to become special waste, producers will not need to include it when calculating their recovery and recycling obligations, but they will need to provide data and indicate the steps taken to promote or increase its recovery. This amendment should assist those producers that handle packaging whose hazardous or contaminated nature require special disposal arrangements.

I also propose to place an obligation on production of reusable packaging but to exempt it when it is reused. Other more detailed changes will be set out in the published regulations.

I also recognise that for many businesses a major concern is not the recycling and recovery effort itself but the means of gathering data. Some businesses already have good data systems while many trade associations and the Industry Council on Packaging and the Environment are already working to develop sector guides and assistance with definitions and other guidance. I intend to support this work and to make available, to help to start the system, a very simple ready reckoner which businesses can use to meet the initial requirement for a best estimate expressed in tonnes per annum.

The environment agencies that will monitor and enforce the regulations will charge a fee to individual businesses and collective schemes to cover the costs of their functions. In the light of consultation, and taking account of the changes listed I propose to set the fee for individual businesses at £750 per annum and to offer schemes a rebate of up to 87 per cent. of this according to the size of their membership.

The advisory committee is continuing its work on implementation of the system and is currently considering matters relating to evidence of compliance and recent representations it has received on the issue of equitable participation in household waste recovery. It is also preparing for its review of the system as a whole. On these and other issues, it will publish its findings as appropriate and I am fully committed to supporting its continuing role.

Ministerial Leave

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many days of leave he plans to take during the Christmas adjournment; [9829]

(2) how many days leave he has taken in the Easter, Whitsun and summer adjournments; and how many days leave he took during the time in which Parliament was prorogued this year. [9828]

Mr. Gummer: As a Minister I am available 365 days of the year. If the hon. Member has issues that he needs to raise with me over the Christmas break or during the coming Easter or summer recesses, he is welcome to contact me at home or my office.

Hemp

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies the Government have (a) undertaken and (b) commissioned on the use of hemp as an alternative source for paper manufacture; and what European Union (i) studies and (ii) support schemes have been established in respect of the use of hemp for paper making. [3925]

Mr. Boswell: I have been asked to reply.

Hemp grown under licence in this country may be used for paper making. The Department is funding research into the structure of hemp fibres and the industrial potential of hemp, which will be relevant to its use in paper making.

In 1994 a European Union funded study looked at the increased application of domestically produced plant fibres. The agri-industrial research programme also funded a three-year study of the processing of short fibres. Both of these studies examined the use of hemp for paper making.

A number of schemes exist under which support would be obtained to assist development of hemp for paper making and these include:

1. the Agriculture and Fisheries (FAIR) Programme, which supports research of development projects;
2. The EU's Fourth Framework Programme;
3. projects in Objective 5b areas may be eligible under the Challenge for Agriculture Scheme.

In addition, the common agriculture policy hemp regime provides for area payments to hemp growers.

Asbestos

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to increase the monitoring of asbestos imports. [7899]

Mr. Oppenheim: I have been asked to reply.

HM Customs and Excise is responsible for enforcing the statutory controls on imports of asbestos from third countries—the controls do not apply to intra-Community movements.

Customs is not aware of any current circumstances which warrant an increase in the monitoring of asbestos imports. Any information indicating that there may be an enhanced risk of unauthorised imports of asbestos should be passed to customs.

PRIME MINISTER

Staff

Mr. Hain: To ask the Prime Minister how many (a) permanent and (b) non-permanent staff there have been in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies of his Department in each year since 1992. [9620]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes, my office forms part of the Cabinet Office, Office of Public Service. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the then Paymaster General on 10 December, Official Report, columns 83–84.

Dublin Summit

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the (a) topics and (b) documents considered at the Heads of Government meeting at Dublin on 13 and 14 December on which he placed a United Kingdom scrutiny reserve. [9731]

The Prime Minister: The contents of the Economic and Finance Council report to the Dublin European Council on preparations for stage 3 of economic and monetary union are subject to a United Kingdom parliamentary scrutiny reserve. This point is reflected in the ECOFIN report itself and in the presidency conclusions of the European Council.

Ministers (Severance Pay)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy that the severance payment received by a Minister on resignation shall not be paid when that resignation followed criticism of the conduct of the Minister by a Select Committee of the House. [9712]

The Prime Minister: The terms under which a Minister is entitled to a severance payment are laid down in the Ministerial and Other Pensions and Salaries Act 1991, which was approved by Parliament without any Divisions.

Ministerial Leave

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Prime Minister (1) how many days of leave he plans to take during the Christmas adjournment; [9823]

(2) how many days leave he has taken in the Easter, Whitsun and summer adjournments; and how many days leave he took during the time in which Parliament was prorogued this year. [9822]

The Prime Minister: Ministers are required to be available for Government business at all times. Subject to this overall requirement they may take leave as and when Government business permits.

I have decided, after careful consideration, in the knowledge that UHF television coverage now extends to 99.4 per cent. of the population, and in the light of plans for the introduction of digital terrestrial television that the formal programme of building 25 relay stations a year should cease. The self-help television scheme, established by the Government in 1980 to assist those communities not eligible for assistance under the relay programme, will remain. The BBC and ITC will continue to give free technical advice to those seeking to establish such schemes in the future. In addition, the BBC and Independent Television Commission will continue to promote improvements in the quality and range of television transmission. They will provide free technical advice to the public on television reception and will in exceptional circumstances consider constructing new television relays to extend terrestrial services.

EU Culture Council

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the outcome of the Culture Council on 16 December. [10426]

Mr. Sproat: EU Ministers of culture met on 16 December 1996 in Brussels. Ministers agreed a resolution on the integration of cultural aspects into other Community actions. The purpose of this resolution is to give effect to article 128(4) of the treaty on European Union.

Ministers held an exchange of views on the proposal for a directive amending the television without frontiers directive and on the proposal to establish a European guarantee fund to promote cinema and television production. The Council held an exchange of views on the development of new audiovisual services and adopted conclusions welcoming the European Commission's Green Paper on the protection of minors and human dignity in the audiovisual and information services. Ministers held an exchange of views on the issue of violence in the media.

Ministers noted that the conciliation process with the European Parliament on the Ariane and Raphael programmes would now be convened under the Dutch presidency. An exchange of views was held on a number of further issues, including music, book pricing and the European cities of culture. Plovdiv was selected to host the Cultural Month 1999. Ministers also touched on the issues of cultural funding, authors' rights and cross-media ownership.

Television Licence Fee

Mr. Dover: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement about the level of the television licence fee. [10478]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government have decided that changes in the licence fee for the five years commencing 1 April 1997 should be:

Year one (1997–98): RPI

Year two (1998–99): RPI plus 3 per cent.

Year three (1999–2000): RPI plus 0.5 per cent.

Year four (2000–01): RPI minus 1 per cent.

Year five (2001–02): RPI minus 2.5 per cent.

This equates to a change in the level of the licence fee over the five-year period of retail prices index minus 0.08 per cent. The non-uniform pattern of annual changes reflects the need for expenditure on new digital services in the earlier years. This will be offset in 1997–98 by receipts from the sale of the BBC's transmission system, and in later years by increased efficiency savings and commercial income.

The annual licence fee increase takes effect from each April. It is calculated on the basis of the annual increase in RPI in the 12 months to the preceding September. The RPI figure for September 1996 was 2.1 per cent., and this implies new fees from 1 April 1997 of £91.50 for a colour licence and £30.50 for a black and white licence. The necessary regulations will be laid before the House as part of new consolidated television licence fee regulations.

Changes in the level of the television licence fee have been linked to movements in RPI since April 1988. Changes have been set at RPI for each year since then, except in 1991 when the settlement was held at RPI minus 3 per cent.

On 12 August this year, I announced the appointment of independent consultants, Braxton Associates, to undertake a further review of the BBC's progress in achieving greater efficiency, reducing television licence fee evasion and exploiting additional sources of revenue, and to advise me on the level of the TV licence fee for the five years commencing 1 April 1997.

Braxton Associates reported to me on 16 October, and a management summary of the report is being published tomorrow. A copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

The consultants concluded that, while the BBC had made significant strides in improving efficiency in the last few years, there was nevertheless scope for further efficiency savings in the next five years. Their analysis of various assumptions about future developments suggested a range for the cumulative five-year settlement from RPI minus 1.9 per cent. to RPI plus 1.4 per cent. All their illustrative models showed a profile of real increases in years two and three, and real decreases in years four and five. This profile is reflected in the Government's decision.

The BBC will now be able to pursue its plans for digital broadcasting and enhance its programme services. Television licence fee payers will be able to benefit from the BBC's planned services, but their licence fee increases over the next five years as a whole will be held just below inflation.

Area Museums Councils

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she plans to announce the membership of the group which will consider the area museums councils. [5668]

Mr. Sproat: A working party has been appointed to review the AMCs and will include the following members:

Mr. David Beeton (Chief Executive, Historic Royal Palaces Agency);

Sir Neil Cossons OBE, (Director, Science Museum);

Dr. David Flemming (Director, Tyne and Wear Museum Service);

Mr. Timothy Mason (Director, Museums and Galleries Commission);

Miss Barbara Woroncow (Director, Yorkshire and Humberside Museums Council, and President of the Museums Association);

Mr. Christopher Zeuner (Director of the Weald and Downland Museum, and a member of the Association of Independent Museums);

I have asked for the consultation report by Monday 7 April 1997. Arrangements for the chairman/secretary will be announced in the new year.

This review will involve wide consultations, both with the AMCs themselves and with the broad range of bodies which use the AMCs' services.

National Reading Initiative

Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the membership of the committee which will advise the Government on the national reading initiative under the chairmanship of Mrs. Ian Curteis. [3998]

Mr. Sproat: The membership of the panel for the national reading initiative under the chairmanship of Mrs. Ian Curteis (Joanna Trollope) is:

Professor Ray Cowell—East Midlands Art Board

Catherine Blanshard—Children's librarian, Hertfordshire CC

Floella Benjamin—Children's broadcaster

Timothy West—Actor

Frances Booker—Primary school teacher, SCAA

Vaughan Rees—ex DNH administrator

Alan Judd—ex FCO administrator, and author

Sue Blanshard—Folio Society

The panel will take evidence widely, and produce its conclusions in spring next year.

The panel wishes to encourage any individual or body that wishes to give evidence to be in touch with Mrs. Ian Curteis through DNH.

Departmental Buildings (Electricity)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what capacity of electricity used in her Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans she has to increase that capacity. [9966]

Mr. Sproat: So far as my Department and its agencies are concerned there is no electricity generated in a combined heat and power plant CAP. However, one of the royal palaces—the Banqueting house—is connected to the Whitehall district heating scheme which will connect to a new CAP from next autumn, the overall capacity being 4,500 KW.

In respect of other buildings, opportunities for CAP are limited but would be considered as part of the evaluation process for energy efficiency, particularly when replacing plant.

Museums and Galleries

Sir Timothy Sainsbury: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment she has made of the current proportion of visitors to the museums and galleries supported by her Department who come from overseas. [8927]

Mr. Sproat: On the basis of recent surveys carried out by the museums and galleries sponsored by my Department, I estimate that one third of visits are made by overseas visitors.

National Lottery

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what consultation was carried out (a) with individual football clubs and organisations representing football clubs and (b) with other bodies before the decision was taken to give approval to a second weekly national lottery. [10150]

Mr. Sproat: None.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to monitor the impact of the introduction of the mid-week national lottery draw on the future income (a) generated by football clubs' own lotteries and (b) raised by the Football Trust from pool betting duty and spot the ball competitions. [10149]

Mr. Sproat: I shall be meeting the Football Trust to discuss its funding position and related matters further, in the light of its survey of essential remaining safety work at league football clubs, when this is complete.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to introduce new outlets for the lottery, with the introduction of a mid-week lottery; and if she will make a statement. [9789]

Mr. Sproat: This is an operational matter for Camelot Group plc. I have therefore asked the Director General of the National Lottery, who is responsible for regulating the operation of the lottery, to write to the hon. Member and to place copies of his response in the Libraries of the House.

Information Technology (Euro)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what tenders her Department has put out to convert its information technology systems to be euro compliant; what are the cost and person hours required to convert the systems to handle the euro; and when she expects her department's systems to be fully economic and monetary union compliant. [9452]

Mr. Sproat: The Department of National Heritage and its agencies will need to assess the impact that a single currency, assumed to be starting on 1 January 1999, would have on their information systems, whether or not the United Kingdom decides to participate in the third stage of economic and monetary union.

introduction of the integrated administration and control system. The environmental dimension of support for agriculture in Wales has been expanded with the introduction of five environmentally sensitive areas and an agri-environment programme specific to Welsh needs has been steered through the process approved by the EU. Advice has been provided through the countryside advice information service and ADAS to help farmers take advantage of the support available to them and to encourage a cost-effective and efficient farming economy in Wales, while the new food strategy addresses the opportunities that exist for the marketing and development of Welsh food products. Between the beginning of 1992–93 and the end of 1996–97 the Department expects to have paid out over £1 billion in support to the agricultural and fishing industries in Wales.

The Department completed the A55 dualling between Chester and Bangor in north Wales in October 1994. The total cost of this project, including the tunnels, was £700 million. In south Wales, completion of the M4 in December 1994 finalised a continuous motorway between London and west Wales, at a cost since 1979 of £230 million in Wales. The second Severn crossing, opened to traffic in June of this year, has more than doubled road capacity across the estuary.

In April 1992, the Planning Inspectorate was established as an agency of the Welsh Office and the Department of the Environment. In 1996, the Department issued "Planning Guidance (Wales): Planning Policy" and "Planning Guidance (Wales: Unitary Development Plans". The former presents, for the first time, integrated planning policy guidance for Wales; the latter provides guidance to local planning authorities on the preparation of their unitary development plans.

The Welsh Office has continued working to protect the Welsh environment and promoting sustainable development. Important wildlife and habitats throughout Wales are being conserved through environmental designations—for example, 35 candidate special areas of conservation have been submitted to the EC and 910 locations in Wales have been designated as sites of special scientific interest. The Department has established three national parks in Wales as free-standing special purpose authorities; has instigated the Tir Cymen countryside stewardship scheme; has established an air quality forum and Wales biodiversity group; and, following the major oil spillage earlier this year, has established and funded the Sea Empress environmental evaluation committee.

Over £2 billion has been committed for the economic, social and environmental development of Wales.

The Welsh Development Agency, the Development Board for Rural Wales, the Cardiff Bay development corporation, the Wales tourist board and the Land Authority for Wales have pursued gross programmes totalling £1.29 billion over this period. Projects valued at £295.7 million have been financed under my Department's strategic development scheme with a further £24.5 million approved under the urban investment grant. European programmes for industrial south and rural Wales, and various Community initiatives, have been negotiated, providing £359 million funding across the Principality. A new £178 million three-year programme for industrial south Wales will shortly be started.

This funding has helped support the objectives of the five-year programme for the valleys launched in 1993, promising £1 billion of public sector investment, and of the rural White Paper published in March 1996.

There have been 725 inward investment projects with a capital investment of £5.7 billion, promising 37,600 new jobs and 24,362 safeguarded jobs.

From January 1997, the newly formed Welsh European programme executive will take over most of the Department's responsibilities for structural funds management, and the Welsh Office will succeed the Department for Education and Employment in managing the European social fund in Wales. From April 1997, SDS funding totalling £38 million per annum after three years will be progressively delegated to local authorities and a new £20 million Welsh capital challenge will take effect.

Since December 1992, peak seasonally adjusted unemployment in Wales has fallen by 38,900 or 29 per cent. to 94,800—a work force rate of 7.5 per cent. This is the lowest unemployment rate in Wales since January 1991.

Manufacturing output in Wales in the quarters to Q2, 1996 was 18.1 per cent. higher than in the four quarters to Q1, 1992, compared with a rise of 8.3 per cent. for the UK as a whole.

Over the period 1994–95 to 1996–97, the Welsh Office has contracted with the Welsh training and enterprise councils for 8,200 young people to start modern apprenticeships.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

South Africa

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total amount of aid to South Africa in each of the years 1991 to 1995 from (a) the European Community and (b) the United Kingdom, bilaterally. [9323]

Dr. Liam Fox: The information is as follows:

Net Bilateral Aid (ODA) to South Africa (£ millions)

	European	United Kingdom
1991	—	[1]9.33
1992	—	[1]11.56
1993	55.01	12.92
1994	45.34	15.61
1995	37.38	15.16

[1] The UK figures for 1991 and 1992 are those for the nearest corresponding financial year. EC aid to South Africa did not commence until 1993. Before the 1994 elections, all aid was channelled through non-governmental organisations, community groups or other institutions.

UN Aid Target

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of the timetable for achieving the UN target of 0.7 per cent. of gross national product of the Overseas Development Administration budget; and what progress has been made to date in achieving the target. [10146]

Dr. Liam Fox: The Government remain committed to meeting the UN target of 0.7 per cent. of gross national product to be devoted to development assistance, but not to a timetable for reaching it. At 0.28 per cent. of GNP, the UK ratio remains above average for all donors—0.27 per cent. UK public and private flows to the developing world stood at 1.38 per cent. of GNP in 1995, well in excess of the 1 per cent. UN target, and second only to the Netherlands.

Regional Summit, Nairobi

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the regional summit in Nairobi on 16 December. [9757]

Dr. Liam Fox: We welcome the decision of the Nairobi summit on 16 and 17 December that Presidents Moi, Mugabe, Mandela and Biya should take steps to assist the ending of conflict in easter Zaire, and to promote peace and security in the great lakes region.

DEFENCE

Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what additional resources have been made available to the Atomic Weapons Establishment in respect of the promotion and operation of a comprehensive test ban treaty. [9635]

Mr. Arbuthnot: As there are currently no plans to involve AWE in the promotion and operation of CTBT, no additional resources have been allocated. The United Kingdom remains committed to an effective and verifiable comprehensive test ban treaty. My Department has made available additional funding for the United Kingdom's share of the international monitoring system, which is to be established by the CTBT organisation.

Information Technology (Euro)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what tenders his Department has put out to convert its information technology systems to be euro compliant; what are the cost and person hours required to convert the systems to handle the euro; and when he expects his Department's systems to be fully economic and monetary union compliant. [9462]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department and agencies will need to assess the impact that a single currency, assumed to be starting on 1 January 1999, would have on their information systems, whether or not the United Kingdom decides to participate in the third stage of economic and monetary union.

Young Service Personnel (Fatalities)

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of those under age 18 years in the United Kingdom armed forces have been killed in each of the last three years. [9298]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Analytical Services Agency. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Fred Johnson to Mr. Alan Simpson, dated 18 December 1996:

In the absence of the Chief Executive on duty, I have been asked to reply to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence regarding the number of minors in the United Kingdom armed forces killed in each of the last three years, as this matter falls within the area of responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Defence Analytical Services Agency.

The figures are as follows:

1993: 1

1994: 0

1995: 3

1996 to date[1]: 1

[1] Information reported to DASA as at 12 December 1996.

Notes:

'Minors' comprise those aged 16 and 17.

'Killed' has been taken to include all deaths of serving personnel either on duty or off duty.

Extraterrestrial Phenomena

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to allocate resources to researching extraterrestrial phenomena. [9419]

Mr. Soames: I have nothing to add to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 17 October 1996, Official Report, column 1082.

Staff

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) permanent and (b) non-permanent staff there have been in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies of his Department in each year since 1992. [9623]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 25 November 1996, Official Report, columns 27–28.

Chilwell/Chetwynd Barracks

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) which establishments his Department plans to be covered by the area policing team based at Chilwell/Chetwynd barracks; [9692]

(2) what are the proposed authorised complements for his Department's area policing teams at (a) Dishforth, (b) Donnington and (c) Chilwell; [9696]

(3) when the area policing team complements at (a) Dishforth, (b) Donnington and (c) Chilwell will be introduced; [9697]

(4) what assessment he has made of the benefits of retaining an on-site Ministry of Defence Police presence at base ordnance depot Donnington and Chilwell/Chetwynd barracks until the area policing teams are fully established. [9698]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Ministry of Defence Police. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from W. E. E. Boreham to Mr. Paddy Tipping, dated 18 December 1996:

I am replying to your Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about the Area Policing Teams of the Ministry of Defence as these matters fall within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive/Chief Constable of the Ministry of Defence Police.

You asked when the APT complements for Dishforth, Donnington and Chilwell will be introduced. It is planned to introduce Area Policing Teams at Donnington and Chilwell in April 1997, and at Dishforth on a date in 1997 yet to be determined.

You asked what assessment had been made of the benefits of retaining an on-site presence at BOD Donnington and Chetwynd Barracks until APTs are fully established. The requirement for Ministry of Defence Police is made by discussion between the Establishment, the budget holder and the Chief Constable, taking into account the views of specialist complementing teams. This procedure has been undertaken for BOD Donnington and Childwell/Chetwynd Barracks, amongst others, and considered the best and most economical means of meeting those requirements without lowering in any way the necessary security standards.

You asked which establishments are to be covered by the APT to be based at Chilwell/Chetwynd Barracks. The Area Policing Team based there will cover those Ministry of Defence establishments within reasonable range of their base, and give assistance according to the assessed priorities on the calls on their time.

You wished to know the authorised complements for the APTs proposed for Dishforth, Donnington and Chilwell. The APT complements at Donnington and Chilwell will each be 11 officers; and in addition 8 MDP officers will be retained at Donnington for policing duties. No decisions have yet been taken on Dishforth.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) from which budget holders the funding for (a) the Ministry of Defence Police area policing teams at Chilwell/Chetwynd barracks and (b) the Military Provost guard service at Chilwell/Chetwynd barracks will be provided in 1997–98; [9691]

(2) what consent has been (i) sought and (ii) received from the chief constable of Nottinghamshire constabulary in respect of (a) armed and (b) unarmed off-base patrols by the Military Provost guard service at Chilwell/Chetwynd barracks; [9694]

(3) what anti-terrorist patrols will be included in the off-base activities of the Military Provost guard service at Chilwell/Chetwynd barracks. [9695]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of state for Defence what has been the total cost in each of the last five years of acquiring and operating nuclear weapons and their delivery systems. [9670]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The strategic nuclear deterrent is the UK's only dedicated nuclear weapon delivery system. I refer the hon. Member to the Trident procurement and Polaris and Trident operating costs for 1991–92 and 1992–93 given in answer to the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) on 27 October 1993, Official Report, column 702, for 1994–95 given in answer to the hon. Member for Tooting (Mr. Cox) on 6 March 1996, Official Report, column 232, and for 1995–96 given in answer to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Llwyd) on 26 November 1996, Official Report, column 193. The figure for 1993–94 is £1,082 million. The operating costs of the WE177 free-fall nuclear bomb and the Lance nuclear artillery system, which was withdrawn from service in 1992–93, are not recorded separately.

Great Lakes Region

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his oral statement of 14 November, Official report, columns 487–89, what contribution United Kingdom forces have made to the resolution of the humanitarian crisis in the great lakes region; and if he will make a statement. [10399]

Mr. Soames: British forces deployed to the region have made an extremely valuable contribution to the action taken by the international community. The Canberra PR9 has flown 24 sorties, playing a pivotal role in determining the precise location and numbers of refugee groups in eastern Zaire. Our liaison personnel in Rwanda have provided unique information about the situation on the ground, and have assisted in the co-ordination of work in the area.

Substantial numbers of refugees have returned home to Rwanda, and aid agencies now enjoy greater ease of access to eastern Zaire. In the light of the dramatic change in the humanitarian situation, the steering group overseeing the multinational mission to the region has recommended to the UN Secretary-General that the multinational force be withdrawn by 31 December. The focus now must be on efforts to obtain wider access for the aid agencies on the ground and to enable them to assess the scale and nature of humanitarian needs and how these can best be met.

Our forces in the region will accordingly return to the UK this week. Our international partners are making similar plans for the withdrawal of their own forces.

The UK will continue to lend full support to the humanitarian mission in the region and to regional efforts to find a lasting political solution. In that context we welcome the outcome of the Nairobi summit of 16 and 17 December.

Convicted Soldiers (Cyprus)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what Army pension payments will be made to each of the three soldiers convicted of the manslaughter of the Danish tour guide in Cyprus; when such payments will commence; and what is the current value of such pensions. [8639]

Mr. Soames: I can confirm that the three former soldiers had accrued sufficient military service to qualify for a preserved Army pension, which will be payable from their 60th birthday. Under the code of access to Government information, it is not our policy to release information relating to an individual's financial affairs on the grounds that to do so without that person's consent could facilitate an unwarranted invasion of privacy.

Unidentified Craft

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of state for Defence if his Department will adopt a policy on the reporting of unidentified craft of releasing to the press details of (i) shape, flight pattern, colour and size of craft, (ii) where and when the craft was seen, (iii) what action his Department took and (iv) the radar profile of the craft. [9410]

Mr. Soames: No.

Mr. Jones: To ask the secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the incident on 16 October 1990 involving two unidentified craft in the vicinity of Wylfa nuclear power station on Anglesey; what estimate the intercepting helicopter pilots made of the departing speeds of the two unidentified craft; if they showed up on radar; and if he will make a statement. [9561]

Mr. Soames: None, so far as we can establish from existing records.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the two attempted interceptions of unidentified craft that occurred near Anglesey in September and November 1995; what other attempts have been made to intercept unidentified craft in this vicinity; and if he will make a statement [9562]

Mr. Soames: From records available, and from the limited information given in the question, we are unable to identify any incidents of this kind.

Pindar Bunker

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many beds there are in the Pindar bunker; how many of these will be occupied over Christmas; and what is his Department's estimate of the cost of using the unoccupied beds to shelter the homeless; [9669]

(2) what estimate he has made of the operating costs of the Pindar bunker in 1996–97. [9668]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Training Facilities (Bahrain)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what training facilities are provided for Bahrain defence force personnel in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [9737]

Mr. Soames: The Bahrain defence force is provided with access to a range of military training courses in the UK. Details of military assistance remain confidential between Governments.

Military Provost Guard Service

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what circumstances his Department will arm patrols by the Military Provost guard service outside an establishment. [9693]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Area Policing Teams

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the introduction of area policing teams at Chilwell and Donnington in the event of the annulment of the Army Terms of Service (Amendment) Regulations (S.I., No. 2973/96). [9699]

Mr. Soames: I hope that these will not be annulled. In the event that they were, the implications would be carefully considered at the time.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the cost of the anti-botulism toxin vaccine serum produced from October 1990 for use in the Gulf war, mentioned in the memorandum prepared by his Department issued in support of the ministerial statement on Gulf war illness on 10 December, Official Report, columns 119–23; [9632]

(2) what quality control was applied to the purchase of propoxur and bendiocarb-based pesticides from suppliers in Riyadh in January 1991; [9595]

(3) what was the cost of the anthrax vaccine ordered from the public health laboratory service in August 1990, to which reference is made in his Department's memorandum released in support of the statement made on Gulf war illness on 10 December, Official Report, columns 119–23. [9637]

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the oral statement by the Minister of State for the Armed Forces of 10 December Official Report, column 120, on Gulf war syndrome, what steps he has taken to assist Professor Nicola Cherry and Dr. Patricia Doyle to visit Iraq in order to meet Dr. Mubarrak, Minister of Health. [9429]

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will include in the investigation being conducted by his Department's permanent under-secretary into the misleading of the House on the issue of organophosphate pesticide use the conclusions of the inquiry conducted by his Department's security official Mr. A. G. Rucker into the alleged theft of Gulf war syndrome documents, as reported to him by the hon. Member for South Shields in November 1995; [9727]

(2) how many of the Gulf war veterans examined by the medical assessment programme have been found to be suffering from (i) kidney and liver damage, (ii) lung complications, (iii) osteoporosis, and (iv) neurological damage; [9723]

(3) pursuant to his oral statement of 10 December, Official Report, column 121, on how many occasions information was provided in background material to parliamentary answers on the possible local purchase of organophosphate pesticides between October 1995 and September 1996; [9725]

(4) how many medical records of those in his Department serving in the Gulf war are currently missing; and if he will make a statement on the steps being taken to recover them; [9722]

(5) if he will name the staff undertaking clinical work for his Department as part of the medical assessment programme. [9724]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Members and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the terms of reference of the investigation being conducted by his Department's permanent under-secretary into the misleading of the House on the issue of organophosphate pesticide use during the Gulf war; and who will assist the permanent under-secretary in his investigation. [9719]

Mr. Soames: The terms of reference of the investigation being conducted by my Department are to establish why proper and timely advice on the subject of organophosphate pesticide use during the Gulf war was not provided to MOD Ministers between July 1994 and September 1996. The permanent under-secretary will be assisted principally by members of the organophosphate pesticide investigation team.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of the minutes of the inquiry which is being set in hand by his Department into the misleading of the House on the issue of organophosphate pesticide use during the Gulf war. [9721]

Mr. Soames: The investigation within my Department into the failures in providing proper and timely advice to Ministers about organophosphate pesticide use during the Gulf war is expected to be completed by February 1997. The findings of the investigation will be made available to the House at the earliest opportunity.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many parliamentary questions his Department answered between October 1995 and September 1996 on the use of organophosphate pesticides during the Gulf war. [9726]

Mr. Soames: Between October 1995 and September 1996 one parliamentary question was answered by my Department on the use of organophosphate pesticides during the Gulf war. This question was answered on 30 October 1995.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the investigation being conducted by his Department into the misleading of the House on the issue of organophosphate pesticide use during the Gulf war has commenced; and when he expects to report its findings to the House. [9720]

Mr. Soames: The investigation within my Department into the failures in providing proper and timely advice to Ministers about organophosphate pesticide use during the Gulf war commenced on 16 December 1996. I expect to be able to report the findings of the investigation to the House by February 1997.

Tornado

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what specific reliability and ergonomic factors have led to the requirement for improved Tornado nose landing gear cable harness assembly as advertised as future purchase number SMC 11aR/273 in MOD "Contracts Bulletin" Vol. 11, No. 7; and if continued use of existing assemblies is affecting serviceability of the Tornado fleet. [9592]

Mr. Soames: The Tornado nose landing gear cable harness assembly dates back to the original aircraft design. The assembly has been found to be susceptible to water and grit ingress which can give rise to false readings on the cockpit instruments and system unserviceability. There is no significant impact on aircraft availability and no adverse effect on airworthiness.

TREASURY

European Union (Currency Support)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has received for a regulation of the European Community in pursuit of budgetary discipline and monetary stability to secure the obligations of members or institutions to support the currency of any one of its members, being a member of the exchange rate mechanism but not that of a common currency; and under what article of the treaty of European Union such regulation could be proposed. [7693]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 6 December 1996]: The Florence European Council agreed that a new exchange rate mechanism will be established for stage 3 of economic and monetary union to link the euro with currencies of member states remaining outside the single currency. The new mechanism, like the existing one, will be an intergovernmental nature and outside the community, and EC treaty, framework. Membership will be voluntary.

Proposals for how the mechanism may operate were set out by the European Monetary Institute in its paper of 7 October entitled "Monetary and Exchange Rate Policy Co-operation between the euro area and other EU countries", a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. There are no draft legal texts at this stage.

Administration Costs

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the total administration costs of non-departmental public bodies in each year between 1991–92 and 1996–97. [8276]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 9 December 1996]: As part of the work for developing the expenditure plans published in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report", the Government collected information on the total administration costs of the larger executive non-departmental public bodies—those which (a) have 25 or more staff; and which (b) normally rely upon Government grant or grant in aid for 50 per cent. or more of their income or trade mainly with Government Departments. While the information was not complete, expenditure was estimated to have been about £1.9 billion in 1993–94 , £2 billion in 1994–95 and £2.1 billion in 1995–96 and is expected to be £2.1 billion in 1996–97.

Information relating to 1991–92 and 1992–93 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departments will be publishing information on the administration costs of each of their larger executive non-departmental public bodies and tribunals from 1993–94 to 1999–2000 in their annual reports in March 1997.

Pensions (Public Sector Research Establishments)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what decisions have been taken to finance the costs arising from the crystallisation of pensions liabilities of public sector research establishments; if he will list the establishments involved; and which Departments will bear the costs involved. [8888]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 16 December 1996]: Pension liabilities of public sector research establishments crystallise (a) when a pension entitlement becomes payable and (b) on the transfer of accrued rights out of unfunded schemes into funded schemes. The existing arrangements for financing these costs vary between Departments and between establishments—no decisions have been taken to change the current arrangements.

Gifts in Kind

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will revise his current policy on the tax treatment of donations of gifts in kind to charities and trusts so that employers are able to donate without tax consequences; and if he will make a statement. [9569]

Mr. Jack: Tax relief for donations to charity is aimed at straightforward donations of money. If relief were to be extended to gifts in kind, there would have to be special arrangements to value them, which would complicate the present system. I do not propose to extend tax relief to donations of gifts in kind.

Official Ministerial Visits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each of the Ministers in his Department how many official ministerial visits they have undertaken since 1 January; and how many of these have been abroad. [9375]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: My ministerial colleagues and I have made the following official ministerial visits:

ECOFIN

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the recent Council meeting of the Economic and Finance Ministers of the European Union. [9858]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I represented the UK at the Economic and Finance Council—ECOFIN—of the European Union in Dublin on 12 December.

The Council agreed, subject to a parliamentary scrutiny reserve by the UK, its report on progress towards economic and monetary union, for presentation to the European Council meeting commencing the following day. The report considers the new exchange rate mechanism, the stability and growth pact and the legal framework for the introduction of the euro.

The Council also discussed new guarantee arrangements for the European Investment bank's lending and new regional lending mandates. Agreement was not reached, so the issue will be discussed again at a future ECOFIN meeting.

Pensions

Mr. Denham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what priority groups were established in the review of pension mis-selling; what were the definitions of the membership of each group; what initial deadlines were established for the completion of the review of each group; how many and what percentage of each group had their review completed by the relevant initial deadline; how many and what percentage of each group have now had their review completed; and by what date he expects the process to be complete. [9349]

Mrs. Angela Knight: In the Securities and Investments Board's guidance of October 1994 to self-regulating organisations and recognised professional bodies, five priority groups of personal pension holders were identified for automatic review. Any personal pension holder who wants his or her case reviewed can have it reviewed.

The priority groups, the characteristics of people in each group, and the targets which were set in 1994 for completion of reviews are set out in the table.

Priority groups	Target date by which most cases ought to be reviewed
Pension transfers, priority group 1 men aged 55 or over at the time of the transfer women aged 50 or over at the time of transfer people who have retired spouses and dependants of people who have died	31 December 1995
Pension transfers, priority group 2 men aged between 50 and 54 at the time of transfer women aged between 45 and 49 at the time of transfer	31 December 1996
Pension opt-outs, priority group 1 people who are retired/spouses or dependants of people who have died people who left an employer's scheme, were aged 35 or over at the time they took out a personal pension, and who are still with the same employer	31 December 1996
Pension opt-outs, priority group 2 people who did not join an employer's pension scheme, were aged 35 or over at the time they took out a personal pension, are paying their own money into a personal pension, and who are still with the same employer	30 June 1996
Pension opt-outs, priority group 3 people who left an employer's pension scheme, were aged under 35 at the time they took out a personal pension, are paying their own money into a personal pension and who are still with the same employer	31 December 1996
Pension opt-outs, priority group 4 people who left an employer's pension scheme, were aged 35 or over at the time they took out a personal pension and who are no longer with the same employer	31 December 1996

Data on the numbers of cases in each priority group that have been completed, and when, are not held centrally.

To speed up progress with the reviews, the SIB issued new guidance on 13 November 1996. By using the new streamlined approach in the guidance, it should be possible for investment firms to conclude case reviews more quickly and thus put matters right for investors more quickly too. At this stage, it is not clear how fast cases can now be progressed. The SIB now looks to the front-line regulators to assess what can be achieved by their members using the new guidance, and then to set and monitor challenging but appropriate targets for completing the review process.

Where suitable, personal pensions remain an excellent way for many people to secure income for their old age.

Land Transactions

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what change there have been in the guidance given by HM Treasury to Government Departments and non-departmental public bodies on the disposal of land and buildings and other land transactions since "DAO (GEN) 13/92", dated 23 July 1992; and if he will make a statement. [10296]

Mr. Jack: "DAO (GEN) 13/92" has been replaced by new guidance issued as "DAO (GEN) 11/96", dated 9 July 1996. The main changes and additions are the adoption of a less prescriptive approach, fuller guidance on the position of former owners and the Crichel Down rules, guidance on the definition of market value and the removal of the requirement for prior Treasury approval for certain types of disposal. Most of the new guidance is advisory rather than mandatory; market value is defined as the best price which can reasonably by obtained; and it is recognised that there may occasionally be cases where it will be reasonable to consider wider issues and accept a lower amount than the market value. A copy of the guidance has been placed in the Library of the House of Commons.

Arms Supplies (Rwanda)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library copies of the letters of 30 November 1995, 18 December 1995 and 26 August 1996 from the chairman of the United Nations special commission on arms supplies to Rwanda to the international liaison sector of United Kingdom Customs and Excise; and if he will include the replies to the letters. [7524]

Mr. Oppenheim: It is not the normal practice of the commissioners of Customs and Excise to disclose publicly information provided to them in connection with their enforcement and investigation responsibilities. The letters from the United Nations special commission contain details provided in confidence to the United Kingdom's customs. Customs has, however, obtained the permission of the commission to make public this material. I am arranging for copies of these letters to be placed in the House Library.

When customs received copies of the letters dated 30 November 1995 and 18 December 1995, in November 1996, it found them to be requests relating to customs investigations which had already been the subject of discussions between customs investigators and commission officials on 10 January 1996. The letter of 26 August 1996 recalled the two earlier ones. Customs investigators have been in contact with commission officials and no further response to the commission letters is needed. The commission has expressed complete satisfaction with the co-operation received from the UK Government.

It would be inappropriate to discuss the material provided by customs in confidence to the UN commission. It is not customs' general practice to make public information about the existence or nature of any investigation of individuals or companies not yet accused of criminal offences, since to do so could risk prejudicing any on-going inquiries or future criminal prosecutions.

Tax and National Insurance Contributions

Ms Corston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals are (a) paying tax but not national insurance contributions, (b) paying more tax than national insurance contributions and (c) paying less tax than national insurance contributions, breaking the figures down by employment category and wage bands. [8264]

Mr. Jack: The latest estimates for 1996–97 are given in the table. National insurance contributions include both employee and the corresponding employer contributions. The three employment categories shown in the table are based on the classification used in Inland Revenue administrative systems. Inland Revenue administrative practice is to manage a taxpayer's affairs according to the "main source" of his/her income. For nearly all taxpayers this is either employment (schedule E) or self-employment (schedule D) income. In a small number of cases, the "main source" may not reflect his/her principal source of income.

Petrol Duty

Mr. Richards: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer at what point in the supply process the tax point arises for duty levied on petrol refined in the United Kingdom, in the case of supply to (a) independent retailers and (b) supermarket petrol outlets; if he will make a statement on the reasons for any difference of treatment in the two cases; and what plans he has to review policy in this matter. [8519]

Mr. Oppenheim: The duty point at which the duty charge arises in respect of UK-refined petrol is the same regardless of whether it is supplied to independent retailers or supermarket forecourts. In both cases, the duty is charged at the time the product is supplied from the refinery for delivery to the UK domestic market.

Housebuilding

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations he undertook with the housebuilding industry prior to the publication of the booklet "Are Your Workers Employed or Self-employed?"; what representations he has received from housebuilders since the publication; and if he will make a statement. [8320]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 12 December 1996]: A wide range of bodies representing the construction industry, including housebuilders, were involved in consultations on employment status with officials from the Inland Revenue and the Department of Social Security. Since the publication of leaflet IR 148/CA69, "Are Your Workers Employed or Self-employed?" in October 1995 a number of representations have been received from the construction industry. Industry representatives have asked for more information about when contractors should complete their reviews of the employment status of their workers and make necessary changes. They have requested more time to implement those changes and help in explaining to their workers what a change in employment status means. The industry also sought an assurance that, by a given date, all construction firms must have made any necessary changes in the employment status of their workers and the deducting pay-as-you-earn and national insurance contributions so that there is a level playing field when firms compete for contracts. A new leaflet and a poster to help construction workers will be available in the new year. Details of the help provided for the industry on employment status are set out in a joint Inland Revenue and Contributions Agency press release issued on 19 November 1996, copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to treat construction operatives in the housebuilding sector as self-employed for taxation purposes until such time as he has consulted (a) the Housebuilders Federation, (b) the Manufacturing and Construction Industries Alliance and (c) other bodies representing the interests of housebuilders and their workers. [8323]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 12 December 1996]: No. The law on employment status applies in the housebuilding sector in the same way as it does in any other industries. A wide range of representative bodies from the construction industry, including groups representing the housebuilding sector, have already been consulted on these issues. We shall continue to work closely with these representatives.

Gold Reserves

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 4 November, Official Report, column 544, what proportion of British gold reserves are held outside the United Kingdom; and what proportion of the externally located gold reserves are held in western Europe. [3830]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 6 November, Official Report, column 544. Because the number of appropriate locations is limited, for security reasons we do not disclose the amounts held at different sites. However, less than half the UK's gold reserves are physically located outside the United Kingdom. Of this, less than 1 per cent. of the total is located in western Europe.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if Her Majesty's Government will assess the advantages of the redistribution of funds to the worst affected regions and countries along the lines proposed by the McDougal report to offset the effects of monetary union. [4753]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Government do not accept the case for any increase in fiscal transfers as a result of economic and monetary union. There are no implications for the EC budget, except that the euro will replace the ecu as the unit of account.

Incontinence Products

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what plans he has to make adjustments to the NHS budget to compensate for extra expenses incurred as a result of the recent change in the regulations governing VAT on incontinence products; [9160]

(2) what estimates he has made of the revenue which will be raised from the recent changes in the regulations governing VAT on incontinence products. [9161]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 16 December 1996]: There have been no changes to the regulations governing VAT on incontinence products. VAT has always been chargeable on incontinence products supplied to the NHS. The policy was confirmed in October 1995 following evidence of contrived tax avoidance schemes; but customs set guidelines to enable recovery of tax in cases where NHS trusts truly acted as agents for suppliers or patients. It later became clear that these arrangements did not reflect the normal position in the NHS, and they were withdrawn in August 1996. Few NHS trusts are thought to have used the guidelines, but details are not held centrally and so no reliable revenue estimates can be made. However, the NHS is in any case funded on the basis that its purchases of incontinence products are taxable.

Incontinence products supplied directly to disabled people are zero-rated.

Earned Income

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the average earned income in the most recent year for which figures are available for (a) the fifth percentile and (b) the 95th percentile of taxpayers. [9570]

Mr. Jack: Based on the estimation of earned income for taxpayers in 1997–98, the fifth percentile is about £4,200 and the 95th percentile is about £36,000.

Tobacco Smuggling

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to take further action against those involved in the illegal importation of cigarettes and tobacco; and if he will make a statement. [9655]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 17 December 1996]: As my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced as part of his Budget package, Customs and Excise is to deploy 70 additional front-line staff to combat single market smuggling of alcohol and tobacco. There will be increases in intelligence and investigation staff to deal with excise fraud and evasion.

Diesel Duty

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the levels of duty and VAT on diesel in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) France, (c) Germany and (d) Belgium. [9130]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information is shown in the following table:

Country	Excise duty on diesel Pence per litre	Duty plus VAT[1] Pence per litre	VAT rate on diesel Per cent.
United Kingdom	36.86	43.31	17.5
France	29.0	34.97	20.6
Germany	27.0	31.05	15
Belgium	24.8	30.01	21

[1] Because the amount of VAT depends on the retail price, the figure shown here is duty plus consequential VAT on the duty element of the price.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many VAT (i) registrations and (ii) deregistrations there have been in each Customs and Excise area in each year since 1990–91. [9741]

Mr. Oppenheim: Customs holds registration and deregistration information by local office and groups these offices to form collections. The information, by collection, is in the schedule.

However, changes in collection boundaries over the years make year-on-year comparisons between them inappropriate in some cases.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Southall Horse Market

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has in respect of the Southall horse market following the recent visit by his officials; and if he will make a statement. [8690]

Mrs. Browning: The Ministry has no proposals for Southall horse market. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 25 November, Official Report, column 102.

Livestock (Medicinal Products)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what legislation governs the use of medicinal products in farm animals, including products described as for growth promotion or performance enhancement; and if he will make a statement; [9302]

(2) if he will list the current legislation relating to the use of antibiotics and other antimicrobial substances in the feed of adult and breeding cattle, indicating the date such legislation came into force; and if he will make a statement. [9192]

Mrs. Browning: The legislation governing the use of medicinal products used for growth promotion or performance enhancement in farm animals and relating to the use of antibiotics and other antimicrobial substances in the feed of adult and breeding cattle is Council directive 70/524/EEC, which came into force on 23 November 1970.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list the annual consumption of (a) pharmacy and merchants' list antibiotics and (b) other antimicrobial substances for each class of livestock since 1966; and if he will make a statement; [9191]

(2) what was the annual consumption of prescription only medicine antibiotics and other antimicrobial substances for each class of livestock since 1966; and if he will make a statement; [9198]

(3) what statistics he collates on the annual consumption of prescription-only medicine antibiotics and other antimicrobial substances for each class of livestock; and if he will make a statement; [9197]

(4) what statistics his Department collates on the annual consumption of (a) pharmacy and merchants' list antibiotics and (b) other antimicrobial substances for each class of livestock; and if he will make a statement. [9199]

Mrs. Browning: The Government do not hold information on the annual consumption of antibiotics of antimicrobial substances for use with livestock.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the (a) antibiotics and (b) other antimicrobial substances currently licensed for use in the (i) feed and (ii) water of (x) dairy cows and (y) other lactating ruminants, indicating the date of licence; and if he will make a statement. [9193]

Mrs. Browning: Information on antibiotics and other antimicrobial substances currently licensed for use in the feed and water of dairy cows and other lactating ruminants is listed.

Correspondence

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the reasons for the time taken to reply to the letter of 24 June sent to him by the chairman of the consumers in Europe group concerning BSE; and when he expects to be able to send a reply. [9663]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I replied to the letter of 24 June from the chairman of the consumers in Europe group on 17 December 1996. As I explained in my reply, the letter was regrettably and inadvertently mislaid among the very substantial press of other correspondence on this issue.

WALES

Official Ministerial Visits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each of the Ministers in his Department how many official ministerial visits they have undertaken since 1 January; and how many of these have been abroad. [9386]

Mr. Hague: The information is as follows:

Secretary of State (Mr. William Hague): 174 visits of which 3 were abroad

Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Mr. Gwilym Jones): 128 visits of which 7 were abroad

Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Mr. Jonathan Evans): 89 visits of which 2 were abroad (Former Parliamentary Under Secretary of State) (Mr. Rod Richards): 52 visits of which 1 was abroad.

Primary School Class Sizes

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each year group in maintained primary schools the class size figures as tabulated for all registered classes in maintained primary schools in table 3.6 of "Statistics of Educational Training in Wales: Schools No. 4, 1996". [9588]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Information on class size is not collected by year group.

Domestic Telephones

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what proportion of households in Wales in which state benefits are the main source of income do not have a telephone; [9358]

(2) what proportion of households in Wales do not have a telephone; [9356]

(3) what proportion of pensioner households in Wales do not have a telephone. [9357]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information on telephone access in Wales is available from two different sample surveys; the Department of Social Security's family resources survey and the Office for National Statistics' family expenditure survey.

Based on the former, 13 per cent. of households in Wales did not have a telephone in 1994–95. The corresponding figure for households where state benefits accounted for more than half of gross weekly household income was 23 per cent. For households where the head of household was over the state retirement age the figure was 12 per cent.

From the latter, the estimate of the proportion of Welsh households without a telephone was 10 per cent. in 1995–96. This survey has a smaller sample size than the former and so these estimates are less reliable, particularly for smaller sub-groups.

Staff

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) permanent and (b) non-permanent staff there have been in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies of his Department in each year since 1992. [9617]

Mr. Hague: The numbers of permanent and non-permanent staff employed by my Department and its executive agency since 1992 are set out in the table:

	Welsh Office		Cadw
	Permanent	Non Permanent	Permanent	Non Permanent
1 January 1992	2425	125	—	—
1 January 1993	2159.5	137.5	262.5	3
1 January 1994	2183	230	217	9
1 January 1995	2070.5	213.5	222	7.5
1 December 1996	1903.5	177	179.6	7.3

1. Cadw was established as an Executive Agency on 1 April 1992.
2. The 1992 figures include OHMCI staff.

Information Technology (Euro)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what tenders his Department has put out to convert its information technology systems to be euro-compliant; what are the cost and person hours required to convert the systems to handle the euro; and when he expects his Department's systems to be fully economic and monetary union compliant. [9458]

Mr. Hague: My Department and agency will need to assess the impact which a single currency, assumed to be starting on 1 January 1999, would have on their information systems, whether or not the United Kingdom decides to participate in the third stage of economic and monetary union.

Housing Associations

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are his proposals for changing the arrangements for paying tax relief grant to Welsh housing associations; and if he will make a statement. [10460]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Department received 11 responses in August following the publication of our consultation paper "Proposals for Changes to the Tax Relief Grant Arrangements for Housing Associations in Wales". Most respondents called for more time to plan for withdrawal of the grant and for greater certainty about future rates of payment and some also saw advantages in gearing transitional assistance towards smaller housing associations.

I am pleased to respond to these concerns by setting out our intentions for future years with payments being set on a sliding scale. In 1997–98, claims will be met in full as originally proposed; in 1998–99, we plan to pay 75 per cent. of the first £50,000 of eligible claims, and 50 per cent of the rest; and in 1999–2000, we plan to pay 50 per cent. of the first £25,000 of eligible claims, and 25 per cent. of the rest.

The Government do not believe that continued expenditure on tax relief grant represents the most effective way of using the finite resources that are available to meet social housing need. We therefore remain committed to its abolition when an appropriate legislative opportunity arises. In the meantime, although the statutory discretion to pay tax relief grant will remain, the Government would normally expect that, following the planned reductions outlined, associations will plan to manage without tax relief grant payments.

A list of respondents to the consultation paper has been placed in the Library of the House, and this contains a contact point in the Welsh Office for copies of individual responses.

Departmental Activities

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his Department's activities since April 1992. [214]

Mr. Hague: Details of the Department's activities since 1992 are set out in full in the Welsh Office departmental reports for the relevant years. The key achievements include the following.

The Department has worked with local government to ensure a smooth transition to the new pattern of 22 unitary authorities. It is extending the influence of local government in Wales by cutting unnecessary central controls under its "redefining the relationship" initiative. It has exerted pressure on local authorities to secure value for money through the use of compulsory competitive tendering and associated financial targets. Council tax was successfully introduced on 1 April 1993.

The Department has supported local authorities' responsibilities under the NHS and Community Care Act 1990 for arranging community care services to meet individuals' needs. Through the mental handicap strategy it has helped to develop community-based support for individuals with a mental handicap and to improve the quality of care. The Department supports voluntary organisations which represent the interests of, and promote the development of services for, people with disabilities, older people, children and carers across Wales. It promotes volunteering through the "make a difference" initiative.

The incidence of homelessness has been reduced. More people own their homes and more homes are available in the social rented sector, with over 16,000 additional dwellings provided by housing associations between 1992–93 and 1995–96. There has been substantial investment in the renovation of private sector homes, with over 64,000 grants being made to a value exceeding £709 million over the same period. Through estate partnership there has been additional expenditure of over £30 million to address the problems of the worst council estates. The publication of the housing White Paper, "Our Future Homes", in June 1995 and the subsequent legislation set the framework for the future.

As part of the unique Welsh people and prosperity programme, "A Bright Future" is a comprehensive plan of action to raise educational standards and performance for all pupils; the results of statutory tests, public examinations and the views of the independent office of Her Majesty's inspector of schools in Wales demonstrate that standards are now at record levels. The Government have increased parental choice and diversity of provision through continued support to voluntary-aided schools through a unique Welsh initiative which enables popular schools to expand doubling the number of children able to take up assisted places at good independent schools in Wales the option for schools to go grant-maintained and the introduction of nursery vouchers from next April. The Government have made possible record levels of participation in higher and further education. The charters for parents and students make clear their opportunities, rights and responsibilities.

The Government have established an independent Arts Council of Wales. National lottery funding via the Arts Council of Wales and the Sports Council for Wales is providing an additional £15 million each year for the arts and for sport. Funding has been provided for new galleries in the main national museums and galleries building in Cardiff and a major extension of the national library of Wales. Support for the Welsh language has continued through record levels of grant and the implementation of the Welsh Language Act 1993.

Since 1992, the structure of the NHS—the reforms were introduced in April 1991—has been developed by:

- completing the transfer of all hospital, community and ambulance service to NHS trust status;
- encouraging General Practitioners to become fundholders—currently 52 per cent. of patients have a fundholding GP;
- reorganising the 17 health authorities in Wales to five new health authorities with an eventual saving of £8 million per year.

The quality of service has been greatly improved by the implementation of the patients charter for Wales. This set standards and guarantees for a wide variety of NHS activities including waiting times for hospital appointments and treatments which showed significant improvements. The results are published each year in performance tables of hospital improvements.

The efficiency of the NHS has also greatly improved. Cumulative savings of £380 million have been achieved since 1992–93 enabling, for example, the number of in-patients treated to increase by 17 per cent.

The Welsh Office Health Department has encouraged a wide variety of initiatives and developments to improve the service provided by the NHS, including research and development, health promotion and activities to improve the effectiveness of treatments.

A report of the Welsh Office's chief medical officer on the health of the people of Wales has been published for each year from 1992 to 1995.

In 1992–93, provision for the NHS in Wales was £1.877 billion. In 1996–97, the provision is £2.274 billion, which represents an increase of 21 per cent. in cash terms and 10.1 per cent. in real terms.

Since 1992, the Welsh Office has played a full part in the development and implementation of the common agricultural and common fisheries policies, including the

ADAS

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he will take to ensure that the benefits of his Department's future research and development carried out by ADAS continue to be made available to the industry as a whole following privatisation. [10464]

Mr. Boswell: We are well aware of the need to ensure that Department-funded research results continue to be properly exploited to the benefit of the industry as a whole. Where existing intellectual property rights are sold with ADAS business, we will attach appropriate conditions which may include a requirement on the purchaser to grant non-exclusive licences to third parties to exploit the intellectual property. Future contracts with the privatised company will specify the arrangements for ownership of the intellectual property rights and the conditions attached to such ownership.

Mammalian Meat and Bonemeal (Transport)

Mr. Martin Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many representations he has received concerning potential cross-contamination from the transport of mammalian meat and bonemeal in vehicles that are also used to transport grain; and if he will make a statement. [7946]

Mrs. Browning [pursuant to his reply, 10 December 1996, c. 106]: I have been further advised by my officials that we are aware of two letters on this issue which have been received.

"New Labour's Expenditure Plans"

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what costs quoted in the document "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" were prepared in his Department; what detailed assumptions and interpretations were provided to officials in his Department and to enable preparation of each cost; and what was the total cost to public funds of preparing each estimate. [6353]

Mr. Hogg: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, in conjunction with the Treasury, prepared the factual material relating to costings published in "New Labour's Public Expenditure Plans" numbered 4, 5 and 6. The detailed assumptions and interpretations that were provided to officials are set out in my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary's reply to the right hon. Gentleman on 17 December 1996. It is not normal working practice to keep a record of the time spent in providing factual information to Ministers and it is not therefore possible to offer a reliable estimate of the costs involved.

Frozen Meat

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what assessment he has made of the health risks from meat sold as fresh which has previously been frozen; [7361]

(2) how he ensures that the public are informed of health risks from meat sold as fresh which had previously been frozen. [7364]

Mrs. Browning: The law currently requires the name of a food to include reference to its physical condition or treatment—for example, frozen—if omission of such information would mislead the consumer.

The health risks associated with meat which has been previously frozen are no greater than those from meat which has not been previously frozen. Provided the meat is cooked thoroughly and kept free from cross-contamination after cooking, it will be safe to eat. The long-standing Government advice has been widely disseminated in Government publicity on food safety for many years.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what representations he has received to restore the requirement that meat sold as fresh which had previously been frozen should be clearly so labelled; [7365]

(2) what are the legal requirements on meat retailers concerning the specific labelling of meat sold as fresh which had previously been frozen; [7363]

(3) what guidance he has issued to meat retailers concerning the labelling of meat sold as fresh which had previously been frozen. [7366]

Mrs. Browning: Specific labelling requirements for meat and offal previously frozen were removed at the behest of the EC Commission as being at variance with harmonised EC labelling rules. No representations have been received seeking their restoration. None the less, the law currently requires the name of a food to include reference to its physical condition or treatment—for example, previously frozen—if omission of such information would mislead the purchaser. We shall be adding to the guidance notes on the food labelling regulations further advice on the way food processes and treatments should be indicated.

Cattle Cull

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his current estimate of the number of animals remaining to be culled in the over-30-month cull scheme; and if he will make a statement. [7913]

Mr. Baldry: The backlog of animals waiting to be slaughtered under the over-30-month scheme has now been eliminated in Great Britain and will very shortly be cleared in Northern Ireland. Cattle will therefore be able to be presented for the scheme at their normal point of slaughter, as originally intended.

Animals (Identification)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many and what percentage of (a) farm and (b) domestic animals were (i) identified and (ii) newly identified by (1) a microchip and (2) a tattoo in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9654]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 17 December 1996]: This information for farm animals is not collected centrally. Questions relating to domestic animals are a matter for the Home Department.

Beef Exports (South Africa)

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much UK beef was exported to South Africa in each of the years 1991 to 1995 and for each month in 1996 until the imposition of the EU export ban; and how much of this in each period was (a) frozen, (b) chilled, (c) fresh and (d) preserved or prepared. [9225]

Mrs. Browning: It is not possible separately to identify exports of beef of UK origin from those of non-UK origin. However, exports of beef from the UK to South Africa, as recorded in the overseas trade statistics, were as follows:

Beef exports to South Africa 1991–95

[2] Exports of fresh and chilled beef are not separately available.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the level of the EC export refund given on beef exports to South Africa currently; and what it was in each of the years 1991 to 1995. [9226]

Mr. Baldry: There are 92 separate rates of export refund covering the export of beef and beef products from the EC to South Africa. However, when beef was exported from the UK to South Africa it tended to be in two categories: fresh chilled boneless cuts from the hindquarters of adult male bovines—special export refund beef; and other fresh chilled or frozen boneless cuts. These are set out with their current rate of export refund:

SER beef: 274 ECU/100 kg

Other fresh chilled or frozen boneless cuts: 145.5 ECU/100 kg.

During the years 1991 to 1995 different rates applied at different times. A list of these is in the table, together with the agricultural conversion—green—rates which convert these into sterling.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Minster of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the quantity of beef exports to South Africa which has been re-exported to the EU from (a) Botswana, (b) Namibia, (c) Swaziland or (d) Lesotho since 1991. [9227]

Mr. Baldry: The information requested is not available.

Staff

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for his Department (a) how many people in total are employed, (b) how many of the total number of staff are (i) male and (ii) female and (c) how many (I) men and (II) women are employed on a (1) full-time and (2) part-time basis. [9482]

Mr. Boswell: The number of men and women employed on a full-time and part-time basis in the Department on 1 October 1996 was as follows:

	Number
Full time
Male	3,518
Female	2,795
Part time
Male	43
Female	516
Total
Male	5,561
Female	3,311
Staff	6,872

The table does not include figures for the Department's executive agencies.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) permanent and (b) non-permanent staff there have been in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies of his Department in each year since 1992. [9621]

Mr. Boswell: Information on the numbers of permanent and casual staff in the Department and its executive agencies in each year since 1992 can be found in the civil service staff in post summary tables, copies of which can be found in the Library of the House.

Fishing Rights

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what classes of French fishing vessels are prohibited from fishing within the French 12-mile limit. [9573]

Mr. Sackville: I have been asked to reply.

In those areas where French vessels are permitted to fish within 12 miles of the Bailiwick of Guernsey, no distinction is made between classes of vessel.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reasons the area agreement for French fishing vessels to fish inside the British fisheries limit of 12 miles around Guernsey and for British vessels to fish within the French 12-mile limit was not ratified by France. [9572]

Mr. Sackville: I have been asked to reply.

A temporary agreement with France covering these waters was recently terminated by the United Kingdom at the request of the Guernsey authorities, who did not think it operated in a way which was fair to the Bailiwick.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what rights French fisherman currently have to fish within the Sark box. [9574]

Mr. Sackville: I have been asked to reply.

The position in international law is disputed, and the matter is currently the subject of discussion with France.

TRANSPORT

Transport Council

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the result of the Transport Council held in Brussels on 12 and 13 December. [10339]

Sir George Young: The Transport Council met in Brussels on 12 and 13 December. My noble Friend the Minister for Aviation and Shipping represented the United Kingdom.

The Council agreed a common position on the Commission's proposals for a directive on road passenger cabotage—replacing directive 2454/92 which was annulled for technical reasons by the European Court of Justice. The UK said that it would vote against the text when formally adopted, because much of the original proposals for further liberalisation had been removed from the text. This was the only item on which the question of a vote arose.

The Council also agreed a common position on a proposed amendment to Council regulation 684/92, on further liberalisation of international bus and coach services.

The Council held orientation debates on the Commission's White Paper on the future of the Community's railways, and on proposals for the introduction of new digital tachograph technology to replace the mechanical recording devices currently required for buses and lorries.

The Council agreed conclusions endorsing the Commission's proposals to take forward negotiations on a land transport agreement with Switzerland. It also discussed proposals for a replacement to directive 93/89—also annulled by the European Court of Justice on technical grounds—on taxation and road user charges for heavy goods vehicles. It was agreed that this issue would be taken forward under the Netherlands presidency of the EU in parallel with discussions on fuel excise duties.

The Council held an orientation debate on air traffic management in the EU, and agreed conclusions noting the urgent need to adopt the new Eurocontrol convention. The Council agreed a common position on a proposed regulation increasing and harmonising the liability of Community air carriers in case of accident to passengers.

The Commission reported to the Council on its negotiations on air transport relations with the United States, and gave a presentation on proposals for a mandate to negotiate Community membership of a new European Aviation Safety Authority.

The Council reached political agreement on a proposed directive on safety standards for fishing vessels and on a proposed amendment to directive 93/75 on reporting requirements for ships carrying dangerous or polluting goods.

The Council agreed a resolution promoting a maritime strategy for the Community. The UK opposed two elements of the strategy—on employment-related operating subsidies, and on restrictive manning practices—which were therefore excluded from the resolution itself and were covered separately by presidency conclusions supported by the Commission and the other delegations.

The Council discussed the recent lorry blockades in France and Greece and the question of compensation.

The Council discussed summer time, and received progress reports from the Commission on a number of other issues, which were not debated.

Red Routes

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has undertaken an accident study of the pilot priority red route in north London since its introduction. [10471]

Mr. Bowis: The report "A Pilot Red Route Accident Study", commissioned by the Traffic Director for London, has been prepared by the consultants TecnEcon. The report analyses casualty data covering the three years since the pilot scheme was implemented and draws comparisons with the three yeas before the pilot scheme began. It covers the pilot scheme "rat runs" and other roads in the immediate area which were likely to be affected as a result of improvements in traffic flow on the pilot scheme and traffic calming measures. It concludes that the number of people injured in road accidents on or near London's pilot red route has fallen by 15.4 per cent. since the scheme became operational in 1993, and shows impressive reductions in the number of severe casualties—down 32.8 per cent.—and in the number of pedestrians injured—down 29.9 per cent. I have arranged for a copy of the report to be placed in the Library.

Bus Working Group

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list (a) the members of the bus working group, (b) its terms of reference, (c) the number of meetings it has held and (d) the reports it has produced; and if he will place copies of its reports in the Library. [10271]

Mr. Watts: Under my chairmanship, the bus working group comprises representatives from the Confederation of Passenger Transport, the Joint Local Authority Associations and the National Federation of Bus Users. In addition to the senior traffic commissioner and officials from the Department of Transport and the Scottish and Welsh Offices, who also attend meetings of the group, the following attended the most recent meetings, held on 19 September:

Local authority representatives

Councillor M. Dowd

Councillor J. Lingard

Mr. D. Bannerman

Mr. R. Bristowe

Mr. J. Carr

Mr. V. Christie

Mr. B. Dobbs

Ms A. Livesey

Mr. K. Manton

Mr. P. Morgan.

Confederation of Passenger Transport

Mr. T. Smallwood

Mrs. V. Palmer

Mr. D. Flower.

National Federation of Bus Users

Dr. C. Cahm

Mr. J. Cartledge.

The group has no formal terms of reference. Its remit is to examine ways of improving the provision of bus services within the privatised and deregulated framework.

The group has met five times since it was re-established in its present form last year. In addition, there have been a number of meetings of four sub-groups.

My predecessor as chairman, the hon. Member for Epping Forest (Mr. Norris), reported on the group's work in a press statement on 8 January. More recently, the group has worked up a guide to good practice in the provision of passenger information, which was published by the Department in September. Copies of both documents have been placed in the Library.

Private Pilots' Licences

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many holders of (i) a United Kingdom private pilot's licence for (a) helicopters PPL (h) and (b) fixed-wing aeroplanes, (ii) an airline transport licence and (iii) a commercial pilot's licence for (A) helicopters and (B) gyroplanes have been prosecuted for exceeding the privileges of their licence since 24 July 1990; [8833]

(2) how many alleged incidents of holders of (i) a private pilot's licence for (a) helicopters and (b) aeroplanes (ii) an airline transport licence and (iii) a commercial pilot's licence for (A) helicopters and (B) gyroplanes, exceeding the privileges of their licence have been investigated by investigating officers of the air safety enforcement section of the legal branch of the UK CAA since 24 July 1990. [8834]

Mr. Bowis: Records of prosecutions of pilots for exceeding the privileges of their licences do not specify what licences and/or ratings were held at the time, although they do distinguish between fixed-wing and helicopter incidents.

Since 1 January 1991, there have been 22 successful prosecutions of pilots for exceeding the privileges of their licences, 16 involving pilots of fixed-wing aircraft and six involving helicopter pilots. All earlier records have been archived and the information from these could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Records relating to investigations which do not lead to prosecutions are not retained.

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many holders of a UK private pilot's licence and a UK private pilot's licence (helicopter) have been convicted for conducting public transport operations. [8835]

Mr. Bowis: Since 1 January 1991, there have been 18 successful prosecutions for illegal public transport operations, 12 involving fixed-wing aircraft and six involving helicopters. The records do no show the category of licence held by the pilots.

A5 (Weeford to Fazeley)

Mr. Brian David Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when and for what reasons the decision was taken to withdraw the scheme to improve the A5 from Weeford to Fazeley from the trunk road programme. [8821]

Mr. Watts: The A5 from Weeford to Fazeley was one of a number of longer—term schemes withdrawn from the programme following the Chancellor's Budget statement last November. These schemes had little chance of coming to fruition within a reasonable time scale and were withdrawn to remove uncertainty and the damaging effects of blight on individuals and neighbourhoods.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents have occurred in each of the last five years on the A5 between Weeford and Fazeley. [8820]

Mr. Watts: It is our policy to record only those accidents involving personal injury. The number of such accidents for the section of the A5 between Weeford and Fazeley, including the A5/A38 junction, for the last five years is as follows:

	Fatal	Serious	Slight	Total
1991	0	0	9	9
1992	1	3	12	16
1993	0	0	3	3
1994	1	1	6	8
1995	1	1	7	9
1996 (to June)	0	1	4	5
Total	3	6	41	50

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received (a) in support and (b) against the A5 Weeford to Fazeley improvement scheme; and if he will list them. [8824]

Mr. Watts: Some 90 per cent. of those members of the public who responded to the 1993 public consultation exercise supported an improvement to the A5 between Weeford and Fazeley.

Twelve official bodies were also consulted. The results were as follows:

Full support:

Staffordshire County Council
Borough of Tamworth
Countryside Commission
Cyclists Touring Club
RAC Motoring Services
Road Haulage Association
Weeford Parish Council

No objection in principle:

Linchfield City Council
National Rivers Authority
Staffordshire Police

Agreement in Principle:

Hints with Canwell Parish Council

Objection to the Scheme:

Council for the Protection of Rural Engand.

Mr. Jenkins: To the Secretary of State for Transport what is the traffic capacity of the A5 from Weeford to Fazeley; and what is the current volume. [8819]

Mr. Watts: The congestion reference flow, which shows the level at which the road would be in the peak periods on an average day, is approximately 20,000 vehicles per day for the A5 between Weeford and Fazeley.

The current traffic flow—1996—is some 16,000 vehicles per day, of which 20 per cent. are heavy goods vehicles.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to deal with the existing traffic problems on the A5 between the A38 junction and Fazeley. [8823]

Mr. Watts: Following the 1995 "Managing the Roads Programme" review, Staffordshire county council was commissioned to investigate what interim measures could be undertaken on that section of trunk road. Its report is expected the end of the year. With the scheme now withdrawn from the programme, we shall consider what measures, within current resources limitations, we can undertake to deal with existing traffic problems.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the total expenditure in (a) design costs, (b) legal costs, (c) land and property acquisition and (d) other preparatory work for the A5 Weeford to Fazeley improvement scheme. [8822]

Mr. Watts: Total expenditure incurred to date amounts to £473,445. This comprises:

(a) Design costs	349,562
(b) Legal costs	nil
(c) Land and Property acquisition	90,000
(d) Other preparatory work	33,883

Civilian Pilots

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what training is provided to pilots of civilian aircraft on what to do in the event of encountering unidentified craft which do not show up on radar. [9563]

Mr. Bowis: Matters relating to the training of civil aircrew are the responsibility of the Civil Aviation Authority. I have asked the chairman of that authority to write to the hon. Member.

Ringway Airport

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the incident that occurred at 6.48 pm to flight 5061 on its descent into Ringway airport, Manchester on the night of 6 January 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9581]

Mr. Bowis: This incident was assessed by the joint airmiss working group, consisting of representatives from both civil and military aviation. The group found that both the degree of risk and the cause of the incident were unassessable. Full details are contained in joint airmiss working group report No. 1/95—January 1995 to April 1995, which is available from the Library.

Flight Operations Inspectors

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what are the minimum professional qualifications for a person to be employed as a flight operations inspector (helicopters) in the flight operations inspectorate of the safety regulation group of the United Kingdom Civil Aviation Authority; [8829]

(2) what are the professional qualifications and total helicopter and fixed-wing flying hours, of the most experienced flight operations inspector (helicopters) currently employed on flight operations inspectorate duties in the specialist helicopter section, FOI2, in the flight operations safety regulation group in the UK Civil Aviation Authority; and what were the equivalent data on 30 June 1990; [8830]

(3) what are the professional qualifications, and total helicopter and fixed-wing flying hours, of the least experienced flight operations inspector (helicopters) currently employed on flight operations inspector (helicopters) duties in FOI2; and what were the equivalent data on 30 June 1990; [8831]

(4) what are the average total flying hours, helicopter and fixed wing, of the flight operations inspector (helicopters) employed as flight operations inspectors in FOI2 in the safety regulation group of the UK Civil Aviation Authority. [8832]

Mr. Bowis: The minimum professional qualifications for a person to be employed as a flight operations inspector (helicopters) in the flight operations inspectorate of the Civil Aviation Authority is five years' experience in command of an appropriate helicopter and relevant experience in the UK industry. Inspectors are expected to retain a current airline transport pilot's licence (helicopters and gyroplanes).

While individual inspectors keep a record of their flying hours in their personal flying log book, a record is not kept by the CAA. The CAA could require such information from its inspectors under article 68(4) of the Air Navigation (No. 2) Order 1995 but there is a statutory prohibition on the disclosure of information obtained in this way.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the timetable for, and funding of, the proposed Birmingham northern relief road. [9771]

Mr. Watts: The 16-month public inquiry ended in October last year. Many complex issues were raised and it is necessarily taking time for the inspector to complete his report. Once it is received, my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Transport will consider it and issue a decision as soon as possible.

The Birmingham northern relief road is the subject of a concession agreement with a private sector concessionaire, Midland Expressway Ltd., which is responsible for designing, building, financing and operating the road.

Channel Tunnel (Safety)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the quantity of (a) polystyrene products and (b) packaging currently being transported via the channel tunnel; and if he will make a statement. [9867]

Mr. Watts: No estimates of this kind have been made.

Road Closures (Commercial Vehicles)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents during the past 12 months involving commercial vehicles which resulted in (a) total and (b) partial closures of (i) tunnels, (ii) bridges and (iii) motorways in England and Wales were notified to his Department; and how many prosecutions resulted. [9311]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 16 December 1996]: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 18 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question about how many incidents during the past 12 months involving commercial vehicles which resulted in (a) total and (b) partial closures of (i) tunnels, (ii) bridges and (iii) motorways in England were notified to this Department; and how many prosecutions resulted.

The Highways Agency is responsible for the management and operation of the motorway and trunk road network in England. There are occasions when the police will independently use their own powers to close a length of road because of an emergency. Where no damage to the road or roadside equipment is involved, and their impact is not great, these are unlikely to be reported to the Highways Agency. In view of this, I am unable to provide figures to cover all such incidents.

At the Blackwall Tunnel we have over recent years kept statistics of total closures and partial or short term (approximately 15 minutes) closures and prosecutions. In the last 12 months we have recorded 1 total closure (southbound 10/12/96), 430 partial/short term closures and 260 prosecutions. Most of these closures relate to over-height vehicles attempting to enter the northbound tunnel. On the rest of the trunk road network the Agency is aware of 20 total closures, and 86 partial closures involving commercial vehicles. No prosecutions have been recorded.

Transport Supplementary Grant

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of his Department's vulnerability to claims by highway authorities for damages if his allocations of transport supplementary grant were insufficient to enable highway authorities to meet their existing contractual financial commitments in relation to highway schemes approved for transport supplementary grant; [9448]

(2) if it is his policy that the transport supplementary grant allocations to highway authorities should be sufficient to meet authorities' existing contractual financial commitments in relation to highway schemes approved for transport supplementary grant. [9449]

Mr. Watts: When local highway authorities submit their annual transport policies and programme proposals, the Department looks scrupulously at the bids for support for schemes accepted for transport supplementary grant in past rounds. The aim is to determine the extent to which estimated expenditure is eligible for grant, is consistent with published guidance, and is in line with previous advice to the bidding authority on affordability. The Department makes it clear that TSG is not necessarily intended to cover the entire costs of an accepted scheme. There may be elements of expenditure in a contract that are not eligible for the grant. The Department is therefore under no obligation to provide sufficient resources for an authority to meet its contractual commitments. Subject to those qualifications, the Department none the less aims in making its allocations to avoid the authority having artificially to delay schemes that have already started construction. No case has been recorded in which an authority has pursued a claim against the Department because of alleged failure to provide sufficient resources.

Leaded Petrol Ban

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for the Environment regarding exemptions to the European leaded petrol ban; [9738]

(2) what discussions he has had with his European partners regarding the exemption for classic car owners from the leaded petrol ban. [9739]

Mr. Bowis: The Government endorse the need to sustain the continuing decline in leaded petrol sales but believe a total ban to be unnecessary. At the Environment Council on 15 October, my noble Friend the Lord Lindsay urged our European partners to adopt the UK approach of reducing sales through fiscal rather than regulatory means, thus allowing the owners of older or historic or classic vehicles to buy leaded petrol for as long as there is a market demand. Discussions are still at an early stage but there are signs that some of our European partners would share our approach.

Staff

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) permanent and (b) non-permanent staff there have been in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies of his Department in each year since 1992. [9619]

Mr. Bowis: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as the information can be assembled and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Heavy Goods Vehicles (Road Tax)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the road tax charges for heavy goods vehicles in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) France, (c) Germany and (d) Belgium. [9129]

Mr. Bowis: In the United Kingdom, goods vehicles pay vehicle excise duty according to their revenue weight and their axle configuration. The following table summarises the main features of current rates after the Budget of 26 November 1996. In the Budget, the Chancellor also announced his intention to offer concessions to heavy goods vehicles with low emission levels meeting targets from 1988. Full details of rates are published by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency on form V149 "Rates of Vehicle Excise Duty" available at post offices.

Goods vehicle type	Revenue weight details	Current annual fee £
All types	Over 3,500 kgs not over 7,500 kgs	150
All types	Over 7,500 kgs not over 12,000 kgs	290
Rigid vehicles:
2 axle	Minimun: Over 12,000 kgs not over 13,000 kgs	450
	Maximum: Over 1,500 kgs not over 17,000 kgs	1,280
3 axle	Minimum: Over 1,2000 kgs not over 17,000 kgs	470
	Maximum: Over 25,000 kgs not over 27,000 kgs	2,260
4 or more axle	Minimum: Over 12,000 kgs not over 21,000 kgs	340
	Maximum: Over 31,000 kgs not over 32,000 kgs	4,250
Articulated vehicles
2 axle tractor	Minimum: Over 12,000 kgs not over 16,000 kgs	440
1 (or more) axle trailer	Maximum: Over 33,000 kgs not over 38,000 kgs	5,000
2 axle tractor	Minimum: Over 12,000 kgs not over 28,000 kgs	440
3 axle trailer	Maximum: Over 36,000 kgs not over 38,000 kgs	3,100
3 axle tractor	Minimum: Over 12,000 kgs not over 23,000 kgs	440
1 (or more) axle trailer	Maximum: Over 36,000 kgs not over 38,000 kgs	2,730
3 axle tractor	Minimum: Over 12,000 kgs not over 33,000 kgs	440
3 axle trailer	Maximum: Over 36,000 kgs not over 38,000 kgs	1,240

In France, goods vehicles not over 16 tonnes pay road tax as part of the graduated system that applies to ordinary motorcars. The tariff depends upon the power of the vehicle, its age and the area of the country or departement. Typically, vehicles in the lowest power bands pay FF200 to FF300, those in the highest power bands FF12,000 to FF14,000.

Vehicles with a total permissible weight in excess of 16 tonnes are exempted from this graduated tax, but instead pay axle tax. The tariff is based upon both axle configuration and gross weight, and ranges from FF200 to FF14,400 per year, although vehicles may qualify for certain reductions in these rates depending upon how they are used and operated. An articulated vehicle with two-axle tractor, two-axle trailer and weighing between 37,501 kg to 38,000 kg would pay FF5,200.

In Germany, taxes are based upon total permissible weight in kilogrammes. Standard rates for 1995 range from DM22 per 200 kg, for vehicles not over 2,000 kg, to DM124 per 200 kg for vehicles over 15,000 kg, up to a maximum of DM3,500. Vehicles meeting specified noise and pollution standards qualify for lower rates, which for the most environmentally friendly vehicles range from DM12.55 per 200 kg, for vehicles not over 2,000 kg, to DM30.85 per 200 kg for vehicles over 15,000 kg, up to a maximum of DM1,300. Trailers are surcharged according to total maximum weight, ranging from DM730 for those not exceeding 10 tonnes, to DM1,750 to those over 18 tonnes. Under those arrangements, a 38,000 kg articulated vehicle without environmental improvements would pay DM3,500.

In Belgium, vans, trucks, lorries and articulated goods vehicles pay road tax based upon the deadweight of the vehicle. The following rates were applicable between July 1995 and June 1996. Up to 1,000 kg deadweight, the basic charge is 150 Belgian francs per 100 kg, subject to a minimum tax of 888 Belgian francs. Over 1,000 kg deadweight, vehicles pay at a rate per 100 kg of 150 Belgian francs plus seven francs for every 100 kg over 1,000 kg, subject to a maximum rate of 346 francs per 100 kg.

At deadweight 4,650 kg tax payable is 15,916 Belgium francs. Over 4,640 kg, a supplement of 346 francs is payable for each additional 100 kg. Some vehicles may be subject to additional municipal taxes. A reduction of 25 per cent. is permitted to vehicles over five years of age. A 38-tonne articulated vehicle, assumed to have deadweight of approximately 13 tonnes, would pay roughly 46,500 francs.

Information Technology (Euro)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what tenders his Department has put out to convert its information technology systems to be euro-compliant; what are the cost and person hours required to convert the systems to handle the euro; and when he expects his Department's systems to be fully economic and monetary union compliant. [9455]

Mr. Bowis: The Department and agencies will need to assess the impact that a single currency would have on their information systems, whether or not the United Kingdom decides to participate in the third stage of economic and monetary union.

Coastguard Service

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what will be the proposed staffing arrangements at (a) Lerwick coastguard station and (b) Pentland coastguard station following the introduction of coastguard watch assistants; [8469]

(2) what were the recommended levels of staffing at (a) Lerwick coastguard station and (b) Pentland coastguard station on 1 December 1996; [8468]

(3) how many full-time and part-time coastguard officers, at each grade, were employed by HM Coastguard at (a) Lerwick and (b) Pentland on (i) 1 December 1990, (ii) 1 December 1995 and (iii) 1 December 1996. [8467]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 11 December 1996]: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. James Wallace, dated 18 December 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions on staffing levels within the Coastguard Agency. The answers are as follows:

PQ 636/96/97

To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, how many full-time and part-time coastguard officers, at each grade, were employed by HM Coastguard at (a) Lerwick and (b) Pentland on (i) 1 December 1990, (ii) 1 December 1995 and (iii) 1 December 1996.

	District controller	Station officer	Senior watch officer	Watch officer	Sector officer	Totals
1 December 1990
Shetland	1	2	4	6	2	15
1 December 1990
Pentland	1	2	[1]5	5	3	16
1 December 1995
Shetland	1	2	4	8	2	17
1 December 1995
Pentland	1	1	4	7	4	17
1 December 1996
Shetland	1	2	4	6	2	15
1 December 1996
Pentland	1	1	3	7	4	16

[1] One over complement due to overlapping transfer.

PQ 643/96/97

To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what were the recommended levels of staffing at (a) Lerwick coastguard station and (b) Pentland coastguard station on 1 December 1996.

	District controller	Station officer	Senior watch officer	Watch officer	Sector officer	Totals
Shetland (Lerwick)	1	2	4	8	2	17
Pentland (Kirkwall)	1	2	4	8	4	19

PQ 637/96/97:

To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what will be the proposed staffing arrangements at (a) Lerwick Coastguard station and (b) Pentland Coastguard station following the introduction of Coastguard watch assistants. [8469]

	District controller	Deputy district controller	Watch manager	Watch officer	Coastguard watch assistant	Sector manager	Totals
Shetland (Lerwick)	1	1	4	5	6	2	19
Pentland (Kirkwall)	1	1	4	5	6	3	20

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to pay a gratuity to those coastguard auxiliaries informed this year that their services were no longer required; and if he will list the numbers involved and lengths of service. [9577]

Mr. Bowis: The "focus for change" review recommended the replacement by permanent employees of the volunteer auxiliary service which supported Her Majesty's Coastguard's operations. There were approximately 360 auxiliary coastguards in the operations rooms with service varying between one and 20 years.

As volunteers they are not eligible to receive severance payments but we would like to put on record our appreciation of the valuable service given by operations rooms auxiliaries over many years. More than 3,000 auxiliaries will continue to form the coast rescue companies around the coast, preserving the long tradition of voluntary service to the seagoing community within Her Majesty's Coastguard.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for the privatisation of the Coastguard agency. [9764]

Mr. Bowis: None.

Bull Bars

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what conclusions he has drawn from the Transport Research Laboratory's study of accidents involving bull bars; and if he will make a statement. [10279]

Mr. Bowis: The Transport Research Laboratory published yesterday a study of accident data which suggests that the number of additional deaths and injuries caused by bull bars is significantly lower than had previously been assumed. Nevertheless, we cannot accept unnecessary deaths on the road, even if in single figures. We are still very much opposed to the fitting of aggressive bull bars and strongly support current European efforts to control their use. We shall also be studying the TRL report carefully to assess what further action is appropriate.

A copy of the TRL study has been placed in the Library.

Vehicle Fuel Tax

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the impact of a 5 per cent. annual increase in tax on vehicular fuel on road traffic. [10205]

Mr. Bowis: The impact depends on the price charged at the pump and the number of years over which the increase is imposed.

North Sea Pollution

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many oil or chemical pollution incidents have been reported by each member state party to the Bonn agreement on pollution in the North sea in each year since it came into force; and if he will place in the Library copies of each submission made by the United Kingdom under the Bonn agreement. [8366]

Mr. Bowis: The Bonn agreement secretariat has informed the Department's marine pollution control unit that, between 1984 and 1996 to date, it received 36 pollution reports from contracting parties as in the table.

	1984	1986	1987	1988	1989	1990	1991	1992	1993	1995	1996	Total
Belgium	1	1	1						1	2		6
Denmark	1									2		3
France				1	1							2
Germany						1					1	2
Netherlands		2	2	3	2	3					1	13
Norway						1		1				2
Sweden						1	1					2
United Kingdom					3	1			1			5

The secretariat has said that the Bonn agreement 1983, as amended by the decision of contracting parties of 22 September 1989, does not impose a formal duty on contracting parties to send copies of all pollution reports to the secretariat. In practice, all contracting parties resort to instant operational contacts with neighbouring parties from the start of an incident, often under the umbrella of bilateral arrangements.

Since 1989, the marine pollution control unit has notified the Bonn agreement secretariat on five occasions of oil pollution or threatened oil pollution in the UK as shown in the table. The Bonn agreement does not require members to make submissions. Of the five UK incidents listed, reports of two—the Philips Oklahoma and the Braer—are available in the Library.

Airline Ramp Checks

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those airlines identified by the Civil Aviation Authority as a cause for concern in relation to safety which has resulted in additional ramp checks being undertaken. [8441]

Mr. Bowis: Since January's announcement of a package of measures to increase the safety surveillance of foreign aircraft operating to the UK, the Department has asked the Civil Aviation Authority to carry out a number of ramp checks. Additional ramp checks have been necessary only in the case of Turkmenistan Airlines and Transarabian Air Transport. In neither case has there been evidence of on-going problems which suggest that these airlines are not operating in accordance with the International Civil Aviation Organisation's minimum standards.

Motorways and Trunk Roads

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each motorway and trunk road, in which parliamentary constituency each junction is located, based on (a) the present boundaries and (b) the new boundaries which come into effect from 1997. [9158]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 16 December 1996]: The information in its entirety could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, I can provide a list of the motorway junctions in England based on the current parliamentary boundaries. As the list is extensive, I will send it separately to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy in the Library.

Iwade Queenborough Improvement Scheme

Sir Roger Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to publish the draft orders for the Iwade to Queenborough improvement scheme, including the second crossing of the Swale; and what arrangements are being made for a public exhibition. [9587]

Mr. Watts: We intend to publish the draft orders for this scheme on 23 January 1997. This will be followed as soon as possible by a local public exhibition of the proposals. At the exhibition, officials will be in attendance to explain the proposals and to answer any questions.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Official Ministerial Visits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list for each of the Ministers in his Department how many official ministerial visits they have undertaken since 1 January; and how many of these have been abroad. [9377]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Ministers carry out many visits in the course of their official duties. During the period in question, the number of official visits overseas by Ministers of this Department were as follows:

my right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary made 46 overseas visits, visiting 44 countries;

the Minister for Overseas Development made 21 visits, visiting 26 countries; the Minister of State, the right hon. Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley), made 12 overseas visits, visiting 28 countries; the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Boothferry (Mr. Davis), made 29 overseas visits, visiting 17 countries; the Under-Secretary, the hon. Member for Woodspring (Dr. Fox), made four overseas visits, visiting seven countries; and I made 18 overseas visits, visiting 18 countries.

Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will support within the intergovernmental conference the presidency's proposal for a new article 3d in respect of environmental protection and sustainable development. [9404]

Mr. David Davis: The Government support the objectives of environmental protection and sustainable development. There is already a treaty basis for EC environmental action. The Government are considering how this might be developed without extending Community competence or majority voting.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will support the Irish proposal to strengthen the nuclear safety provisions of the Euratom treaty at the intergovernmental conference. [9406]

Mr. Davis: No. The proposal can be more appropriately dealt with in the context of wider international agreements in the nuclear area.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what environmental proposals the United Kingdom Government plan to put forward at the intergovernmental conference. [9408]

Mr. Davis: The Government are still considering what, if any, environmental proposals to put to the intergovernmental conference.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will support within the intergovernmental conference the proposal that the Committee of the Regions should be allowed to bring actions before the Court of Justice for the purpose of protecting its own prerogatives. [9402]

Mr. Davis: The Committee of the Regions has a valuable role to play, but the Government do not agree that giving an advisory body of this kind direct access to the European Court of Justice would be appropriate.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the environmental issues in respect of which the United Kingdom Government will be supporting an extension of qualified majority voting at the intergovernmental conference. [9405]

Mr. Davis: None. As explained in the "Partnership of Nations" White Paper, at a time when there is serious public concern about the centralisation of decision making, the case has not been made for making it easier to override the objections of member states in matters of particular sensitivity. The Government therefore oppose the further extension of qualified majority voting.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the Danish proposals of 6 September to the intergovernmental conference concerning the environment. [9407]

Mr. Davis: The Government support effective environmental action at the European level which takes full account of the principle of subsidiarity. The Government do not, however, support the Danish suggestion that qualified majority voting should be used for decisions on environmental taxes.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will support within the intergovernmental conference the proposal to amend article 3b in respect of the application of the principle of subsidiarity to regional and local levels. [9409]

Mr. Davis: No. As Heads of Government agreed in 1992 at the Birmingham European Council,

"It is for each Member State to decide how its powers should be exercised domestically".

Staff

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list for his Department (a) how many people in total are employed, (b) how many of the total number of staff are (i) male and (ii) female and (c) how many (I) men and (II) women are employed on a (1) full-time and (2) part-time basis. [9488]

Mr. Hanley: As of 1 April 1996, the Department was employing the following:

	Number
Total employees	7,200
Male	4,571
Female	2,629
Male full time	4,545
Female full time	2,483
Male part time	26
Female part time	146

These figures are for permanent staff only.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) permanent and (b) non-permanent staff there have been in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies of his Department in each year since 1992. [9625]

Mr. Hanley: The answer is as follows:

	FCO (DIP.WING + ODA)	Wilton Park (agency) (since 1991)	Natural Resources Institute (agency)
1996
Permanent	6,863	30	307

EU Committee of the Regions

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will support an extension of the list of areas about which the EU Committee of the Regions should be consulted. [9403]

Mr. David Davis: The Committee of the Regions is already consulted on a wide range of issues and is able to produce opinions on its own initiative on any other matters it considers appropriate. The Government do not believe that there is a need to expand its present role.

Legislation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many items of legislation relating to his Department have been repealed since January 1994; how many statutory instruments were introduced during the same period; and how many of the latter were (a) deregulatory and (b) fee orders. [9361]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor [holding answer 17 December 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given yesterday by my hon. Friend the Paymaster General, Official Report, column 492.

European Council (Business)

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the forthcoming business in the Council of the European Union for January; and if he will list the major EU events for the next six months. [9865]

Mr. David Davis:

Monthly Forecast of Business for January 1997

Information Technology (Euro)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what tenders his Department has put out to convert its information technology systems to be euro compliant; what are the cost and person hours required to convert the systems to handle the euro; and when he expects his Department's systems to be fully economic and monetary union compliant. [9463]

Mr. Boswell: The Department and its agencies will assess the impact which a single currency, assumed to be starting on 1 January 1999, would have on their information systems, whether or not the United Kingdom decides to participate in the third stage of economic and monetary union. Where possible, such assessment will be made when preparing information technology systems for the change of millennium.

Baby Milk (Labelling)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy on the labelling of baby milks with particular reference to the health risks of bottle feeding. [9736]

Mrs. Browning: The labelling of baby milks is controlled by the general requirements of the Food Labelling Regulations 1996 and more specifically by controls in the Infant Formula and Follow-on Formula Regulations 1995. The latter require that infant formula is labelled with a statement concerning the superiority of breast feeding, a statement recommending that the product should be used only on the advice of a health care professional, instructions for appropriate preparation and a statement warning against the hazards of inappropriate preparation.

The Government have at present no plans to change these requirements.

Organic Farming

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what new proposals he has to increase the acreage devoted to organic farming. [9705]

Mr. Boswell: The Government have introduced organic aid schemes throughout the United Kingdom to provide financial help to those converting to organic production. These will be kept under review. Last June, I was pleased to launch the organic conversion information service in England. The service offers a telephone "Helpline" and free advisory visits to farmers and has generated considerable interest; we hope that this will encourage more farmers to convert to organic production. Similar services are available in the rest of the United Kingdom.

Food Safety and Hygiene Prosecutions

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many successful prosecutions have been brought since 1990 for infringements of the food safety and food hygiene regulations. [9709]

Mr. Boswell: According to the statistical returns made to the Department by local authorities, the number of establishments convicted each year is as follows:

1991: 1,267
1992: 1,760
1993: 1,278
1994: 913
1995: 572.

No data are available for 1990.

Sheep Scab

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the outcome of public consultation on control of sheep scab. [10457]

Mrs. Browning: I am pleased to say there was a positive reaction to the Government's proposals for new legislation to help farmers control the spread of sheep scab, which were issued for consultation in December 1995.

Following comments, our original proposal making it a criminal offence to sell affected animals will be replaced with one to cover the movement of affected animals, except to slaughter. In addition, we propose to make the provisions to deal with sheep scab on commons more flexible. We will proceed with our plans to make failure to treat affected sheep a criminal offence.

We will now circulate our updated proposals, and invite further comments on the draft regulations which we are currently preparing. We expect the new legislation to come into effect in late spring or early summer 1997.

EU Agriculture Council

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 16 and 17 December. [10458]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I represented the United Kingdom at the Agriculture Council in Brussels on 17 December, accompanied by my noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State, Scottish Office. My permanent secretary represented the United Kingdom on 16 December.

I reported to the Agriculture Council the decision of the Government, which I had announced to this House on 16 December, to proceed with the selective cull of cattle at most risk of BSE. I also informed the Council of our progress in implementing the other conditions laid down in the Florence agreement and our intention to submit proposals for a certified herds scheme to the Commission early in the new year.

The Council reached agreement by qualified majority on a Commission proposal, brought forward at UK instigation, to amend the directive laying down minimum standards for the protection of calves. In the modified terms agreed by the Council, the amended directive will bring in significantly improved conditions for the housing of calves. Calves up to eight weeks old will have to be given enough space to turn round, and calves over eight weeks old will have to be housed in groups, with more space allowed as they grow in size. In addition, the Commission undertook to set rules requiring the inclusion of a minimum of iron in calves' diet, and fibre for all calves over two weeks old. As to timing, the Council agreed that all new calf housing must conform with the revised rules with effect from January 1998, and that existing installations must meet the new rules by 31 December 2006. On the latter, I argued for a shorter transition period but received no support. This agreement will lead to significant improvements in the way veal calves are treated throughout the European Union. The proposals on which Italy voted against, and Spain abstained, will be formally adopted early in the new year.

The Council reached agreement on a number of other veterinary and plant health measures, including the conclusion by qualified majority—Finland voting against—of a veterinary agreement on trade between the European Union and New Zealand in live animals and animal products. The Council considered, but failed to agree on, a proposal banning the use of specified risk materials in the manufacture of animal feed and food stuffs. The Commission undertook to consider making further proposals in this area in the light of advice from the EU Scientific Veterinary Committee.

The United Kingdom welcomed the Commission's announcement of early proposals on the welfare of animals in transport, specifically in respect of staging points for animal journeys. The United Kingdom opposed proposals to modify the arable area payments scheme in ways which would have weakened the penalties falling on arable producers for excess production. In the beef sector, the Council held a wide-ranging discussion of the operation of the beef early marketing scheme and the calf processing scheme. The United Kingdom pressed the Commission to review the rates of aid payable under the latter so as to prevent undesirable distortion of the market.

Rendering Industry

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will decide on the final arrangements for financial support for the rendering industry in 1996–97. [10459]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I announced in April that the Government would be providing temporary financial support to the rendering industry of up to £118 million this financial year. Since then, we have made payments of about £59 million on account pending final decisions on the form of this support. We have met our objective of ensuring through this support that the essential links in the meat supply chain are maintained.

I am now pleased to announce that the Government have finalised support arrangements for 1996–97. These take the form of a non-statutory scheme and follow detailed consultation with representatives of the rendering industry. I am placing in the Library of the House copies of the scheme and the agreement which companies receiving support will have to sign.

As with the payments on account support will be based on renderers' loss of income by comparison with 1995–96. However, support will be adjusted to take broad account of renderers' actual levels of throughput and costs this year. We have ensured in particular that the rendering industry does not receive support under this scheme in respect of material being processed under the over-30-month scheme. In devising the detailed arrangements we have sought to strike a fair balance between the interests of renderers' and the taxpayer and between different renderers.

Any differences between payments on account and entitlement under the scheme will be made up through adjustments to payments under the scheme. Depending on the level of sales income and throughput in the remainder of the year the final scheme is expected to cost the taxpayer in the region of £100 million to £110 million.

As a condition of receiving support rendering companies will continue to be required to maintain their prices and charges to their suppliers at the levels applying before 20 March 1996.

In order to assist them in devising support arrangements for the rendering industry, the Government engaged the services of Coopers and Lybrand. Its report to the Government on the rendering industry is being published and copies are being placed in the Library of the House.

We have announced that up to a further £59 million support to the disposal chain will be available in 1997–98, as slaughterers and renderers adjust to the changed value of animal by-products. We are now opening discussions with the industries about what form this support should take.

Intervention Board

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to publish the corporate plan 1996–97 to 2000-01 for the Intervention Board executive agency. [10455]

Mr. Baldry: I am pleased to advise that the corporate plan 1996 to 2000-01 has been published and copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Common Fisheries Policy Review Group

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the Government will respond to the report of the common fisheries policy review group. [10456]

Mr. Baldry: The Government have carried out consultations on the report issued by the common fisheries policy review group in July. The results of the consultation have been taken into account in preparing the Government response, which is being placed in the Library today.

I am very grateful to the members of the group for all the work they put into preparing a thorough and wide-ranging document.

The group's overall conclusion was that the common fisheries policy has failings but that UK withdrawal would not address the fundamental problems facing the fishing industry. Where changes are needed, the CFP should therefore be improved from within. The Government agree with this approach as representing the only practicable way forward.

Forty specific recommendations are included in the group's report. The Government's response covers each of these in turn.

Information Technology (Euro)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what tenders his Department has put out to convert its information technology systems to be euro compliant; what are the cost and person hours required to convert the systems to handle the euro; and when he expects his Department's systems to be fully economic and monetary union compliant. [9459]

Mr. Hanley: None. This Department's information systems already handle transactions in many currencies. Whether or not the United Kingdom participates in the third stage of EMU, we will modify them accordingly, within the appropriate time frame. The costs cannot yet be determined.

Bahrain

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will offer a financial contribution to the United Nations working group on arbitrary detentions to enable it to visit Bahrain to undertake investigations. [9734]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The working group on arbitrary detention has not requested a visit to Bahrain, but if such a request were made, we would expect it to be financed from within the working group's existing resources.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Government of Bahrain concerning human rights; and if he will make a statement. [9713]

Mr. Jeremy Hanley: The Government deplore all abuses of human rights, wherever they take place. We have discussed human rights issues with the Government of Bahrain at ministerial and official levels on numerous occasions. During my visit to Bahrain in June 1996, I discussed human rights with the Amir, the Prime Minister and the Ministers of the Interior and Foreign Affairs.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government will make representations to the Government of Bahrain on the need to bring the Bahrain legal code into line with international judicial norms, with special reference to adding the right to appeal against death sentences. [9717]

Mr. Hanley: The Government of Bahrain are aware of our concern that, in accordance with international standards, those facing the death penalty should be guaranteed protection of certain rights, including the right of appeal to a court of higher jurisdiction. This is separate from any plea for clemency to the Amir which defendants may make.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Government of Bahrain concerning the detention of women and children and the need to observe the UN convention on the rights of children. [9716]

Mr. Hanley: I refer to my previous answer. Such discussions on human rights cover men, women and children.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Government of Bahrain regarding the death sentences passed by the Bahrain state security court on Ali Ahmad Abed Al-Usfur, Yusif Hussein Abd Al-Baqi and Ahmad Khalil Ibrahim Al-Katiab. [9718]

Mr. Hanley: Ali Ahmad Abed Al-Usfur, Yusif Hussein Abd Al-Baqi and Ahmad Khalil Ibrahim Al-Katiab have been convicted of burning to death seven Bangladeshi nationals. Provided international standards are complied with, the decision whether to maintain and implement the death penalty is a matter for each state. I refer the hon. Member to my previous reply.

Caribbean Dependent Territories

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has for the future constitutional relationship between Her Majesty's Government and the five remaining Caribbean dependent territories; and if he will make a statement. [10297]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: In the light of recent experience, the Government have examined actual or potential problems in the five Caribbean dependent territories. Considerable improvements are being made in the administration of the territories and their good government. However, it has become clear that some extension of those powers which may be exercised by Her Majesty's Government may be needed. We will take this into account in our continuing discussions with each of the five Governments concerned and make any changes if and when necessary. We attach importance to our continuing friendship and close co-operation with the territories in the interests of their well-being and future prosperity.

Afghanistan

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the recent adoption by the European Union of a common position on the supply of arms to Afghanistan. [10338]

Dr. Liam Fox: On 17 December, following a British initiative in support of the UN's efforts to resolve the conflict in Afghanistan, the EU adopted a common position concerning the imposition of an embargo on arms, munitions and military equipment on Afghanistan. The embargo covers contracts entered into prior to the adoption of the embargo. The EU will also make efforts to encourage other countries to adopt a similar policy of restraint. In accordance with the EU embargo, Her Majesty's Government will not normally issue a licence for the export of any item listed in part III of schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, as amended—military, security and para-military goods and arms, ammunition and related material—often described as the military list, We will continue to consider on a case-by-case basis all export licence applications. From time to time, the contents of the military list may change, for example, to reflect technological advances or continuing international efforts to counter the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction.

SCOTLAND

Budget Balance

14. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of Scotland's budget balance over the planning period. [8145]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None.

Health Board Finance

19. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairmen of the health boards in Scotland to discuss finance; and if he will make a statement. [8150]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend and I meet chairmen of health boards regularly to discuss matters of current interest, including finance.

Higher Education

20. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children gained entrance to higher education courses in (a) the current year, (b) 1987 and (c) 1979; and if he will make a statement. [8151]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The number of young Scots entering higher education has more than doubled since 1979. The age participation index, a measure of the number of under-21-year-old entrants as a proportion of the 17-year-old population, stood at 17.8 per cent in 1980–81, 20.5 per cent. in 1987–88 and 42.7 per cent. in 1994–95. Figures for later years are not yet available.

Ministerial Visit (Hawick)

21. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make an official visit to Hawick to discuss the economic and social regeneration of the town; and if he will make a statement. [8152]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has no plans at present to make such a visit.

Acute Hospitals (Glasgow)

24. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what additional resources he plans to make available to Greater Glasgow health board to meet the demands faced by acute hospitals during the winter period. [8155]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend announced on 9 December that an extra £15 million is being distributed to health boards this year in part to help reduce pressures likely to arise over the winter. Of this total, Greater Glasgow health board will receive £2,863,000.

Minister for Glasgow

25. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will appoint a Minister for Glasgow with responsibilities for regeneration policies. [8156]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: I am responsible to my right hon. Friend for regeneration policies in Scotland.

Bellwin Scheme

26. Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government with respect to triggering of the Bellwin scheme for exceptional weather conditions in the borders region during the winter of 1995–96; and if payments will be forthcoming from the scheme relating to the claims submitted by Scottish Borders council. [8157]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Bellwin scheme was triggered for severe weather during December 1995 and January 1996 on 4 August. Claims from councils throughout Scotland, including those submitted by the Scottish Borders council on behalf of the former councils, are currently being assessed for eligibility under the scheme and, where appropriate, payments under the scheme will be made as soon as possible.

Local Government Finance

28. Mrs. Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss local government finance. [8160]

Mr. Kynoch: On 17 January.

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will announce the 1997–98 grant-aided expenditure figures for each Scottish local authority. [10454]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The 1997–98 grant-aided expenditure figure for each local authority is set out in the table. Each authority's allocation of the GAE total has been determined having regard to the client group methodology which is agreed with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities in the distribution committee of the working party on local government finance. The allocation also takes account of the phasing out of the self-financed transitional mismatch scheme which COSLA proposed and I agreed to last year in the light of local government reorganisation.

The table excludes figures for the urban programme GAE which is not allocated to individual authorities. The addition of this amount—£56,894 million—brings the GAE total to the sum of £5,421 million which I announced on 26 November.

In addition to each authority's 1997–98 GAE, the table shows the change as compared with the 1996–97 assessment in both cash and percentage terms after adjusting for the phasing out of local government reorganisation costs and the transfer of responsibility for funding nursery education—and also relative 1997–98 GAEs per head of population.

Forestry Commission Exports

29. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of state for Scotland what is the value of Forestry Commission exports; and what are its principal markets. [8161]

Mr. Kynoch: The Forestry Commission is not currently exporting any timber. It is the principal supplier to an expanding and world-competitive domestic wood processing industry.

Energy Efficiency

30. Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what initiatives his Department has taken this year to promote energy efficiency in housing in Scotland. [8162]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Home Energy Conservation Act 1995 and the Energy Conservation Act 1996 were brought into effect in Scotland on 1 December 1996. Guidance on the legislation has been issued to all local authorities. In addition, the Scottish Office has published research reports on energy conservation and planning and the evaluation of energy efficiency initiatives.

Economic Co-operation (Northern Ireland)

31. Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of state for Scotland if he will make a statement on the prospects for closer economic o-operation between Scotland and Northern Ireland. [8163]

Mr. Kynoch: There are no specific measures to encourage economic co-operation between the constituent parts of the United Kingdom. Businesses in all parts of the United Kingdom will continue to prosper as a result of the success of the Government's economic policies.

Electricity Interconnector

32. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Scottish Trades Union Congress to discuss the impact of his decision on the proposed overland electricity transmission line in Ayrshire which forms part of the Northern Ireland–Scotland interconnector. [8164]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has had no request for a meeting from STUC on this matter.

Social Work

33. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the financing of social work in Scotland. [8165]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The provision and financing of most social work is for local authorities to determine. Local authorities will have £1,010 million in grant-aided expenditure in 1997–98 for social work. This compares with £950 million in 1996–97 and £658 million in 1992–93.

Government Expenditure and Tax Revenues

34. Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the central estimate of the extent by which total government expenditure in Scotland exceeded tax revenues raised in Scotland in 1994–95. [8166]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Excluding North sea revenues and privatisation proceeds, in 1994–5 Government expenditure in Scotland was estimated to be £8.2 billion higher than tax revenues raised in Scotland.

Structural Budget Deficit

35. Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received on the extent to which Scotland has a structural budget deficit in the Government finances. [8167]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have received very few representations.

Trunk Road Improvements

36. Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has for trunk road improvements in the next three years for Dumfries and Galloway. [8168]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In addition to the final phase of the upgrading of the A74 to motorway standard, we will undertake a major project on the A75 at the Glen. A route action plan will be carried out on the A75 to identify and prepare a programme of further improvements along the route. On the A77, traffic management and calming measures are currently being prepared for Maybole, Kirkoswald, Lendalfoot, Ballantrae and Stranraer. On the A76, a variety of schemes to improve visibility, junctions and access will be carried out over the next three years, including further improvements at Enterkinfoot, and traffic-calming measures in Thornhill and Sanquhar.

Local Authority Borrowing

37. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the level of local authority borrowing in Scotland; and what is the equivalent borrowing in English local authorities. [8169]

Mr. Kynoch: At 31 March 1996, the total local authority loan debt outstanding was £9.7 billion. The comparable estimated figure for English local authorities was £37 billion.

Governance

38. Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from business regarding the future governance of Scotland. [8170]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The proposed tax-raising parliament has been denounced by the Scottish chambers of commerce, by the Institute of Directors, by the CBI Scotland and by 78 per cent. of Scotland's major companies surveyed by Scottish Business Insider magazine.

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received concerning a tax-raising Parliament for Scotland. [8158]

Mr. Forsyth: I have received many representation from throughout Scotland and England supporting the Government's commitment to the Union and expressing concern about the cost of a tartan tax-raising Scottish Parliament.

Geriatric Patients

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to increase the transfer of geriatric patients from hospitals to residential or nursing homes in the community. [8153]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is a matter of clinical judgment whether or not an elderly in-patient should be discharged to a nursing or residential care home.

Drift Netting

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to meet representatives of the fishing industry to discuss the subject of drift netting. [8154]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: I have no plans at present to meet representatives of the fishing industry to discuss this matter. As my hon. Friend is aware, there is no drift netting for salmon in Scottish waters.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research his Department has carried out to identify the reasons for changes in the number of food poisoning cases in Scotland over the last 10 years; and what the results of this research have been. [7430]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Food poisoning is caused by a number of different agents including bacteria and a wide range of research projects have been funded by the Scottish Office over the last 10 years into specific causes of food poisoning such as E. coli 0157, campylobacter and listeria.

Details of projects funded are listed in the Scottish Office Department of Health's health bulletin and Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department's programme of commissioned research and development publication. Research grant holders are encouraged to disseminate research findings as appropriate.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he collates on the number of in-patients by health board of residence on waiting lists of (a) under one year and (b) one year and over, as at 30 September in each year from 1992 to 1996. [7997]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 December 1996]: Information on the number of patients with patients charter guarantees on in-patient waiting lists at 30 September 1994 to 1996 is set out in the following table. Information prior to 1994 was not collected in the form requested.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he collates on the numbers of out-patients by health board of residence on waiting lists of (a) less than nine weeks and (b) nine weeks and over, as at 30 September in each year from 1992 to 1996. [7998]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 December 1996]: There is no centrally held list of patients waiting for out-patient appointments. Information on the number of referrals where a patient waited less than nine weeks, or nine weeks or more, from the initial referral date by health board of residence is set out in the table.

Staff

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for his department (a) how many people in total are employed, (b) how many of the total number of staff are (i) male and (ii) female and (c) how many (I) men and (II) women are employed on a (1) full-time and (2) part-time basis. [9486]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The numbers of male and female full-time and part-time staff employed in the Scottish Office and it executive agencies at 1 April 1996 are shown in the table.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) permanent and (b) non-permanent staff there have been in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies of his Department in each year since 1992. [9618]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The numbers of full-time and part-time permanent and casual staff employed each year since 1992 are shown in the tables.

Shared Parenting

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many divorce settlements have made use of the provision for shared parenting in Scotland since 1 November. [9414]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Statistics on the number of divorce settlements involving shared parenting since 1 November are not available. Courts will make no order under part I of the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 unless it is essential to do so, and what orders are made will be particular to the needs of each case. Raw data from the courts will therefore be of limited value. The Scottish Office will, however, evaluate the impact of the provisions of part I as part of a comprehensive research programme on the operation of the provisions of the whole Act.

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidelines have been produced on the use of shared parenting in divorce in Scotland in relation to the Children (Scotland) Act 1995. [9415]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No guidelines as such on the use of shared parenting on divorce in Scotland have been produced by the Scottish Office. The interpretation of part I of the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 is for the courts.

Divorce Settlements

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what mechanism he has set up to monitor the effect of the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 on divorce settlements in Scotland. [9411]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office is planning to evaluate the effect of part I of the Children (Scotland) Act 1995. I intend to announce details of a research programme on the impact of the Act on children and their families early in the new year.

Hospital Admissions (Complications)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate (a) how many people and (b) the percentage of people who have been admitted to hospital as a direct result of complications after (i) surgery and (ii) medicinal treatment in Scotland in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9641]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 17 December 1996]: The information requested is set out in the table.

Discharges of patients from Scottish hospitals with any diagnosis of (a) complications following surgery or (b) adverse effects of drugs, medicaments or biological substances 1991–95

[1] Surgical operation and other surgical procedures as the cause of abnormal reaction of patient, or of later complication, without mention of misadventure at the time of operation.

[2] Drugs, medicaments and biological substances causing adverse effects in therapeutic use. This includes the "correct drug properly administered" and excludes accidents in dosage or administration. The figures include cases where the initial treatment was not in hospital.

Electors

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of electors in each local authority area when the current electoral register was published on 16 February. [9399]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 17 December 1996]: The information is set out in the table.

Prednisolone

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people (a) have been prescribed and (b) took the steroid Prednisolone in Scotland in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9640]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 17 December 1996]: This information is not available in the form requested. It is not possible to identify the number of people who were prescribed or took Prednisolone. Data collected cover the number of prescription items dispensed in Scotland.

Non-custodial Penalties

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the introduction of stronger non-custodial penalties for convicted offenders. [8136]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Crime and Punishment (Scotland) Bill introduces electronic tagging so that hooligans can be confined to their homes, or within a very restricted area, and disqualification from driving will be available for all offences.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the names of those who have been appointed to serve on the Criminal Cases Review Commission, indicating those from Northern Ireland. [8707]

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given today by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department, in response to a question from my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton (Sir I. Lawrence).

The member of the commission with knowledge and experience of the Northern Ireland criminal justice system is Mr. John Leckey, coroner for Belfast since 1992.

Vocational Qualifications

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the percentage change in the number of vocational qualifications in Northern Ireland between 1993–94 and 1994–95. [8713]

Mr. Ancram: Between 1993–94 and 1994–95, there was a decline of 15 per cent. in the number of all types of vocational awards—national vocational qualifications and general national vocational qualifications—made by the main awarding bodies to candidates in Northern Ireland.

As regards GNVQs only, however, there was an increase in the number of students in schools and colleges in Northern Ireland gaining full qualifications. The percentage increases from 1993–94 to 1994–95 were as follows:

Foundation level: 200

Intermediate level: 28

Advanced level: 316.

Royal Ulster Constabulary (Equal Opportunities)

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will ensure that the RUC includes sexual orientation within the scope of its equal opportunities policy. [8914]

Sir John Wheeler: There is currently a working party within the RUC considering the concept of sexual orientation and its implications for the force, in terms both of service delivery and human resource management.

Dundonald Training Centre

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the annual saving from the closure of Dundonald training centre; how many staff are employed at the centre; how many persons were trained in the centre in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [9276]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 18 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Training & Employment Agency (T&EA), to reply to your question about the proposed closure of Dundonald Training Centre.

The closure of Dundonald Training Centre will result in estimated programme expenditure savings of £1.2 million in a full financial year. This saving will be offset by the cost of providing Jobskills training for young people at other training organisations which will be in the region of £500,000 per year.

At present, 40 staff are employed at Dundonald Training Centre. We will seek to avoid compulsory redundancies through re-deployment to other Agency Training Centres, voluntary premature retirement and natural wastage.

In each of the past three years the number of people who enrolled for training at Dundonald Training Centre was as follows:

Year	Numbers of trainees
1996–97	[1]328
1995–96	327
1994–95	304

[1] At 13 December 1996.

The Agency will ensure that all trainees currently at Dundonald Training Centre are allowed to complete their agreed period of training at the Centre. Following the closure of the Centre, trainees who, in accordance with their training programme, are placed with employers for their further training will be supervised by staff from other parts of the Agency's Training Centre network.

I hope you find this information useful.

Official Ministerial Visits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for each of the Ministers in his Department how many official ministerial visits they have undertaken since 1 January ; and how many of these have been abroad. [9384]

Sir John Wheeler: Ministers have spent the following numbers of days out of the office, each of which may have involved more than one visit:

	Ministerial visits (days)	Visits abroad (days)
Sir P. Mayhew	45	5
Mr. M. Ancram	50	9
Sir J. Wheeler	55	9
Baroness Denton	156	43
Mr. M. Moss	101	4

Prednisolone

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have (a) become crippled and (b) died from taking the steroid Prednisolone in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9603]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 17 December 1996]:

(a) The information requested is not available;

(b) There have been no deaths recorded in Northern Ireland from the use of the steroid Prednisolone during the last five years 1991 to 1995.

Staff

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for his Department (a) how many people in total are employed, (b) how many of the total number of staff are (i) male and (ii) female and (c) how many (I) men and (II) women are employed on a (1) full-time and (2) part-time basis. [9510]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is as follows:

	Number
(a) Total number of staff	27,264
(b)(i) Total number of male staff	14,816
(b)(ii) Total number of female staff	12,448
(c)(I)(1) Full-time male staff	14,744
(c)(I)(2) Part-time male staff	72
(c)(II)(1) Full-time female staff	10,414
(c)(II)(2) Part-time female staff	2,034

Notes

1. These figures show the position as at 29 October 1996.
2. Part-time and job-sharing staff count as full units.
3. Figures include information on the Northern Ireland Office, the six Departments of the Northern Ireland Civil Service (NICS) and staff in the Police Authority for Northern Ireland (PANI) who are civil servants on secondment from the NICS.
4. Casual staff are not included.
5. Except for NICS staff seconded to PANI, staff currently on secondment outside the NICS are not included. The numbers involved, however, are small.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) permanent and (b) non-permanent staff there have been in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies of his Department in each year since 1992. [9622]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is to be found in the following table:

	NI Departments and NIO		Executive agencies
		Non-permanent		Non-permanent
	Permanent	(casuals)	Permanent	(casuals)
1996	26,084	2,068	15,656	1,513
1995	26,504	1,531	8,646	890
1994	27,605	1,056	8,437	1,089
1993	28,926	968	8,785	461
1992	28,802	1,144	7,736

1. The figures show the position at 1 October in each year.
2. The figures in (i) include the figures in (ii).
3. In (i), part-timers and job sharers count as half units. In (ii), part-timers and job sharers are counted as either half units or whole units, depending upon the source. Figures will differ depending upon the method of calculation.
4. Disaggregated figures for staff in executive agencies in 1992 are not available.
5. The figures include staff in the Northern Ireland Office and the six departments of the Northern Ireland civil service. Also included are staff on secondment from NICS to the Police Authority for Northern Ireland.
6. Except for NICS staff seconded to PANI, staff on secondment outside the NICS are not included. The numbers, however, are small.

Royal Ulster Constabulary (Suicides)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) RUC personnel and (b) RUC reservists have committed suicide in the last 25 years; and how many used legally held weapons. [9578]

Sir John Wheeler: During the period 1970 to 1996, 39 regular RUC officers and 16 full-time reserves committed suicide. A personal protection firearm was used as a means of committing suicide in 47 cases.

Civil Disturbances (Housing Vacated)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many houses have been vacated as a result of civil disturbances this year; how many Housing Executive dwellings so vacated are still empty; and if he will make a statement. [9579]

Mr. Moss: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and its chief executive has advised me that information on vacant houses is not desegregated down to the level of reasons for vacancies. The number vacated due to civil disturbances is, therefore, not available. The chief executive has also advised me that approximately 100 Housing Executive dwellings are still vacant, as a result of civil disturbances.

Information Technology (Euro)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what tenders his Department as put out to convert its information technology systems to be euro-compliant; what are the cost and person hours required to convert the systems to handle the euro; and when he expects his Department's systems to be fully economic and monetary union compliant. [9457]

Sir John Wheeler: My Department and agencies will need to assess the impact which a single currency, assumed to be starting on 1 January 1999, would have on their information systems whether or not the United Kingdom decides to participate in the third stage of economic and monetary union.

Death Certificates

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy (i) to revise death certificate forms to include a space for national insurance number and (ii) for dates of death to be entered on birth certificates. [9615]

Sir John Wheeler: There are no plans to revise death and birth certificates in the manner described. Provision currently exists for information on deaths to be provided by the general register office to the Department of Social Security for the purpose of recording national insurance numbers. The inclusion of date of death on a birth certificate would be inconsistent with the statutory position of a birth certificate as an official extract of an original entry in the register book.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

The House Party (Board Game)

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Attorney-General what assessment his Department has made of the new board game The House Party; and what consideration it has given to prosecuting the manufacturers, distributors and financiers for incitement to experiment with illegal drugs and of minors to participate in homosexual acts. [9868]

The Attorney-General: I understand that the hon. Member is asking the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis to investigate whether the distribution of the board game to which he refers discloses any criminal offence. It will be open to the police to request legal advice from the Crown Prosecution Service during the course of their inquiries. The question of prosecution cannot be considered until there has been a criminal investigation.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Relaunch Strategy

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the planned expenditure on the relaunch strategy in each of the next three years; and how many partnership projects run by local consortiums this will support. [8842]

Mr. Paice: The relaunch strategy will concentrate all relevant funding on tackling disaffection among young people. That includes mainstream education and training budgets, which have been increased over future years: the Government have allocated an extra £128 million over the next three years for work-based training for young people delivered by training and enterprise councils and further education funding has been increased by £40 million next year.

Partnership projects will make an important contribution to the formulation of the relaunch strategy and the Government are setting aside £10 million over the next three years to support them. Bids will be invited from local consortiums in spring 1997.

The number and pattern of projects to be funded will depend on the nature of the bids received but the aim is to support at least one in each of the 10 Government regions.

Construction Industry

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received about the impact of the Budget on job levels in the construction industry. [9441]

Mr. Forth: None.

Learning Difficulties

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to ensure that newly qualified teachers are able to identify and give appropriate teaching to children at risk of (i) specific learning difficulties and (ii) dyslexia. [9497]

Mr. Forth: There will be wide consultation on revised requirements for initial teacher training in the new year.

The existing criteria for courses of initial teacher training require that newly qualified teachers should have acquired the necessary foundation to develop the ability to identify and provide for special educational needs and specific learning difficulties.

Staff

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for her Department (a) how many people in total are employed, (b) how many of the total number of staff are (i) male and (ii) female and (c) how many (I) men and (II) women are employed on a (1) full-time and (2) part-time basis. [9494]

Mr. Robin Squire: There are 5,022 people employed in the Department, including those employed in Government Offices. The numbers of male and female staff working full-time or part-time hours are shown in the table.

	Number
Men
Full-time	2,310
Part-time	36
Total	2,346
Women
Full-time	2,232
Part-time	444
Total	2,676

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) permanent and (b) non-permanent staff there have been in (i) her Department and (ii) executive agencies of her Department in each year since 1992. [9629]

Mr. Squire: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 25 November 1996, Official Report, column 15.

Training Schemes

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people after leaving the (1) action credit, (2) adult employment subsidy, (3) access to information technology, (4) adult training strategy, (5) business enterprise programme, (6) business enterprise training, (7) business growth training, (8) business start-up scheme, (9) back to work bonus, (10) community action, (11) career development loans, (12) compacts/education business partnerships/education initiatives/careers service partnerships, (13) community enterprise programme, (14) careers guidance review implementation, (15) community industry, (16) community programme, (17) careers service, (18) careers service strengthening, (19) direct training service, (20) employment action, (21) enterprise allowance scheme, (22) enterprise awareness in teacher education, (23) enterprise in higher education and (24) employer investment in people scheme, (a) went into employment and (b) went on to further schemes and became unemployed; how many started and how many finished each scheme, including those who left before completion of the scheme, in each year of each scheme's operation and what type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, for each year of the scheme's operation up to the latest available year for which data are available. [8630]

Mr. Paice: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people after attending (1) training and enterprise council—TEC—schemes, (2) TEC challenge schemes, (3) temporary employment subsidy, (4) training and education support, (5) training for enterprise, (6) training for work, (7) the travel to interview scheme, (8) the training opportunities programme, (9) the temporary short-time working compensation scheme, (10) the technical and vocational education initiative, (11) the voluntary projects programme, (12) the working experience programme, (13) workstart pilots, (14) the wider opportunities training programme, (15) work trial, (16) work wise, (17) the youth enterprise initiative, (18) the youth employment service, (19) youth employment subsidy, (20) the youth opportunities programme, (21) youth credits, (22) modern apprenticeships and accelerated modern apprenticeships, (23) the youth training scheme and (24) the young workers scheme, (a) went into employment and (b) went on to further schemes including those who left before completion of the scheme, in each year of each scheme's operation; and what type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, for each year of the scheme's operation up to the latest available year for which data are available. [9131]

Mr. Paice: The information requested can be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Information Technology (Euro)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what tenders her Department has put out to convert its information technology systems to be euro compliant; what are the cost and person hours required to convert the systems to handle the euro; and when she expects her Department's systems to be fully economic and monetary union compliant. [9461]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department and agencies will need to assess the impact which a single currency, assumed to be starting on 1 January 1999, would have on their information systems, whether or not the United Kingdom decides to participate in the third stage of economic and monetary union.

Career Development Loans (Fraud)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what police investigations are presently being conducted into cases of fraud concerning the granting of career development loans; what sums of money are involved; and if she will make a statement. [9706]

Mr. Paice: The police have been asked to investigate eight individual applications for career development loans which are suspected of being fraudulent. The total amount loaned by the banks on these eight cases is £103,204.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will introduce new safeguards to protect the career development loan scheme from fraudulent applications. [9707]

Mr. Paice: The career development loan scheme has stringent and effective fraud prevention measures built in. Currently, I have no plans to add to them.

Student Grants

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many and what percentage of students in full-time higher education (a) received full maintenance grants and (b) received no maintenance grants at the latest date for which figures are available. [9749]

Mr. Forth: The Department has figures available for holders of mandatory awards only. In the academic year 1994–95, of 761,000 mandatory award holders, excluding placement year sandwich students, 344,300—45 per cent.—received full maintenance grants and 175,400—23 per cent.—received a nil maintenance grant.

European Union Programmes

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what European Union programmes are covered in the Europes adjustments to her Department's budget; what is the total amount involved in such adjustments; how that total is distributed between the Department's programmes; and how the individual programme adjustments are calculated for both 1996–97 and 1997–98. [9708]

Mr. Paice: Europes adjustments are made to the Department's budget in respect of European Union programmes in which the Department has a policy interest. These programmes are listed.

Total adjustments made to departmental budgets in 1996 were £53 million, £3 million and £4 million for 1997–98, 1998–99 and 1999–2000 respectively. Reductions are distributed between departmental programmes broadly in proportion to their shares of the Department's total programme budget, taking into account specific circumstances which apply to particular programmes. This method was followed by the former Department for Education and the former Employment Department in 1996–97, and by the Department for Education and Employment in 1997–98.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Utilities (Transport Schemes)

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultations his Department has had concerning the regulations making utilities liable for 18 per cent. of the costs of diversionary works for major transport schemes. [9294]

Mr. Page: My Department has been in discussions with the Department of Transport, which has the main responsibility for the regulations in question, and these continue. Consultations have also taken place with the national joint utilities group.

Information Technology (Euro)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what tenders his Department has put out to convert its information technology systems to be euro compliant; what are the cost and person hours required to convert the systems to handle the euro; and when he expects his Department's systems to be fully economic and monetary union compliant. [9454]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My Department and agencies will need to assess the impact a single currency, assumed to be starting on 1 January 1999, would have on their information systems irrespective of whether the United Kingdom decides to participate in the third stage of economic and monetary union. The Department's finance and pay systems have been outsourced, and changes to them will be the responsibility of the service providers. Other systems for the most part use commercial packages, and vendors can be expected to offer appropriate enhancements when market requirements become clear.

Firearms

Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many applications he has received for export licences in respect of weapons which will be prohibited under the Firearms (Amendment) Bill; and if he will make a statement. [8017]

Mr. Nelson: Firearms covered by the provisions of the Firearms (Amendment) Bill are included in headings ML1 and PL5018 of the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994. To disaggregate licences including firearms covered by the Bill from other export licences issued under these headings could be undertaken only at disproportionate cost. I can say, however, that 303 export licences rated under those headings were issued between 1 November and 6 December. Coincidentally, a further 303 export licence applications rated under those headings were under consideration at close of business on 6 December. There were no new open individual export licences covering such goods issued during the period. However, six dealer-to-dealer licences, valid for a period of three years, were issued to registered firearms dealers enabling them to trade with counterparts in EU countries.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those categories of weapon which will be prohibited under the Firearms (Amendment) Bill which (a) may and (b) may not be exported without a licence. [8018]

Mr. Nelson: All categories of weapons covered by the Firearms (Amendment) Bill are controlled under the Export of Goods (Control) Order and may not be exported without a valid export licence.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many licences have been granted for the export of firearms since the Firearms (Amendment) Bill was published; how many licence applications are currently under consideration; and what is his policy in respect of issuing such export licences. [5583]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 25 November 1996]: Firearms covered by the provisions of the Firearms (Amendment) Bill are included in headings ML1 and PL5018 of the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994; 303 export licences rated under those headings were issued between 1 November and 6 December. Coincidentally, a further 303 export licence applications rated under those headings were under consideration at close of business on 6 December. There were no new open individual export licences covering such goods issued during the period. However, six dealer-to-dealer licences, valid for a period of three years, were issued to registered firearms dealers enabling them to trade with counterparts in EU countries.

Firearms and most military equipment require an export licence before export, and all applications for such licences are considered case by case. Careful consideration is given to the political and military implications of allowing individual consignments overseas. The Government pay particular attention to proposed exports of military goods to countries with poor human rights record, where such goods might be used for internal repression, and to countries or regions where the export of arms might contribute to destabilisation of the area. In all, eight strict criteria for allowing arms sales were agreed by Ministers at Luxembourg and Lisbon European Councils in June 1991 and June 1992.

Defence Exports (Bahrain)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list all export licences that have been (a) granted and (b) refused for defence-related equipment bound for Bahrain. [9735]

Mr. Page: My ministerial colleagues and I meet the chairman of British Coal as necessary to discuss a range of issues. Officials in my Department remain in close touch with British Coal about the sale of British Coal Enterprise, which is a matter for British Coal.

Telephones

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his policy on households' access to a telephone for access to emergency services; and if he will make a statement. [8448]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Access to emergency services for all those on the telephone is guaranteed by licence conditions. The number of households with a telephone has risen substantially from 78 per cent. in 1984 to 92.4 per cent. in 1995–96. Conditions in licences authorising the provision of payphones require the provision of free access from payphones to the emergency services.

Riot Control Equipment

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what export licences have been granted for the export of (a) water cannons and (b) electro-shock batons to Indonesia in the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [2482]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 6 November 1996]: Since 1991, when computerised records became readily available in respect of Indonesia, four individual export licences have been issued for water cannons. In addition to the export licence that was referred to in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Waterson) on 9 December 1996, Official Report, column 30, a licence for three water cannons was issued in 1994, and two further export licences, including three water cannons on each licence, were issued in 1995. In the same period, no individual export licences were issued in respect of electro-shock batons for Indonesia. To respond in respect of the earlier five years could be undertaken only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what trans-shipment licences the Government have granted for electro-shock batons since 1990; if he will list (a) the originating and (b) the recipient countries; and if he will make a statement. [2483]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 6 November 1996]: I apologise for not yet replying to the hon. Member. I will give a substantive answer in the new year.

Delphi Packard

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the Government office for the west midlands plans to reply to the letter sent by the hon. Member for Coventry, North-East regarding an inquiry into grants made to Delphi Packard on 8 November. [8453]

Mr. Greg Knight [holding answer 10 December 1996]: I wrote to the hon. Member on Monday 16 December.

HEALTH

Consultancies

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the consultancies awarded by (a) his Department, (b) the national health service executive and (c) the executive's regional offices in the last year. [8864]

Mr. Horam: The information is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost to the national health service in 1995 of providing hospital treatment to patients suffering from food poisoning resulting from (a) salmonella, (b) campylobacter, (c) listeria, (d) E. coli 0157 and (e) other causes; and if he will make a statement. [9140]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many E. coli 0157 outbreaks there were in each year since 1990. [9437]

Mr. Horam: The information is as follows:

E. Coli 0157 outbreaks in England and Wales

Year	Number of outbreaks
1990	2
1991	5
1992	5
1993	8

[1] Provisional.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have died from food poisoning in each year since 1990; and, in each case, what was the source of the infection. [9711]

Mr. Horam: Information on the number of people who have died from food poisoning is provided in the following table:

Deaths from food poisoning for England and Wales

Year	Number of outbreaks
1990	94
1991	82
1992	118
1993	109
1994	154
1995	203

Notes:
1. The data for 1990–92 represent registrations during the year.
2. The data for 1993 onwards represent occurrences during the year.
3. The introduction of a national case definition for food poisoning in 1992 may also have had the effect of increasing the range of infectious intestinal disease reported as food poisoning.
Information on the source of the infection for each case is not available.

Official Ministerial Visits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for each of the Ministers in her Department how many official ministerial visits they have undertaken since 1 January; and how many of these have been abroad. [9379]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is shown in the table:

	Total number of visits in UK	Total number of visits abroad
Secretary of State for Health	23	nil
Minister of State for Health Mr. Malone	58	3
Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State Mr. Horam	28	nil
Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State Mr. Bowis OBE/ Mr. Burns	51	nil
Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State Baroness Cumberlege CBE	64	1

Staff

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for his Department (a) how many people in total are employed, (b) how many of the total number of staff are (i) male and (ii) female and (c) how many (I) men and (II) women are employed on a (1) full-time and (2) part-time basis. [9490]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is in the table.

1 December 1996

Total: 4,799
Male: 2,119		Female: 2,680

On 1 April 1996 the national health service regional office staff became part of the Department of Health.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) permanent and (b) non-permanent staff there have been in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies of his Department in each year since 1992. [9616]

Mr. Horam: The available information is set out in the table:

	Non-casual	Casuals[1]
1 April 1992
Total DH	4,649	159
Executive agencies	412	30
1 April 1993

[2] On 1 April 1996 some 800 national health service regional office staff became part of the Department of Health.

Peanut Allergy

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the members of the expert group he is commissioning to report on peanut allergy. [9412]

Mr. Horam: Current membership of the peanut allergy working group, a sub-group of the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment, is as follows:

Members:

Professor H. F. Woods (Chair): Royal Hallamshire Hospital, Sheffield

Professor J. O Warner: School of Medicine, Child Health, University of Southampton

Professor S. Strobel: Institute of Child Health, London

Dr. I Kimber: Zeneca Central Toxicology Laboratory, Cheshire

Professor S. T. Holgate: School of Medicine, University of Southampton

Ms V. Shaw: Dietetics Department, Great Ormond Street Hospital, London.

Professor Caines

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the value for money provided by his Department's funding of Professor Caines' post at Nottingham. [9590]

Mr. Horam: The former Trent regional health authority and, from April 1996, the Trent regional office of the national health service executive have undertaken regular reviews with the centre for health services management at the university of Nottingham to ensure value for money from their funding.

People with Learning Difficulties

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what monitoring has been conducted by or on behalf of his Department on, the implementation of the provisions of the guidance issued in 1992 to health and local authorities on the provision of residential accommodation and support for people with learning difficulties; and if he will make a statement on its effectiveness. [9498]

Mr. Burns: Implementation of the guidance is being monitored in the usual way including through the work of the social services inspectorate, and statistical returns. As envisaged in the guidance, services for people with learning disabilities are becoming increasingly responsive to individual needs. There is to be an SSI inspection of learning disability services in 1997.

Mental Health Green Paper

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish his Green Paper on mental health. [9878]

Mr. Burns: We intend to publish the Green Paper in the new year.

Domiciliary Care

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are contributing towards the cost of domiciliary care as a result of local authority means tests; and how many liability orders have been issued by local authorities on properties owned by those receiving residential care. [9348]

Mr. Burns: The information requested is not available centrally.

Partnership Insurance Legislation

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish the draft Bill on partnership insurance and long-term care. [9346]

Mr. Burns: My. right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health announced on 24 October 1996 that the Government would publish a draft Bill for consultation in the new year.

Care Service Charges

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assumptions he made about the income which social service departments would recover from charges for care services in the current year and in each of the past five years; and what estimate he has made of the number of people in receipt of such services in each year. [9347]

Mr. Burns: No such assumptions or estimates are made.

Free Eye Examinations

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost of restoring free eye examinations to all those over the age of (a) 65, (b) 60 and (c) 55 years. [9664]

Mr. Malone: Our estimates of the cost per annum are:

(a) £24 million

(b) £32 million

(c) £40 million.

Information Technology (Euro)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what tenders his Department has put out to convert its information technology systems to be euro compliant; what are the cost and person hours required to convert the systems to handle the euro; and when he expects his Department's systems to be fully economic and monetary union compliant. [9451]

Mr. Horam: The Department and its agencies will need to assess the impact which a single currency, assumed to be starting on 1 January 1999, would have on their information systems whether or not the United Kingdom decides to participate in the third stage of economic and monetary union.

Methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus Aureus

Ms Jowell: To ask the secretary of State for Health how many cases of MRSA have been recorded in England and Wales for each year since 1990. [9512]

Mr. Horam: Information on the total number of cases of infection or colonisation with methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus is not collected centrally. Information on the numbers of people affected by MRSA incidents since 1992 is set out in the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Carmarthen (Mr. Williams) on 3 December, Official Report, column 634.

Ms. Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital beds have been closed because of MRSA for each year since 1990. [9513]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not held centrally.

Political Activity

Ms. Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the political affiliation of those candidates appointed to public positions in the health service after July whose appointments fall within the guidance on declaration of political activity from the Commission for Public Appointments. [9511]

Mr. Malone: Work is currently under way on compiling the Department's second annual report of public appointments which will include information on the political activity of those appointed to serve on health bodies since April 1996.

Refugees

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total expenditure by his Department on refugee children by each local authority since April 1994 within the terms of the Children Act 1989. [9715]

Mr. Burns: The Department has established special grants for unaccompanied asylum-seeking children and children in families for 1996–97. Under the conditions of both grants, allocations and payments will be made in 1997 to individual authorities who qualify for support. In previous years the Department has not made separate financial provision to local authorities for asylum-seeking children.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings have been held with organisations representing refugees concerning the health needs of children and vulnerable adults. [9714]

Mr. Burns: Officials have held two meetings during 1996 with representatives of the Refugee Council to discuss the progress of a project which the department has funded with section 64 grants.

A third meeting was held this month to discuss the aims of a potential new bid from the Refugee Council for more section 64 money that will address the health needs of refugees.

Formaldehyde

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the carcinogenic properties of formaldehyde. [9567]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have been asked to reply.

The Health and Safety Executive on behalf of the Health and Safety Commission reviewed the health effects and occupational exposure of formaldehyde for the purpose of setting an occupational exposure limit in 1984.

In 1993, a study carried out for HSE by the Medical Research Council toxicology unit concluded that formaldehyde was not a carcinogen.

There are no on-going research projects into the carcinogenicity of formaldehyde.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the risk to human health from the inhalation of formaldehyde fumes. [9564]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have been asked to reply.

The Health and Safety Executive on behalf of the Health and Safety Commission reviewed the health effects and occupational exposure of formaldehyde in 1984. HSC'S advisory committee on toxic substances agreed that the inhalation of formaldehyde fumes causes severe irritation of the eyes and upper respiratory tract. However, there was no evidence that the inhalation of formaldehyde fumes causes occupational asthma and the evidence for causing nasal tumours was considered equivocal.

The Department commissioned the Medical Research Council institute for environment and health to review the available data on exposure to formaldehyde in typical UK homes and assess the likely impacts on the health of occupants. This assessment was published by the institute in May 1996; the conclusions on health effects of formaldehyde were:

1. The irritant effects reported in some of the US studies from the 1980s related to mobile homes and relatively high levels of formaldehyde exposure, and are not relevant to the current situation in the UK.
2. Chamber studies with normal adults or those with pre-existing asthma have not demonstrated any dysfunction to mean formaldehyde levels currently found in UK homes by the Building Research Establishment study (0.020–0.025 mg/m^3, 0.017–0.021 ppm) or even at levels several times higher.
3. Epidemiological studies have not demonstrated any increase in respiratory symptoms or lung function at estimated current levels of formaldehyde in UK homes. However, there is a suggestion of an increase in asthma and chronic bronchitis among children living in homes with formaldehyde levels above 0.07 mg/m^3 (0.06 ppm).
4. There is no evidence to suggest that current domestic exposures to formaldehyde in the UK pose a carcinogenic risk.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statistics his Department has collated on the incidence of accidents involving the release of formaldehyde into the environment from industrial premises. [9566]

Mr. Clappison: I have been asked to reply.

The Environment Agency regulates a number of companies which emit formaldehyde to the environment under the integrated pollution control regime. The agency's chemical release inventory, which is available for public access, provides details of formaldehyde emissions. I have placed in the House Library a copy of relevant extracts from the inventory. These show total recorded releases—in tonnes—as follows:

	England	Wales
1994	194.700	93.880
1995	215.200	37.230

I understand from the Environment Agency that none of the recorded releases was the result of an accident.

Multiple Chemical Sensitivity Disorder

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has had from the charity Miracles in relation to recognition of multiple chemical sensitivity disorder in the United Kingdom and other issues; what response he is making; what action he plans to take; and if he will make a statement. [9425]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 17 December 1996]: One letter has been received from the charity Miracles regarding multiple chemical sensitivity disorder in the United Kingdom. We will be responding in due course.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Animal Rights Extremists

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his letter of 2 December, Ref. POD/96 2/1/85 PO 13428/96, when he plans to announce his response to the recommendation made by Lord Lloyd that actions of animal rights extremists should be treated as terrorism. [8369]

Mr. Howard: The Government intend to respond in the new year to Lord Lloyd's report of his inquiry into legislation against terrorism, including his recommendation concerning the actions of animal rights extremists.

Tagged Offenders

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, of the 48 offenders who have been sentenced to a curfew order and tagged after conviction for theft, how many were persistent shoplifters and how many were first offenders. [8631]

Mr. Sackville: Information is not yet available about the previous convictions of offenders who have only recently been given curfew orders. In the first full year of the trials, nobody sentenced to a curfew order for theft was a first offender.

Central records do not allow shoplifting to be distinguished from other offences of theft. As a result, it is not possible to say how many of those receiving curfew orders have been persistent shoplifters.

Television Licence Defaulters

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the correlation between statistics collected by his Department and those of the Lord Chancellor's Department concerning the number of people imprisoned for failure to pay fines imposed for the non-payment of television licences in 1996; and if he will make a statement. [8890]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 December 1996]: The statistics on the number of people imprisoned for failure to pay fines imposed for the non-payment of television licences are taken from the Prison Service receptions data. The latest figures were given in a reply to the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley), Official Report, columns 385–86.

The Lord Chancellor's Department does not have a separate source for this information and has written correcting information previously supplied to certain hon. Members.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many television licence fine defaulters were imprisoned in 1995; what was the average sentence they served; and what are the equivalent figures for 1996. [9325]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 16 December 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking, how many television licence fine defaulters were imprisoned in 1995, what was the average sentence they served and what are the equivalent figures for 1996.

Provisional information for January to October 1996 shows that 293 people were received into prison for defaulting on a fine after conviction for using a television without a licence. Information for 1995 is published in "Prison statistics England and Wales" (table 7.2 of the 1995 edition, Cm 3355, a copy of which is available in the library) and shows that 735 (500 males and 235 females) were received for this offence over the year. The average time served by fine defaulters is about one week.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average daily cost of imprisoning television licence fine defaulters in (a) 1996 and (b) 1995. [9324]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 16 December 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to respond to your recent Question about the average daily cost of imprisoning television licence fine defaulters in 1996 and 1995.

We do not calculate the cost of imprisonment for television licence defaulters separately from other offenders. The average cost per prisoner for the financial year 1995–96 was £24,233 (£66.4 per day). The average per prisoner for April to September 1996 was £63.5 per day, or £23,190 for a full year.

Prisons (Disabled Visitor Access)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prisons have been adapted to enable visitors to have access with (a) a wheelchair and (b) physical disabilities not requiring a wheelchair; what adaptations have been made to the prisons; and if he will make a statement. [9125]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 December 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent question about which prisons have been adapted to enable visitors to have access with wheelchairs and other physical disabilities.

Facilities for disabled visitors have generally been provided as a result of local minor work and we do not therefore have comprehensive central records of modifications made to buildings for this purpose. A survey carried out in 1995, however, revealed that the attached list of establishments have facilities for disabled visitors.

Examples of the type of facilities provided include ramps, lifts, wide doors and specially adapted toilets. The establishments listed may have all or any of these.

Our standard briefing guides for new buildings provide for access ramps, lifts, toilets, and for circulation routes to be made suitable for the passage of wheelchairs. Wherever practical these guides are also taken into account when existing facilities are refurbished.

Prisoners (Learning Disabilities)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the current Prison Service policy with regard to prisoners identified as having learning disabilities and dyslexia; and if he will make a statement; [9127]

(2) how many prisoners have been identified as having (a) a learning disability and (b) dyslexia on the latest date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [9126]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 December 1996]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your two recent Questions about prisoners with learning disabilities and dyslexia.

The policy of the Prisons Board towards prisoners who have any learning disabilities, including dyslexia, is that those who need to improve basic literacy and are prepared to attend education classes will be given every opportunity to do so. Contractors providing education to prisons are required to offer a basic skills screening test in numeracy and literacy to all prisoners. Basic literacy is included in the Prison Service's core education curriculum. A number of prisons are also trying to find better ways of giving basic skills training as part of vocational training and in the course of daily work in prison workshops. This work is being supported by the Basic Skills Agency, with whom the Prison Service works closely. The Unit has contracted Amersham and Wycombe College to provide a national support project to this end.

The number of prisoners identified by the Basic Skills Screening test as having a learning disability is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Crime Victims (Young People)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the number of young people who were victims of crime in each of the last 17 years and of that number relative to the number of adult victims for each category of crime; and if he will make a statement; [9100]

(2) what estimate he has made of the percentage of young people who have been victims of violent crime; and if he will make a statement. [9095]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 17 December 1996]: Information on the age of victims of crime recorded by the police is not routinely collected by the Home Office. However, information from an ad hoc survey on violent crime shows the rates of recorded offences per 100,000 population by age and sex of victims for each of the violent crime offence categories. This information is published in table 2 of the Home Office statistical findings 1/96 "Victims of Violent Crime Recorded by the Police, 1990–94". A copy of this publication is available in the Library.

No estimate has been made of the percentage of young people who have been victims of overall violent crime. However, information from the youth life styles survey carried out by the Home Office in 1993, based on a sample of around 1,700 young people aged between 14 and 25, found that 17 per cent. of young people in this age group reported being a victim of a "violent act" in the previous 12 months. The term "violent act" is not the same as "violent crime". The youth life styles survey defined a "violent act" as being where the victim was "deliberately hit or kicked or had force used against them".

Sexual offences are not included.

Police (Secure Transport)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the cost to public funds of (a) arrested but unconvicted persons by the Metropolitan police in relation to court proceedings, (b) costs incurred by (i) the Metropolitan police and (ii) the Home Office for secure transport of those convicted and (c) the total costs of transport for the years (1) 1994–95 and (2) 1995–96, indicating the number of specialist vehicles and persons used by the providers in each year. [8808]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 16 December 1996]: The cost to public funds of arrested but unconvicted persons by the Metropolitan police in relation to court proceedings is not available in the form requested.

Costs incurred by (i) the Metropolitan police and (ii) the Home Office for secure transport of those convicted are as follows:

	1994–95	1995–96
Total cost to the Metropolitan police	£3.9 million	£1.4 million
Recovery from the Home Office	£1.5 million	£0.8 million
Net cost to Metropolitan police	£2.4 million	£0.6 million
Cost to the Metropolitan police of vehicles (included in costs above)	£505 thousand	£127 thousand
Costs to Home Office of vehicles (included in costs above)	£426 thousand	£235 thousand
Number of vehicles	52	30
Number of staff	77	26

The costs do not include the costs of special escort duties provided by the Metropolitan police or the Home Office in the conveyance of prisoners between Crown court and prison.

In the years 1994–95 and 1995–96 the responsibility for the escort of prisoners in London, other than those in the highest security category, to and from court was in the process of being transferred from the police and the Prison Service to Securicor Custodial Services. This exercise was only completed in July 1995.

The contract covers the full escort service, together with the responsibility for the custody of prisoners while at court. It is on a fixed-price basis and the component elements, such as transportation, are not costed separately. The requested information is not, therefore, available.

In 1995–96, Securicor employed approximately 900 staff and 150 specialist vehicles on the contract. The total value is approximately £96 million over five years.

Young Offenders

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many 15-year-olds were being held in each young offender institution and remand centre, on the latest date for which figures are available; what percentage were held on (i) remand and (ii) under sentence; and if he will make a statement. [9124]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 December 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about how many 15 year olds were being held in each young offender institution and remand centre, on the latest date for which figures are available and what percentage were held on remand and under sentence.

The information requested for 31 October 1996 is shown in the attached table. 31 per cent. of the 15 year olds were on remand, with 69 per cent held under sentence.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women aged (a) 16, (b) 17 and (c) 18 years were received into Prison Service custody in each year from 1990 and in 1996 to date; and if he will make a statement. [9085]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 December 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about how many women aged 16, 17 and 18 years were received into Prison Service custody in each year from 1990 and in 1996 to date.

The available information is published in successive volumes of "Prison statistics, England and Wales". Table 3.10 of the 1995 edition, Cm 3355 and tables 3.9 for years 1992 and 1993. Information for years 1990 and 1991 only relates to sentenced inmates. Copies of these publications are available in the library. Provisional information for 1996 is given in the attached table.

[2] Total receptions cannot be calculated by adding together receptions in each category because there is double counting.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many juvenile offenders were imprisoned in each of the last five years; and what was the average length of juvenile sentence for each year; and if he will make a statement. [9090]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 December 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about juvenile offenders.

The information requested is given in Tables 3.1 and 3.16 of the annual publication 'Prison statistics England and Wales'; the latest edition for 1995 has the reference CM3355. A copy of this publication is available in the Library.

The information for prisoners aged under 18 is set out in the attached table.

Includes some 14 year olds until 1992.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inmates of young offender institutions have (a) committed suicide, (b) attempted suicide and (c) been victims of violence, in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [9093]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 December 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about incidents involving young offenders.

The information on self inflicted deaths, attempted suicides and assaults is given in the attached table. Information held centrally on assaults relates to the number of adjudications where an inmate has been found guilty of an assault upon another inmate.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young men aged under 21 years have committed suicide or attempted suicide while awaiting trail on remand in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [9094]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 December 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about young men under the age of 21 on remand who have committed or attempted suicide in the last ten years.

The information routinely collected from establishments about attempted suicides is not categorised by age and status of the prisoner and the details requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Further work is planned which will improve the level of detail available in coming years. The attached table lists the numbers of self-inflicted deaths amongst men under 21 during the last ten years whilst awaiting trail on remand.

[1] Includes some young offenders aged 21 years.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young people aged between 10 and 17 years were sent to adult prisons or remand centres to await trial in (a) London and (b) England and Wales during each of the past 17 years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [9098]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 December 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question, asking, how many young people aged between 10 and 17 years were sent to adult prisons or remand centres to await trial in (a) London and (b) England and Wales during each of the last 17 years for which figures are available.

The available information on the number of untried prisoners aged between 14 and 17 years is given in the attached table.

[1] Provisional figures.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were reoffending rates for young people leaving custody in each of the last 17 years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [9099]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 December 1996]: The available information relates to reconviction rates within two years for standard list offences and is given in the table.

Reconviction rates are affected by differences in the age, sex, previous convictions and other characteristics of offenders receiving the sentences, as described in Home Office research study No. 136, "Explaining reconviction rates: a critical analysis".

The rates prior to 1984 discharges have been derived from information contained in "Prison Statistics England and Wales, 1986", Cm 210. The information from 1984 onwards on rates for male young offenders is contained in "Prison Statistics, England and Wales, 1994", Cm 3087.

Percentage of sentenced young offenders discharged from custody who are reconvicted within two years of discharge by year of discharge

	Males	Females	Total
1992[2]	72	51	71

[1] Rates for those discharged from custody only relate to those released from Detention Centres or Borstal Training.
[2] Figures for 1987 and after are not directly comparable with those for earlier years due to a change in methodology. If the old methodology had been followed it is estimated that the reconviction rates would be about 7 to 8 percentage points lower for the males and 5 to 6 percentage points for the females. This change is described in paragraphs 21 and 22 on page 6 of Prison Statistics, England and Wales, 1994 (Cm 3087).

Police Manpower

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the manpower of each police force in respect of (a) number of police officers and (b) number of civilian support staff on 1 November for each of the last five years for which figures are available. [8809]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 16 December 1996]: Information on police strength was collected at the end of each month until April 1995. Data on police service strength are now collected twice a year, March and September. Information for the last five years is in the table.

Between October 1992 and September 1996, the total number of constables in England and Wales increased by 1,692 to 98,017. This is a record high number of constables.

Disabled Prisoners

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many registered disabled prisoners were in each of Her Majesty's prisons on the last date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [9086]

(2) if he will make a statement on his policy concerning disabled prisoners; [9087]

(3) how many registered disabled offenders were received into custody during each year since 1990 and to date in 1996; and if he will make a statement. [9089]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 December 1996]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the Prison Service's policy concerning disabled prisoners, the number of registered disabled offenders who were received into custody during each year since 1990 and to date in 1996, and the number of registered disabled prisoners who were in each of Her Majesty's prisons on the last day for which figures are available.

On 20 November 1996 the Prison Service issued Instruction to Governors 79/1996, entitled "Disability Discrimination Act 1995: Disabled Prisoners and Visitors". This instruction outlines the Prison Service's policy with regard to the provision of goods, facilities and services for disabled prisoners and visitors to establishments. A copy of the instruction is enclosed and I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library.

The Prison Service has not, historically, kept records of the number of prisoners who are registered disabled and could therefore only be provided at disproportionate cost. We have recently put in hand a survey of the number of disabled prisoners in our custody, whether registered disabled or not. I shall be pleased to write to you again when we have analysed the results.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prisons have been adapted to hold (a) disabled prisoners who require wheelchair access and (b) other physically disabled prisoners; what adaptations have been made to the prisons; and if he will make a statement. [9088]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 December 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about which prisons have been adapted to hold (a) disabled prisoners who require wheelchair access and (b) other physically disabled prisoners.

The practice of the Prison Service is for staff to ensure that the needs of prisoners with disabilities are met on an individual basis, from reception throughout their time in custody. Staff assess their requirements and seek to provide particular facilities depending on the nature of their disability. The construction of facilities for disabled prisoners is part of this process and local minor work e.g. cell modification, will cover most individual needs. For this reason we do not have comprehensive central records of all modifications made to buildings and it is not therefore possible to categorise prisons into those that do or do not have provision for disabled prisoners.

Our standard briefing guides for new buildings provide for access ramps, lifts, toilets, and for circulation routes to be made suitable for the passage of wheelchairs. Wherever practical these guides are also taken into account when existing facilities are refurbished.

Staff

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) permanent and (b) non-permanent staff there have been in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies of his Department in each year since 1992. [9666]

Mr. Howard: The tables set out available information for the Home Office and its executive agencies. The information for the agencies has been provided by the chief executives of the United Kingdom Passport Agency and the Fire Service College, the Director General of the Forensic Science Service and the Director General of the Prison Service. The information for the non-Prison Service Home Office gives the position as at 20 November and that for the Prison Service gives the position as at 2 December. Non-permanent staff include casuals, certain industrial staff and those staff having neither an established nor a fixed-term employment status.

For the purpose of producing statistics on civil service staff, fixed-term appointees are regarded as permanent staff, and are, therefore, included in the figures for permanent staff given. Information under (b) for the years prior to 1996 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

1993	9,378	—
1992	12.069	—

The 1992 figures predate the formation of the Forensic Science Service as an executive agency: staff who formed the agency on the 1 April 1992 are therefore included in these figures.

[1] The information has been taken from the Prison Service personnel information system which is currently being updated using a new computer system.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for his Department (a) how many people in total are employed, (b) how many of the total number of staff are (i) male and (ii) female and (c) how many (I) men and (II) women are employed on a (1) full-time and (2) part-time basis. [7487]

Mr. Howard: The table sets out the available information for the Home Office and the executive agencies. The information for the agencies has been provided by the chief executives of the United Kingdom Passport Agency and the Fire Service College, the Director General of the Forensic Science Service, and the Director General of the Prison Service. This information gives the position as at 16 December. The Prison Service is in the process of transferring to a new establishment-based computer system for the provision of personnel information.

Information Technology (Euro)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what tenders his Department has put out to convert its information technology systems to be euro compliant; what are the cost and person hours required to convert the systems to handle the euro; and when he expects his Department's systems to be fully economic and monetary union compliant. [9451]

Mr. Howard: My Department and agencies will need to assess the impact which a single currency, assumed to be starting on 1 January 1999, would have on their information systems, whether or not the United Kingdom decides to participate in the third stage of economic and monetary union.

Pregnant Prisoners

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what medical provision and supervision is available to pregnant category A women in Holloway prison. [9274]

Mr. Nelson: No. My Department has placed in the Library of the House statistics of export licences issued for military, security and paramilitary goods and arms, ammunition and related material to all destinations. These statistics cover 1993, 1994 1995 and the first half of 1996. Statistics for the second half of 1996 will be placed in the Library of the House as soon as they are prepared early in 1997.

Also placed in the Library of the House are similar statistics for such licences refused in the first half of 1996. Statistics for the second half of 1996 will be placed in the Library of the House early in 1997.

The annual reports of the Export Control Organisation for 1993 and 1994, copies of which are in the Library of the House, contain details of licences refused in those years.

Official Ministerial Visits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each of the Ministers in his Department how many official ministerial visits they have undertaken since 1 January; and how many of these have been abroad. [9383]

Mr. Lang: Official ministerial visits undertaken by my Ministers and me since 1 January 1996 are shown in the table, which also shows the number undertaken abroad.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) pursuant to his answers of 10 December, Official Report, columns 87–89, on what occasions his Department used the services of Dellcourts Ltd. (Totnes); and in relation to which applications for RSA; [9121]

(2) pursuant to his answers of 10 December, Official Report, columns 87–89, if the contract for Mr. A's retention as an adviser to his Department was made through his companies. [9120]

Mr. Greg Knight [holding answers 16 December 1996]: Dellcourts Ltd., a company owned and controlled by Mr. A, was contracted to provide accountancy advice to the Department's south-west regional office, later the Government Office for the south-west, from 1 February 1993 to 15 April 1995. During that time, it assisted in the appraisal of 71 regional selective assistance cases, as well as advising on applications under SMART—small firms merit award for research and technology—and SPUR—support for products under research—technology services and on business links.

Mr. A also advised on a further 49 regional selective assistance cases between 5 February 1991 and 31 January 1993 under the terms of a contract made directly with him which included provision for all remuneration to be paid to Dellcourts Ltd.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answers of 10 December, Official Report, columns 87–89, if it was acceptable practice within the terms of his contract for Mr. A to make direct written contact with applicants for RSA while he was retained as an adviser to his Department. [9122]

Mr. Knight [holding answer 16 December 1996]: External advisers assisting in regional assistance cases are free to correspond or otherwise communicate with applicants to clarify aspects of their appraisal.

Business Links

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many business links have set up help desks and practice boards in each region, since October; and at what cost to his Department. [8936]

Mr. Page: Every business link partnership is required to provide an effective inquiry and information point as part of its service to its customers. The costs are met by contributions from a variety of sources, including local partners and the Department of Trade and Industry. Two business links have opened since October, bringing the total to 236.

Investment

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade for each year since 1979, what was the value of (a) inward investment, (b) outward investment, (c) acquisitions in the United Kingdom by overseas companies, (d) acquisitions overseas by United Kingdom companies and (e) the proportion of inward investment that is accounted for by acquisitions in the United Kingdom by overseas companies. [7829]

Mr. Greg Knight [holding answer 6 December 1996]: The table shows the flows of direct investment in each year. Their volatility reflects the economic cycle and the peaks and troughs of acquisitions. They are, therefore, not a good indicator of the general trend of direct foreign investment.

Since 1979, the total stock of inward investment into the UK has more than tripled, and the UK continues to be the number one location for Japanese, US and Korean investment in the EU.

Note:
Figures represent the flows of direct net investment. Investment includes investors' shares of the unremitted profits, their net acquisition of share and loan capital, changes in inter-company accounts and changes in branch/head office indebtedness. Inward investment includes property investments by overseas companies and investments made by individuals. Outward investment includes real estate transactions by non-bank financial institutions and persons. It also includes non-bank financial institutions' loans and mortgages to overseas residents.

Road Haulage Firms (Liquidations)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many road haulage firms have gone into liquidation in each year from 1990 to 1995. [9128]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The table shows company compulsory liquidations and individual bankruptcies for the road transport industry in England and Wales 1992 to 1995—1992 is the first complete year for which data are available.

Confidential Payments to Individuals

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the grants and other financial assistance within his responsibility which are paid to private individuals whose identity is kept confidential. [9710]

Mr. Greg Knight: Unless information falls under one of the exemptions in the code of practice on access to Government information, the identity of recipients for grants and financial assistance paid to individuals is made publicly available.

EU Third Framework Programme Grants

Mr. Radice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the names of each United Kingdom company and institution which received grants under the European Union third framework programme between 1991 and 1994. [9048]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Full information on research projects funded in individual member states by the third framework programme is held only by the European Commission, and is not distributed to member states. UK researchers have, however, participated vigorously in the EU's framework programmes. Commission statistics show that 2,337 UK research teams participated in projects funded under the third framework—more than in any other member state.

Mr. Radice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what the total spending on research and development in the United Kingdom was under the European Union third framework programme between 1991 and 1994. [9047]

Mr. Taylor: The UK's notional contribution to the European Community research and development budget for the period of the third framework programme was:

Financial year	National UK contribution to EC budget £ million
1990–91	207.3
1991–92	189.3
1992–93	252.9
1993–94	285.0

British Coal Enterprise

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he last discussed the sale of British Coal Enterprise with the chairman of British Coal; and what receipts have been achieved from the sale of British Coal Enterprise (a) outplacing and career counselling, (b) finance and business loan and (c) workshop activities. Prison Population

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the overall (a) average base line certified normal accommodation, (b) average in use CNA and (c) average population for the Prison Service for each month this year; [9108]

(2) if he will list the (a) average baseline certified normal accommodation, (b) average in use CNA and (c) average population by prison type for each month this year. [9107]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsbility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the total baseline CNA, average baseline CNA, average in use CNA and average population by prison type each month this year.

Prison type is defined as the role of the prison, for example local prison, closed or open training prison, closed or open young offender institutions or juvenile institutions. Most prisons perform more than one role, which is recorded within the relevant prison type.

Baseline CNA is the total number of uncrowded places in the prison estate, including those which are out of use due to refurbishment. Information on baseline CNA is not available in the form requested as it is not recorded by prison type. In use CNA represents the total number of uncrowded places estimated to be available in the estate.

With the exception of baseline CNA the information contained in the attached tables is available monthly in a publication called "Occupation of prisons, remand centres, young offender institutions and police cells", which is available in the Library.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the (a) average base line certified normal accommodation, (b) average in use CNA and (c) average population of each prison for the first six months of the current financial year. [9106]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the average baseline CNA, in use CNA and population for each prison for the first six months of the current financial year.

The information requested is given in the accompanying tables and I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library.

Prison Accommodation

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of prisoners sharing three to a cell designed for one in each month this year. [9104]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of prisoners sharing three to a cell designed for one this year.

No prisoners have been required to share three to a cell designed for one this year. There have been no prisoners held three to a cell designed for one since March 1994.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of prisoners sharing two to a cell designed for one in each month this year. [9102]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of prisoners sharing two to a cell designed for one in each month this year.

The information is given in the attached table.

September 1996	8,938
October 1996	10,120

Shooting Clubs

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when he plans to publish guidance concerning the criteria which shooting clubs must meet to obtain licences under the Firearms (Amendment) Bill; [8907]

(2) if he will place in the Library a draft of the criteria for the granting of licences to shooting clubs under the Firearms (Amendment) Bill; and if he will provide all shooting clubs with a copy of the draft criteria; [8917]

(3) what period of time he intends to allow to shooting clubs to comply with section 16 of the Firearms (Amendment) Bill; and what estimate he has made of the average period required to obtain planning and building regulation approvals for changes to club premises. [8918]

Miss Widdecombe: The requirements for the licensed pistol clubs envisaged by the Bill are being drafted. I will seek the views of the Firearms Consultative Committee and the British Shooting Sports Council on them, and will place the draft in the Library. My Department will publish the new requirements when they have been finalised and will also ensure that all existing shooting clubs that are approved under section 15 of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988 are informed of them.

A shooting club that wishes to have a licence under clause 16 of the Bill will be able to apply for that at any time after the Bill has come into force. The time it will take for clubs to obtain any necessary building consents will depend on individual circumstances.

Prison Assaults

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average assault rate in each prison during the first six months of the current financial year. [9109]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the average assault rate in each prison during the first six months of the current financial year.

Annualised assault rates for each prison for the period April to September 1996 are given in the attached table. The number of assaults has been annualised and then expressed as a proportion of the average population for that period.

Contracting Out

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy for depositing in the Library documents concerning the contracting out of services; how many documents have been deposited in the Library since 1992 in the categories (a) invitation to tender, (b) draft contracts and (c) binding contracts signed by both parties; how many draft contracts contain performance targets for the contractor; and in how many cases a draft contract has been altered as a result of representations from hon. Members following deposition in the Library. [8915]

Mr. Howard: It is not general policy to deposit documents concerning the contracting out of services in the Library, but invitations to tender and contracts for both design, construction, management and finance schemes and the operation of prisons are placed in the Library, subject to the removal of pricing and other commercially sensitive details.

Since 1992, four invitations to tender, relating to Her Majesty's prisons Wolds, Blakenhurst, Buckley Hall and Doncaster, and six contracts, relating to Her Majesty's prisons Wolds, Blakenhurst, Buckley Hall, Doncaster, Bridgend and Fazakerley, have been deposited in the Library.

All Home Office contracts specify the level of service required and, in appropriate cases, performance targets.

No draft contracts have been deposited, or altered as a result of representation from hon. Members.

Prisoner Transfers

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the implementation of the recommendations of the interdepartmental working group chaired by Lord Ferrers in respect of the transfer of prisoners from prisons in Great Britain to similar institutions in Northern Ireland. [9688]

Miss Widdecombe: In his statement of 23 November 1992, the then Minister of State indicated that the Government had accepted in full the recommendations of the interdepartmental working group, and set out the arrangements which would apply to the transfer of prisoners between jurisdictions. These have worked satisfactorily and have been upheld in judicial review hearings. There is regular contact between officials in Great Britain and Northern Ireland about the implementation of the transfer arrangements, about which Ministers are kept fully informed. My right hon. and learned Friend has reviewed the current legal provisions relating to transfers and has made provision in the Crime (Sentences) Bill, currently before Parliament, for changes to these, as recommended by the interdepartmental working group.

Official Ministerial Visits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each of the Ministers in his Department how many official ministerial visits they have undertaken since 1 January; and how many of these have been abroad. [9376]

Mr. Howard: The information requested is as follows:

	Total visits	Visits abroad
Mr. Michael Howard	103	10
Baroness Blatch	42	1
Ann Widdecombe	123	4
Mr. David Maclean	40	0
Mr. Timothy Kirkhope	37	6
Mr. Tom Sackville	39	3

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Criminal Cases Review Commission will be established; if he will list the names of the people who will be appointed as members; and when the commission will start work. [10396]

Mr. Howard: The Criminal Cases Review Commission will be established on 1 January 1997. Its members will be:

Sir Frederick Crawford (Chairman)

Miss Fiona King

Mr. Laurence Elks

Mr. David Kyle

Mr. John Leckey

Miss Jill Gort

Mr. Baden Skitt

Mr. John Knox

Dr. James MacKeith

Mr. Karamjit Singh

Professor Leonard Leigh

Mr. Edward Weiss

Mr. Anthony Foster

Mr. Barry Capon.

The commission will need a period of time to appoint and train its staff, and to develop its working methods, before it takes on its caseworking responsibilities. It will take on responsibility for considering cases on 31 March 1997.

Members of Parliament (Bribery)

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further consideration he has given to the recommendation from the Committee on Standards in Public Life, in its first report, that the law relating to bribery of hon. Members of Parliament should be clarified. [10397]

Mr. Howard: I have today published a paper on this subject, and have placed copies in the Library. I have also sent copies to the House of Commons Committee on Standards and Privileges, and the House of Lords Committee for Privileges.

Criminal Investigations Code

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to lay before Parliament the code of practice prepared under part II of the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996; and when it will come into effect. [10398]

Mr. Maclean: In view of the interest in the code of practice among criminal justice practitioners, I am laying it before Parliament today. This is to assist them in preparing for the implementation of parts I and II of the Act next year.

Before the code can take effect, Parliament must approve an order bringing it into operation. I will lay an order seeking approval before Parliament as soon as possible next year. I am not yet able to do so, because the disclosure scheme in part I, which the code supports, depends on a number of sets of rules of court. These are currently the subject of consultation with criminal justice practitioners, and it is too early to say exactly when they will be ready to be implemented.

Asylum and Immigration Appeals

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for reviewing the system of asylum and immigration appeals. [10474]

Mr. Howard: My right hon. and noble Friend the Lord Chancellor and I intend to review the current system of asylum and immigration appeals, so as to establish, among other things, whether it provides adequate rights of appeal consistent with the costs to public funds and the impact upon the operation of the immigration control. We shall publish our conclusions in due course as a basis for consultation with interested parties.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Home Visits

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consultations he has had with the chief executive of the Benefits Agency concerning the ending of agency home visits; and if he will make a statement. [5905]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Benefits Agency has not stopped home visits to people claiming or in receipt of benefits. In July 1995, the agency introduced new criteria for determining when income support new claim visits and review visits should be made. This has improved customer service, accuracy, verification and validation of income support claims.

The agency is undertaking a wide-ranging review of its activities, as part of the overall departmental change programme designed to make efficient use of public funds while maintaining high standards of customer service. As part of this review, from 1 April 1996, visits are made only to customers with particular difficulties of access and under the security control programme.

Contracts

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many contracts have been made between his Department and (a) Andersens, (b) BMI, (c) Capita, (d) EDS and (e) Sema; and what is the nature of each service provided. [6734]

Mr. Burt: The information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Such information as is available is as follows.

EDS—Four projects with contracts with the Child Support Agency placed between 1992 and 1995; Operational accounting system; maintenance assessment; support to the live running of the system; a technical services agreement to provide resources to develop the system. One project with the Information Technology Services Agency to outsource the Department's data centre services. This contract involves taking over the complete data centre services provision for the Department. A framework for computer and related services.

ANDERSENS—Replacement of the national insurance recording system (NIRS1) with a new system (NIRS2). A framework for computer and related services. Framework for management consultancy. A framework for accountancy consultancy.

BMI—Audiology services.

SEMA—Small systems support. A framework for computer and related services. A framework for management consultancy.

CAPITA—framework for management consultancy.

Benefit Appeals Procedure

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will take steps to speed up the benefits appeals procedure. [7980]

Mr. Roger Evans: We have done so. The benefits appeals procedure is constantly under review and I hold regular meetings with officials.

The Independent Tribunal Service, through its change programme, continues to look for ways to improve clearance times.

We introduced regulations, which came into force on 21 October, amending the appeals process which should help to reduce the time it takes to clear appeals. Among other changes they aim to reduce confusion by requiring a specified form to be used when appealing and specifying the information which has to be given by the appellant; streamline the administration of appeals by providing for oral hearings only at the request of an interested party or the chairman of a tribunal, otherwise paper hearings, and reducing the minimum notice of an oral hearing to seven days for all jurisdictions except child support; relieve the burden on tribunal chairman by allowing the clerk to the tribunal to make certain decisions, such as postponements, amend the circumstances in which an appeal may be struck out for want of prosecution and the circumstances in which these appeals may be reinstated, and allow for the issue of a summary decision, with a full decision available on request.

Pensioners (Income Support)

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 18 November, Official Report, column 451, for the years (a) 2000–1 and (b) 2010–11, what is his estimate (i) of the number of additional pensioners eligible to claim income support as a result of the retirement pension not being increased annually in accordance with earnings, (ii) of the additional cost, at 1995–96 prices and (iii) of the additional cost of administration, assuming that the difference between the per capita costs of administering the basic retirement pension and income support in 1995–96 were applied to subsequent years, that the basic retirement pension continued to be price-indexed and that the number and amount of other sources of income remained as now. [8248]

Mr. Heald: Estimated numbers of additional pensioners in receipt of income support and the additional cost to income support as a result of the basic retirement pension not being uprated in accordance with earnings are given in the table. The table also contains estimates as a result of the basic retirement pension not being increased in accordance with the higher of prices and average earnings. Estimates have been made using Pensim, a dynamic simulation model that projects pensioners' incomes into the next century. Pensim estimates are based on a number of economic and behavioral assumptions, and in particular that average earnings increase by 1.5 per cent. per year above prices. Due to the reliance on assumptions and the time period covered, caseload estimates have been rounded to the nearest 100,000 and cost estimates to the nearest £100 million, and should be treated with caution. Further details of the methodology and assumptions used by Pensim are outlined in GES working paper No. 129 "Pensim: A Dynamic Simulation Model of Pensioner Incomes". Copies are available in the Library.

1. Pensioners are defined as those single aged at state pension age or above, or couples in which the husband is aged at state pension age or above.
2. Caseload figures have been rounded to the nearest 100,000. Cost figures have been rounded to the nearest £100 million.
3. Costs are at 1995–96 prices.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 27 November, Official Report, column 316, what estimate he has made of the average weekly charge above preserved rights to income support for (a) men and (b) women in (i) residential care and (ii) nursing homes. [9352]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table:

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Peter Bottomley, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question on medical provision and supervision available to pregnant category A women in Holloway prison.

Holloway prison has a dedicated wing with specialist expertise and interest in caring for pregnant women. Admission to the unit is on a voluntary basis. Holloway, along with all prisons has the back up of the National Health Service, for both in-patient and out-patient facilities. In addition, consultants are contracted by the Prison Service to carry out clinics in the prisons themselves. Where necessary, prisoners are taken under escort to outside hospitals.

Prisoners (Drug Dependency)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what rights prisoners detained in England and Wales have to secure a second medical opinion and appropriate treatment, with particular reference to drug dependent prisoners. [9164]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 16 December 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Max Madden, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to respond to your recent Question about the rights of prisoners, detained in England and Wales prisons, to secure a second medical opinion and appropriate treatment, with particular reference to drug dependant prisoners.

Neither unconvicted or convicted prisoners have an automatic right to seek a second medical opinion from NHS or private health care services. Where however, a second opinion is thought necessary by the prison medical officer, arrangements are made for the prisoner to be examined by a visiting NHS clinician, or transferred to a NHS hospital for examination or treatment.

Notwithstanding the above, if an unconvicted prisoner wishes to secure a second medical opinion, he or she may be visited and treated in prison by a nominated doctor if the following conditions are met:

The inmate is able and willing to pay the expenses incurred.

The Governor is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for such a request.

A convicted prisoner does not have this automatic right.

In exceptional circumstances a prisoner, whether convicted or unconvicted, may receive in-patient treatment in a private hospital or clinic, or a private room in a National Health Service Hospital. For this to occur the medical officer must be satisfied that the following conditions are met:

Hospital inpatient treatment is necessary.

It is clinically advisable that the treatment is carried out during the period that the prisoner is in custody.

The treatment cannot be carried out in a prison service health care centre and that the prisoner could be treated significantly earlier, privately in a hospital within reasonable distance of the prison than under NHS arrangements or

They had an appointment for private in-patient treatment before they came into prison.

The governor must also satisfy himself that:

The inmate has sufficient funds or adequate private insurance to meet all costs, including the bedwatch.

These conditions apply to all medical and dental conditions, including the treatment of drug dependency.

Prisons (Strip Cells)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many strip cells are currently in use in prisons in England and Wales. [9165]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 16 December 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Max Madden, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about how many special cells are currently in use in prisons in England and Wales.

The information requested is not recorded centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Prison Medical Service

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison medical officers are currently in post in prisons in England and Wales; how many posts are currently vacant; and what were the equivalent figures in each of the last five years. [9168]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 16 December 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Max Madden, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of medical officers currently in post in prisons in England and Wales; the number of posts currently vacant; and the equivalent figures in each of the last five years.

Information on vacancies is not currently held centrally. I will write to you again when the figures become available. Data on the number of medical officers in post in prisons is only available centrally for the current and previous years.

The numbers of full-time and part-time doctors working in the Service at the end of March for the last two years are given in the attached table.

Doctors employed in the Prison Service: 1994–95 and 1995–96

	Full time doctors			Part time doctors
Year	Medical officer	Senior medical officer	Total	Medical officer	Senior medical officer	Total
1994–95	96	49	145	136	0	136
1995–96	91	42	133	89	3	92

The figures include doctors employed in privately managed prisons except Blakenhurst which did not submit any staffing information.

Prisoners (Damages Claims)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of successful claims for damages by, and the amount of compensation that has been given to, prisoners who have sued the Home Office for being kept in prison too long, in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [9501]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 December 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of successful claims for damages by, and the amount of compensation that has been given to, prisoners who have sued the Home Office for being kept in prison too long, in each of the last five years.

Information on individual compensation claim payments made by or on behalf of prison governors to prisoners is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The total expenditure on compensation payments to prisoners for detention beyond the due date of release is:

1991–92: £25,982

1992–93: £13,510

1993–94: £18,351

1994–95: £53,009

1995–96: £31,941

Ms Alison Halford

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much public money (a) has been spent and (b) he estimates will be spent in respect of proceedings concerning Ms Alison Halford before (i) the Merseyside police authority, (ii) the industrial tribunal, (iii) the European Commission and (iv) the European Court of Human Rights, distinguishing in each case (1) solicitors' fees, (2) barristers' fees, (3) the cost of the time of other public officials and (4) the costs of the courts and tribunals in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [8862]

Mr. Howard: Part of the information requested is not available, and the rest is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Telephone Tapping

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what records are kept (a) by the Government and (b) by each individual police force concerning authorisations by senior police officers for the interception of telephone calls; how many such authorisations there have been by (i) Merseyside police and (ii) police forces in general in each year since 1984; what safeguards exist to prevent abuse; and how much manpower and cost they involve. [8853]

Mr. Howard: The interception of a communication in the course of its transmission by a public telecommunications system requires a warrant issued by the Secretary of State under the Interception of Communications Act 1985. A decision by a chief constable to monitor calls on a private telephone system operated by the police is not covered by the 1985 Act. Such a decision is an operational matter for the chief constable concerned, who is also responsible for ensuring that monitoring is appropriate in the circumstances and is not misused.

There is no central record of such authorisations by chief constables and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Prison Costs

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the average cost of a place in prison during the first six months of the current financial year; [9111]

(2) what was the average cost of a place in each prison during the first six months of the current financial year. [9110]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 18 December 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the cost of prison places during the first six months of the current financial year.

The annualised costs of a place in each establishment are set out in the attached table.

The annualised average cost of a prison place in the first six months of the current financial year was £23,190. Spending, however, is not spread evenly across the year, and the additional funds provided this year to meet the rise in the population is not yet reflected in these half year figures.

The introduction of JSA and IB have been massive and complex undertakings requiring a great deal of planning and effort. The new benefits bring with them new computer systems, procedures, forms and regulations that have inevitably added to the Agency's workload. Since the introduction of JSA on 7 October 1996 the continued effort and commitment of my staff and those of our colleagues in Employment Services in bedding-in the changes and stabilising the benefit delivery processes has been considerable. Where it has proved necessary to ensure the successful delivery of these projects, additional resources have been made available.

The BA vision still remains to pay the right benefit, to the right person, at the right time, every time. Service to the public and the delivery of all other benefits has been and will be maintained.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on what basis the figures for cases and savings projected in his press release on proposed housing benefit and council tax benefit changes 96/265 were calculated; and what estimate he has made of the geographical distribution of (a) the single people under 60 years who are private sector housing benefit claimants and (b) the band F or higher council tax claimants. Cold Weather Payments

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the (a) number and (b) value of cold weather payments paid out in each region of Scotland in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [9072]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is contained in the social fund statistical series "Cold Weather Payments by District Offices", copies of which are available in the Library.

Benefit Fraud Hotline

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of calls to the national benefit fraud hotline are not pursued any further. [8922]

Mr. Heald: It is too early to give the number of successful or unsuccessful referrals generated by calls from the public to the hotline.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much was spent on advertising the freeline service in each year since 1992. [8925]

Mr. Evans: This is an operational matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Kevin Hughes, dated 17 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how much was spent on advertising the Freeline Service in each year since 1992.

Since its introduction in 1984 the Benefits Agency Freeline has not had a budget allocation for advertisement costs. The service and details of the telephone numbers were included in appropriate BA leaflets, claim packs and forms. The Benefits Agency Freeline closed in July of this year.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Disability Living Allowance

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the Government's policy in respect of removing the disability living allowance from those in hospital for more than four weeks; and how many representations he received in support of the changes. [9014]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The Government's policy is set out in Cm 3233, a copy of which is in the Library.

We have received a number of representations. It is not possible to identify separately the number which were supportive of the changes; however, the majority either expressed concern or sought clarification.

National Disability Council

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the members of the National Disability Council and the terms of their appointments. [9147]

Mr. Burt: The members of the National Disability Council and the dates to which their appointments run are as follows:

David Grayson: 31 December 1999
Harry McConnell: 31 January 1998
Alan Smith: 1 June 1997
Doug Alker: 22 January 1998
Ann Foster: 22 January 1998
Colin Low: 22 January 1998
David Mills: 22 January 1998
David Roberts: 22 January 1998
Christopher Brocksom: 22 January 1999
Tanni Grey: 22 January 1999
Jim McAllister: 22 January 1999
Martin Reavley: 22 January 1999
Kevin Shinkwin: 22 January 1999
Alan Dickson: 22 January 2000
David Jenkins: 22 January 2000
Bert Massie: 22 January 2000
Philippa Russell: 22 January 2000
Jenny White: 22 January 2000

Mr. Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what proportion of the total budget of the National Disability Council is accounted for by administrative costs and the remuneration of members; [9149]

(2) what is the total annual budget for the National Disability Council. [9150]

Mr. Burt: The sum of £350,000 has been allocated to meet the expenditure associated with the National Disability Council during 1996–97. It is estimated that 48 per cent. of this amount will be spent on members' remuneration, travel and subsistence, meetings and the provision of the council's secretariat. The remaining 51 per cent. includes amounts for research and other non-administrative expenditure such as advisory and consultancy fees.

Disabled Investors (Building Society Payments)

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what meetings he has had with Ministers outside his Department to ensure that investors with severe disabilities, whose account is managed by a third party, will benefit from payments to long-standing members by building societies planning to convert to listed companies next year. [9196]

Mr. Burt: I have been in contact with my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary about this complex and difficult issue. In addition, departmental officials have had a number of meetings with representatives of the various building societies that have announced their intention to convert to banks.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the Minister of State for Social Security and Disabled People expects to reply to the letter from the chairman of the National Disability Council concerning the council's meeting of 21 November on bonus shares and cash payments from building societies; and if he will place a copy of his reply in the Library. [9322]

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Social security if he will publish in the Official Report the text of the letter sent to the Minister for Social Security and Disabled People by the chairman of the National Disability Council following the meeting of the council on 21 November; and what reply he sent to the letter. [9195]

Mr. Burt: Yes. I will respond in due course to the letter and will arrange for it to be published in the Official Report.

Following is the information:

BUILDING SOCIETIES

The Council considered the issue of discrimination against disabled people in the distribution of bonus shares and cash payments on the floatation of building societies at its meeting on 21 November.

It is of the view that the current proposals for the flotations would leave many disabled people, who are not first named on their accounts, at a considerable disadvantage over their first named counterparts. Notwithstanding the technical legal arguments, it considers these arrangements to be discriminatory and totally unacceptable.

It believes that the Alliance and Leicester and Halifax Building Societies should be urged to reconsider their position and to put forward proposals which would have the effect that disabled people would not be worse off than other members of the building societies. If necessary, the Government should bring forward legislation to facilitate these changes and ensure that similar problems do not arise again.

The Council is prepared to continue discussion with the societies concerned in order to identify a solution.

Housing Benefit

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to make all payments of housing benefit payable directly to the landlord of the property concerned. [9190]

Mr. Roger Evans: None.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the impact of the changes to housing benefit in the Budget on (a) single unemployed people who have inherited a tenancy from their parents and (b) unemployed people who are widowed or divorced and left with the tenancy of the house. [8571]

Mr. Evans [holding answer 11 December 1996]: The proposed changes to the housing benefit scheme would apply only to tenants in the deregulated private rented sector. Generally, under such tenancies children do not have the right to succeed to an assured tenancy if the parent dies. We have no data to enable us to identify the status of the person who becomes responsible for the tenancy.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will consult on his proposals to let business pay national insurance contributions for minor expenses in a lump sum. [10461]

Mr. Lilley: I have today published a consultation document containing draft clauses on the alignment of national insurance contributions with tax under Inland Revenue PAYE settlement agreements. More than 200 organisations and individuals will receive a copy. The consultation period ends on 7 March 1997.

My proposal is to introduce a simple employer-only charge for national insurance to work alongside the Inland Revenue's single lump sum tax charge on minor expense payments and benefits in kind. This will mean that employers can enjoy a reduced administrative burden for contributions similar to that provided by the new tax arrangements. This is part of our continuing commitment to ensure that the administration costs of national insurance for employers are kept to the minimum consistent with the overall objectives of the contributory system.

I intend to include these changes in a Bill containing measures to simplify the national insurance system and improving compliance and administration of national insurance contributions for early introduction in the next Parliament.

Copies of the consultation document have been placed in the Library.

Pensions Levy

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the proposed (a) rates of the general pensions levy and (b) maximum amounts of the pensions compensation levy payable in respect of occupational and personal pension schemes from April 1997. [10462]

Mr. Heald: The proposed rates of the general pensions levy are set out in the table. The proposed statutory maximum of the pensions compensation levy will be £0.23 for each scheme member. The general levy rates and the maximum compensation levy will be specified in the Occupational and Personal Pension Schemes (Levy) Regulations 1997 which we intend to lay before the House by March 1997.

General levy

	Proposed rate
For occupational pension schemes with up to 11 members	£8.75 per scheme
For occupational pension schemes with 12 to 99 members	£1.05 per member
For occupational pension schemes with 100 to 999 members	£0.75 per member, subject to a minimum of £105.00 per scheme
For occupational pension schemes with 1,000 to 4,999 members	£0.60 per member, subject to a minimum of £730.00 per scheme
For occupational pension schemes with 5,000 to 9,999 members	£0.45 per member, subject to a minimum of £3,000.00 per scheme
For occupational pension schemes with 10,000 or more members	£0.30 per member, subject to a minimum of £4,500.00 per scheme
For personal pension schemes with up to 11 members	£3.60 per scheme
For personal pension schemes with 12 to 99 members	£0.30 per member
For personal pension schemes with 100 to 999 members	£0.21 per member, subject to a minimum of £30.00 per scheme
For personal pension schemes with 1,000 to 4,999 members	£0.17 per member, subject to a minimum of £210.00 per scheme
For personal pension schemes with 5,000 to 9,999 members	£0.12 per member, subject to a minimum of £850.00 per scheme
For personal pension schemes with 10,000 or more members	£0.08 per member, subject to a minimum of £1,200.00 per scheme

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the level of (a) basic state pension or equivalent and (b) second state pension paid to (i) a single person and (ii) a couple in (1) the United Kingdom and (2) each other European Union country, expressed (A) in cash, and (B) as a percentage of average earnings. [9350]

Mr. Heald: The standard rate of retirement pension for a single pensioner in Great Britain is £61.15 per week, representing 17.4 per cent. of average gross weekly earnings of full-time employees. A couple, where the wife receives a standard rate pension based on her husband's contributions, currently receive £97.75 per week or 27.8 per cent. of average earnings. At 31 March 1996 it is estimated that the average gross weekly additional pension in payment was £18.14 per week or 5.2 per cent. of average earnings.

Information on retirement pensions in EU member states is contained in MISSOC 1995, "Social protection in the Member States of the European Union", published by the European Commission, a copy of which is in the Library. Some details of levels of state pensions as a percentage of earnings are included in this publication; however, because of the diverse nature of state pension schemes in member states, many of which are based on earnings-related calculations, straightforward comparisons of benefit amounts are not possible.

Source:

Earnings figures obtained from the New Earnings Survey, April 1995 and April 1996.

Average weekly net additional pension is obtained from the Retirement Pension Bi-Annual Enquiry, 31 March 1996.

Notes:

1. The 1996 Abstract of Statistics, published in October, shows a different figure for standard rate retirement pension as a percentage of average earnings. This is because the figure published in the 1996 edition of the Abstract of Statistics is based on the provisional level of earnings in April 1996, while this reply uses the final figure.

2. The gross weekly additional pension is the notional amount before the deduction of a contracted out deduction (COD). A COD is deducted when a person has been contracted out of SERPS, the state earnings-related pension scheme, into a contracted-out pension scheme or an appropriate personal pension used in place of SERPS.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the income of each quintile of the pensioner population, expressed in current values and as a percentage of the average earnings of the equivalent quintile of the working age population in (a) 1994 and (b) 2025. [9351]

Mr. Heald: Information is not available in the format requested. Estimated mean incomes for quintiles of the single pension and pensioner couple populations are given in the table for 1994 and 2025, at 1996 prices. Also shown in the table are estimates of the growth in mean income in each quintile between 1994 and 2025. All estimates have been made using Pensim, a dynamic simulation model that projects pensioners' incomes into the next century.

Although it is not possible to provide the estimates as a percentage of average earnings, Pensim estimates are based on a number of economic and behavioural assumptions, in particular that average earnings increase by 1.5 per cent. per year above prices. Real average earnings are therefore assumed to increase by almost 60 per cent. between 1994 and 2025. It is important to note, however, that earnings growth is likely to vary widely between quintiles of the working age population.

Due to the reliance on assumptions and the time period covered, estimates should be treated with caution, and have been heavily rounded. Further details of the methodology and assumptions used by Pensim are outlined in GES working paper No. 129 "Pensim: A Dynamic Simulation Model of Pensioner Incomes". Copies are available in the Library.

Mean net before housing cost income by population quintile: single and couple pensioners 1994–2025, (1996 prices)

	Q1	Q2	Q3	Q4	Q5	Mean
Single pensioners
1994	£60	£76	£91	£108	£181	£103
2025	£68	£99	£120	£158	£350	£159
Growth	15 per cent.	30 per cent.	30 per cent.	45 per cent.	95 per cent.	55 per cent.
Pensioner couples
1994	£121	£150	£183	£235	£390	£216
2025	£151	£205	£260	£338	£606	£312
Growth	15 per cent.	30 per cent.	35 per cent.	45 per cent.	65 per cent.	45 per cent.

1. Estimates are based on uprated data from the 1988 Family Expenditure Survey, 1988 Retirement Survey and 1987 Social Change and Economic Life Initiative, in order to provide consistent estimates for 1994 and 2025. These estimates are not consistent with the 1994–95 Pensioners' Incomes Series, which is mainly based on data drawn from the 1994–95 Family Expenditure Survey.
2. Pensioners are defined as those single aged at state pension age or above, or couples in which the husband is aged at state pension age or above.
3. Figures have been rounded to the nearest £1 and 5 per cent.
4. Quintiles for single pensioners and pensioner couples have been calculated separately—i.e. the bottom quintile of single pensioners represents those pensioners in the bottom 20 per cent. of the income distribution of single pensioners.

Social Fund (Flood Damage Payments)

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what help is available from the social fund to people on income support who have suffered loss and damage as a result of the recent flooding in the Folkestone area; and if he will make a statement. [10298]

Mr. Roger Evans: Disaster relief following any such crisis is essentially a matter for the relevant local authority. However, help is available through the social fund in the form of community care grants, budgeting loans and crisis loans. The particular circumstances of each application will determine which type of payment may be made. Access to crisis loans is not restricted to people on income support. Applications to the social fund are dealt with, as speedily as possible, by specially trained social fund officers who look carefully at the individual circumstances surrounding each application and use discretion and flexibility when forming their decisions.

On 22 November, Channel district reported a total of 28 community care grant awards had been made to people most affected by the flooding, at a cost of £13,392. I have therefore agreed that an additional allocation of £13,392, should be made immediately to reimburse Channel's community care grant budget.

Independent Tribunal Service

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the Independent Tribunal Service expects to respond to the letter of 14 June from the hon. Member for Aylesbury about appeal Ref. 2/01/95/12694, N1 ZY11 0634A. [8947]

Mr. Roger Evans [holding answer 13 December 1996]: This is a matter for the President of the Independent Tribunal Service, Judge Bassingthwaighte, who will arrange for a written reply to be sent directly to the hon. Member.

Information Technology (Euro)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what tenders his Department has put out to convert its information technology systems to be euro-compliant; what are the cost and person hours required to convert the systems to handle the euro; and when he expects his Department's systems to be fully economic and monetary union compliant. [9456]

Mr. Burt: This Department and its agencies will need to assess the impact which a single currency, assumed to be starting on 1 January 1999, would have on their information systems, whether or not the United Kingdom decides to participate in the third stage of economic and monetary union.

Staff

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) permanent and (b) non-permanent staff there have been in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies of his Department in each year since 1992. [9627]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the tables.

1. Staff on a fixed term appointment are included as permanent staff. 2. Numbers of staff are expressed as full-time equivalents.
3. Child Support Agency was launched on 1 April 1993.
4. War Pensions Agency was launched on 1 April 1994.
5. Resettlement Agency ceased to exist on 31 March 1996.

Benefits Inquiry Line

Mr. Steinberg: To as the Secretary of State for Social Security what proposals he has to reinstate the benefits inquiry line. [8074]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is an operational matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Gerry Steinberg, dated 16 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what proposals he as to re-instate the Benefits Enquiry Line.

I assume your question refers to the Benefits Agency Freeline which closed in July of this year. There are currently no plans to re-instate this service. However, the Benefit Enquiry Line (BEL) for people with disabilities remains open and continues to operate as normal.

BEL is a confidential advice line providing general information about all Social Security benefits to people with disabilities, their carers and representatives. Help can also be given to complete some disability benefit claim forms.

Customers who require help or advice can contact BEL by telephoning 0800 882200. Deaf or hearing impaired customers who have access to a textphone can call on 0800 243355.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Child Benefit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 2 December, Official Report, column 501, how many new awards there were in each year since 1980 for (a) child benefit and (b) one-parent benefit; and what data are kept by his Department on the number of claims for these benefits which do not result in an award of benefit. [8192]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell [holding answer 10 December 1996]: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the tables.

New awards of CHB 1980–1995: number of children

1991	1,063
1992	1,025
1993	1,000
1994	992
1995	981

1. Data is not available for 1984 due to industrial action in that year.
2. The figures include claims made on the birth of a child, claims from families entering Great Britain and repeat claims following a period of disentitlement.
3. Figures based on a 4 per cent. sample to and including March 1994, thereafter a 1 per cent. sample.
4. There are no reliable data on the numbers of claims which do not result in award, and no information on the reasons for such disallowances.

1. Figures based on a 4 per cent. sample to and including March 1994, thereafter a 1 per cent. sample.
2. Data on one-parent benefit awards is not available before 1988.

3. There are no reliable data on the numbers of claims which do not result in an award, and no information on the reasons for such disallowances.

Income Support Computer System

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what information is conveyed to claimants about their claim by the income support computer system used by the Benefits Agency; [9036]

(2) what information is provided to claimants who are notified of a mortgage interest direct overpayment in respect of (i) why the overpayment occurred, (ii) how much was overpaid and (iii) when and how recovery will be effected; [9038]

(3) on whose responsibility changes are made to the income support computer system; what plans there are for such changes; and, in each case, what is their priority. [9037]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Andrew Smith, dated 16 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking what information is conveyed to claimants about their claim by the Income Support Computer System (ISCS) used by the BA; what information is provided to claimants who are notified of a mortgage interest direct overpayment in respect of (i) why the overpayment occurred, (ii) how much was overpaid and (iii) when and how recovery will be effected; on whose responsibility changes are made to the ISCS; what plans there are for such changes; and in each case, what is their priority.

The ISCS issues award notifications following an initial claim for benefit and on relevant changes of circumstances. These notifications inform the customer of the Adjudication Officer's decision, explain how the award has been calculated, the method of payment and their right of appeal.

The ISCS also notifies a customer when, on behalf of the Secretary of State, Income Support housing costs are to be deducted from the award, for direct payment to the mortgage lender, mortgage interest direct (MID).

In the event of a MID overpayment of £25.00 or less the amount is recovered from the Lender by adjusting the subsequent MID payments. The ISCS automatically issues notifications to the customer and the lender. The customer notification details how the overpayment has occurred, the amount overpaid and how recovery will be made, example at Annex A. Procedural guidance is available in the Income Support Guide for Housing Costs. I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library.

Overpayments of more than £25.00 are repaid by the lender in a lump sum. In these circumstances clerical notifications are issued to both the customer and the lender. Again, the customer notification details how the overpayment has occurred, the amount overpaid and how recovery will be made, example at Annex B.

Decisions on whether to commission changes to the BA computer systems are my responsibility and that of my management team. These decisions are based on the business requirement and analysis of alternative solutions within the capacity available. Priority is normally given to enhancements in respect of legislative changes and other unavoidable and essential work.

The ISCS work programme to the end of 1997 includes enhancements to allow payments of the new Child Maintenance Bonus; to transfer records of unemployed customers to the Jobseeker's Allowance Payment System; to introduce a payment card facility; to improve accounting data and to implement changes to One Parent Benefit and the Lone Parent Premium announced in the recent Budget. All these changes are regarded as essential.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Income Support Appeals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many income support appeals were heard by social security appeal tribunals in each of the last four quarters for which information is available; how many and what percentage were decided in the appellant's favour where the appellant (a) attended the hearing but was not represented, (b) was represented but did not attend, (c) attended and was represented and (d) did not attend and was not represented. [4801]

Mr. Roger Evans [pursuant to his reply, 19 November 1996, c. 523–26.]: The information that I gave regarding the figure and percentage of heard and decided appeals for the December 1995 quarter was incorrect. The information is set out in the table. The correct information is as follows:

Income Support Appeals		March 1995	June 1995	September 1995	December 1995
Total number heard and decided		11,674	9,583	10,720	8,620

Pensions (Cohabitees)

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the pension rights of unmarried co-habitating individuals whose partners have died, with particular reference to occupational pensions. [8181]

Mr. Heald: There is no legal obstacle to the payment of survivors' pensions to unmarried partners who are financially dependent on ex-members.

Under Inland Revenue rules, payments on a member's death may be made by a scheme to a surviving spouse or someone who was financially dependent on the member. Any question as to whether or not a person is financially dependent and/or entitled to a survivor's benefit is a matter for schemes to decide for themselves and will depend on the provisions made by the rules of the scheme.

Benefits (Durham)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in the Durham benefit area are currently in receipt of (a) family credit and (b) income support; and what is the total sum received. [8076]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. The family credit and income support computer systems record details of the total amount of benefit administered. It is not possible to give a breakdown to show the amount paid by individual benefit areas.

Statistics are available which give the number of families in receipt of family credit and income support by Benefits Agency district. The Durham area is dealt with by Durham North district which includes offices at Durham, Stanley, Chester-le-Street, Peterlee and Seaham and Durham South district which includes offices at Darlington and Bishop Auckland.

The most recent details available are for August 1996 and are as follows:

	Number of families in receipt of family credit	Number of families in receipt of income support
North Durham	6,213	28,547
South Durham	4,254	21,228
Total	10,467	49,775

Figures are provisional and subject to change.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the total cost of (a) income support and (b) family credit payments has been in each year since 1990 in Darlington. [9733]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

War Pensions

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many veterans have a disability assessed at more than 40 per cent. [8663]

Mr. Heald: Under the war pension scheme, awards may be made in respect of disablement due to service and in respect of disablement suffered by certain other groups, for example, by merchant seamen injured as a result of enemy action during the second world war. At the end of September 1996, the disablement of 106,572 war pensioners was assessed at 40 per cent. or more; 102,425 of these awards were in respect of disablement due to service in the armed forces.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what are the projected expenditure consequences arising from the implementation of each of the changes to war pensions outlined in the Budget; [8667]

(2) what savings will be made by ending the sending out of reminders to veterans to return claim forms or to seek an increase in entitlement. [8669]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table.

1. Estimates rounded to the nearest £0.5 million. Estimates of less than £0.25 million are given as negligible.
2. Figures may not sum to totals due to rounding.
3. All figures are estimates of savings and costs of the proposed changes designed to simplify and rationalise the war pensions scheme and which are subject to consultation with the Central Advisory Committee.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consultation he held with (a) the Chief Medical Officer and (b) the Royal National Institute for the Deaf on the medical evidence in relation to hearing loss of war pensioners; and if he will make a statement. [8720]

Mr. Heald: A copy of the texts of the medical advisor's address to the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions which describes the consultation that has been held on this issue and gives the medical references on which the change in medical opinion has been based have been placed in the Library.

Child Maintenance Bonus

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of (a) the cost and (b) the numbers expected to gain from the introduction of the child maintenance bonus. [8867]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: It is estimated that in the first year—1997–98—some 40,000 parents with care will qualify for a bonus at a cost of around £5 million.

Benefit Changes

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of (a) the changes in Government expenditure and (b) the number of people who will be affected by the proposals to change (i) rules on backdating claims, (ii) waiting days for the jobseeker's allowance, (iii) rules for war pensioners, (iv) disability living allowance claims from people between 65 and 66 years, (v) housing benefit, (vi) council tax benefit, (vii) lone parents' benefits and (viii) increases to non-dependant deductions. [8868]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the tables:

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the impact of recent benefit changes on the workload of the Benefits Agency. [9308]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is an operational matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Jim Cunningham, dated 16 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will make a statement on the impact of recent benefit changes on the workload of the Benefits Agency (BA).

There have been three main priorities for the BA in 1996/97, the delivery of Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) and Incapacity Benefit (IB), continuing our main business of calculating and paying benefits to safeguard benefit spending, and beginning the process of restructuring our business for the future to meet the challenge of the Department's Change Programme.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 287

SESSION 1996–97

9th December—18th December 1996

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
